POETRY.

EQUESTRIAN COURTSHIP.

It was a young maiden went forth to ride,
And there was a wooer to pace by her side;
His horse was so little, and hers so high,
He thought his angel was up in the sky.

His love was great, though his wit was small;
He bade her ride easy—and that was all.
The very horses began to neigh—
Because their betters had naught to say.

They rode by elm, and they rode by oak,
They rode by church yard, and then he spoke:
"My pretty maiden, if you'll agree,
You shall always amble through life with me."

The damsel answered him never a word,
But kicked the gray mare, and away she spurred.
The wooer still followed behind the jade,
And enjoyed—like a wooer—the dust she made.

They rode through moss, and they rode through moor—
The gallant behind and the lass before—
At last they came to a miry place,
And there the sad wooer gave up the chase.

Quoth he, "If my nag were better to ride
I'd follow her over the world so wide,
O, it is not my love that begins to fail,
But I've lost the last glimpse of the gray mare's tail!"

—Thomas Hood.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE ORPHANS' FRIEND.

We kept a little variety shop, Saint Margie, and I, the profit of which were quite as small as the wares were sold. But then, we had no rent to pay, owning the small, brown, old-fashion house in which we lived, and which looked strangely out of place among the stately looking modern dwellings that crowded up against it on either side, quite putting it out of countenance by their superior height and appearance.

Grandfather built it when the place was new and he a young man, and when all that brick and mortar were verdant fields and well-kept gardens, dotted here and there by houses as few and modest as his own.

He owned a large farm, and was considered a wealthy man for those days; but acre after acre had been sold until nothing was left except this house in which my father had been born, and which was the only inheritance of his children. But we made the most of it, Margie and I, as you will see.

I hardly think we should have dared to do such a think while father lived, who would have considered it a sort of sacrilege; but soon after his death we turned the front part of the house into a shop, with show windows, which opened out upon the street, in which to display the articles we kept for sale.

This was a matter of necessity rather than choice, it being all that I could do at home; and I could not leave Margie. Poor Margie was a cripple; she had received a fall when only four years old, and had never walked since.

She had been a great care to me for many a year, but never a burden. She was so thoughtful, patient, and cheerful that, in the event of our separation, I think I should have missed her just as much as she would me.

She was very useful too; lying all day on the lounge in our little sitting-room, her hands were never idle, crocheting tidies, mats, mittens and edging, and doing various kinds of fancy-work, for which I found sale in the shop, and though the price asked was only moderately in excess of the cost of material, it helped us not a little.

Margie kept all the accounts, and having a clearer head than I, and a knowledge, or rather intuition, of character that was wonderful, considering how secluded her life had been, I never thought of taking any step without consulting Margie.

We lived very quietly, having few acquaintances, and no near friend or relative—except John.

John was my lover, and no girl ever had one more kind and true. He was poor in worldly goods, but oh! so rich in goodness and manly worth.

He might have seemed plain to those who knew him not—I cannot tell how he looked to other eyes—but there was more than beauty to me in that frank, honest face, and in the big brown hands that were so strong and helpful.

We had been engaged ever since I was eighteen—I was twenty-three now—and no nearer to being married, as I could see, than we were five years before. But still we loved and hoped on. John had a widowed and infirm mother, and I Margie; and though she was anything but burdensome to me, I could not think of adding any further weight to the hands that were full already.

Trade not being very brisk during the summer, Margie and I decided to eke out our slender income by letting the room of our shop. It was low and the slant roof on one side and big chimney made it full of queer nooks and corners. The furniture was old, being some that grandfather had when he was married; but with the help of John, who would spare me an hour or two in the evening, I furnished it up so that it looked very well.

By dint of piecing and contriving, I covered the floor with a neat carpet, the bed and windows were draped with white, and some pretty prints hung upon the wall, and on the whole I was very well satisfied with the result of our labor.

When all was done, John wrote a notice, "Room to let. Inquire within." But though I placed it in the shop window where it could be seen plainly from the street, nearly three weeks passed, and we had only two applicants for the room, and from persons who only looked at it, and then went away.

One morning as I was dusting the counter and putting the shop to rights, I saw a queer-looking, oddly-dressed old man standing in front of the window, his eyes fixed upon the notice, and moving his lips slowly syllabifying each word.

He wore shoes with big buckles on them, and a snuff-colored coat, with short waist and long skirts, and which looked as if it might have been his grandfather's.

But the oddest thing about him was the long white hair that fell upon his shoulders, and the heavy beard of the same color which touched his breast. A broad brimmed hat completed his quaint, Quaker-like appearance.

The door being ajar, before I had time to lay aside my duster, he was at the counter.

He stared at me for some moments without speaking, and then pointing to the notice with his cane said:

"Wilt thee let me look at it?"

Inwardly hoping that this application would not share the fate of those that had preceded it, I led the way up stairs.

To my great relief, our prospective lodger, far from objecting to the sloping roof, and old-fashioned furniture seemed to regard them with positive feelings of interest and admiration.

"It is like the chamber I used to sleep in when I was a boy," he said as he looked around, and speaking more to himself than to me.

As I wanted Margie to see him before he decided, I took him down through the sitting room where she lay.

"This gentleman thinks of taking our room, sister," I said as she glanced up at us.

"If within my means," interposed the stranger. "I am a poor man."

Margie's clear, soft, penetrating eyes were quietly reading the face of the speaker. What she seemed satisfactory, for she nodded in reply to my questioning look.

In spite of his threadbare apparel, he looked so thoroughly respectable that I was half ashamed of the question I was compelled to put:

"I suppose you have references, sir?"

"No; all are dead who might speak for me if they could. You will have to trust."

I looked at Margie again, who, giving me another nod, said:

"Perhaps the gentleman will mention what he feels able to pay?"

The stranger did so, adding:

"I am poor, and cannot pay any more."

The sum named, though not large, was more than what we were intending to ask, as I told him.

The old man frowned and shook his head.

"Thee shouldn't have told me that. I have half a mind to give thee no more."

Then counting out upon the table the amount he had stated, he pushed it toward me, adding:

"My name is Thomas. I will be here to-morrow morning with all my traps."

The traps mentioned consisted of an old-fashioned hair trunk, and a large chest, the latter being mainly filled with books.

We were not long in finding out that our lodger was very odd, though his oddities were of the most innocent and harmless nature.

He asked me to substitute a patchwork quilt for the white counterpane on his bed; and spent a whole day rummaging auction rooms to find some old-fashioned chintz to take the place of the pretty muslin curtains on which I had spent so much time and labor. I had taken a rocker for him from the sitting-room, but spying, one day, an old leather bottomed chair that had belonged to my grandfather, he asked me to exchange with him, which I was very glad to do.

Not long after, a chest of drawers, that was my grandfather's, found its way back to its old place, together with the quaint brass-mounted mirror that always hung over it.

So that at last, the room looked very much as it did before we arranged it with so much care and labor.

John and I had quite a laugh over it but so long as it suited its present occupant, we did not mind.

It was Margie who first suggested that we invite him to take tea with us one day when we had some unusual delicacy—early strawberries, I think.

"He must be very lonely poor man!" said my gentle-hearted sister. "Perhaps he doesn't have enough to eat! He spoke about being poor, you know."

After this he dropped in occasionally in the evening, bringing some new magazine or paper, and reading to us as we sat at work. Finally, it became an established custom with him to take tea with us twice, and sometimes three times a week; frequently inviting himself, though we always knew he was coming by the advent of the market boy with a liberal supply of provisions, all of the best quality.

This troubled Margie's tender conscience, and she remonstrated with him one day.

"It is wrong," he said, with a grave shake of the head. "I'm a poor man, and ought to be prudent."

He and John were apparently on the best of terms, yet he was always finding fault with him to me.

"To think of, his taking the entire charge of his mother, when she had other children, and sending money to his brother's widow!" he said to me one day.

Now, I could never endure the slightest reflection upon John, and I defended him with a spirit and indignation that seemed to amuse Mr. Thomas not a little.

"With thy pretty face and ways thee ought to do better, Ruth," he resumed, when I paused for want of breath. "Not but what John is good enough, but he's poor. I've heard that thee refused Mr. Hart, who is worth a million. What made the do such a foolish thing as that, child?"

"Because I didn't love Mr. Hart; and I do love John."

The silence that followed made me glance up at my companion, who had turned towards the door. It was growing dusk, and the face was partly averted, but I was almost sure that the eyes were full of tears.

In the early spring he was knocked down by a runaway horse, sustaining some internal injury from which he never recovered.

John and I took turns in nursing him; it was pleasant, afterwards, to remember that he wanted for nothing.

John, Margie and I were there. He had been lying in a stupor for some hours; now he roused himself and began to talk, startling us not a little by his strange expression.

"I was born in this room," he said, glancing around; "and I shall die here."

Thinking his mind was wandering, I laid my hand gently on his.

"Thee has thy mother's name, Ruth, and her kind heart as well, but thy eyes are like thy father's. He has been here, thank me for providing for his orphan girls. This was our room when we were boys. Dear old Joe! before the drawing of another day we shall meet."

John and I looked at each other in wondering awe. Two years ago I had stood by my father's dying bed. Was it the same mysterious shadow that made their faces look so strangely like!

"Thy father and I were brothers. Did he never speak to thee of his brother Tom, who forsook home and country because a girl, as false as fair, broke her plighted troth to wed a richer suitor? You have both been very kind to the poor old man who came to you a stranger. I have not forgotten it, as the papers in my desk will show."

An examination of the papers alluded to not only proved that my poor uncle spoke truly, but that he died in the possession of bonds and stock to the amount of twenty thousand dollars "to be divided equally"—so ran the few lines that comprised his will—"between his two nieces, Ruth and Margaret Gray."

Of course, John and I married. His mother and Margie live with us, and a happier home it would be hard to find.

We will never turn traitor to the country which establishes free schools and churches and treats all its citizens on a footing of perfect equality—the republic this side of the ocean.

THE CASHIER'S DAUGHTER.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

"No; I refuse."

"Reflect a moment, Myrtle, I beseech you! You hold my life and happiness in your hands;" and the voice of Adelbert Thompkins trembled as he spoke these words with an earnestness that forbade, even for an instant, and doubtless as to their being the outpourings of his heart.

Myrtle Mehaffy was a beautiful girl, just budding into sweet womanhood and Adelbert loved here dearly. They had wandered together this summer afternoon from the matinee to the street car, and he had asked her to be his wife. It was in answer to this question—the earnest appeal of a man whose whole nature was wrapped up in a passion he could neither control nor cast aside—that Myrtle had spoken the words with which our story opens. She had watched him closely during an acquaintance of nearly two years and noticed with pain how he sedulously avoided candy stores and ice cream saloons. "I can never marry a man," she had said to her mother one day, "who shies at the sight of a candy story like a country horse at a fire engine." And when the expected avowal came she had kept her word.

Adelbert turned around in a dazed sort of way after Myrtle had rejected him and walked swiftly toward the dry goods store which had been so fortunate as to secure his services.

All the afternoon Adelbert stood moodily behind the ribbon counter, thinking of how he should revenge himself on the naughty girl who had wrecked his happiness. At precisely 4½ o'clock a fierce joy lighted up his countenance, and putting on his hat he left the store.

* * * * * * *

As the bells of St. Agnes church were striking 9, a young man sprang lightly up the steps of a magnificent residence and was soon seated in the sumptuously furnished parlor. The proprietor of the house, a benevolent looking old gentleman, entered the room. 'Do you wish to see me?' he said to Adelbert Tompkins—for it was he who had sprung lightly up the steps.

'Yes,' he replied, 'you are the person I seek.'

'What would you,' said the old gentleman.

'You are the cashier in the —— Bank, I believe?' said the young man.

'I am.'

'You have been stealing the concern's money. Do not deceive me. You are a cashier; 'tis enough. Give me $20,000 or I will expose you and ruin your life. Having heard the twitter, you can choose your own course.'

For an instant the cashier did not move, and then, going to an elegant escritoire which stood in a corner of the room, he wrote a check for $50,000, certified it, and handed the piece of paper, now a fortune, to the youth.

"I have but one favor to ask," he said, 'and that is that you will marry my daughter. I wouldn't like to let as sure a thing as you go out of the family. She has $100,000 in her own right and when I am dead and the bank directors are in jail on account of my bookkeeping. It will suffice to keep you in comfort.'

* * * * * * *

Two months later Myrtle Mehaffy, the cashier's only child, became Adelbert's bonny bride. One child, a blue-eyed boy with golden hair, has blessed the union, and he sits on his grandfather's knee in front of the fire and asks, in his innocent, childish way if 'papa isn't a smart man,' the old gentleman kisses him fondly, and says in soft, low tones:

"You're singing on the right key now, sonny."

THE MYSTERIOUS.

He is a man with a light beaver overcoat on. He drives a white horse and top buggy, and all of a sudden he stops in the middle of the street and looks fixedly at his horse. In two minutes fifty people line the curbstone.

"What's the matter?"

"Balky."

A man steps out to seize the bridle and start the horse, but the driver shakes his head and motions him away.

"I'll bet he's an ugly brute."

"Of course he is. Look at that ugly eye of his!"

The crowd has now been increased by fifty, and several vehicles have stopped.

"Anybody hurt?"

"No; balky horse."

"Why doesn't some one whisper in his ear?"

Four men stepped out to give advice, but they are hastily motioned back, and a livery stable man in the crowd observes:

"If that horse doesn't kill two or three men here I shall be much mistaken."

Three minutes more and the crowd numbers 200. The man with the gray horse looks up and down the street, braces his feet, takes a firm grip on the lines and softly says:

"Come, Peter."

And Peter drops his head, dangles his ears, and moves off as slowly and softly as a river of grease.

"What was it?" calls a man who has run four blocks and is puffing like a whale.

But there is no one to answer him. The crowd has dissolved like a handful of sugar in a barrel of water. It is very mysterious, and the crowd doesn't enjoy the climax at all.

A PERSISTENT GIMLET MAN.

"I should like to sell you a gimlet," said a careworn looking man, as he walked into an office the other day.

"We have no use for one," replied the cashier.

"But you should always look into the misty future," went on the fiend, demuredly. "Next winter you will want to make holes in your boot heels, so you can get your skates on."

"I use club skates—no straps required."

"You may want to screw some boards together some time. The old-fashioned method of driving the screws in with a hammer is pernicious, as it deteriorates the tenacity of the fangs of the screws, as it were."

"Nothing to-day, sir."

"This gimlet also acts as a cork screw."

"I don't want it."

"It may be used as a tack hammer, a cigar holder and a tooth brush."

"I don't want it."

"It has an eraser, a pen, an inkstand, a table for computing compound interest and a lunch box attachment."

"Don't want it."

"I know you don't; you're one of those mean men that won't buy a gimlet unless it has a restaurant and a trip to Europe and an Italian opera company attached. You are the kind of a man that would live near an electric light to save a gas bill."

And the peddler walked out with his mental plumb on the perpendicular.

HE WAS A SQUARE MAN.

Yesterday morning a tall young man of twenty landed at the Union depot with a bundle under his arm, and after three or four minutes spent in getting his bearings he walked up Jefferson avenue and turned into a clothing store.

'Do you wish to try on some coats and vests for a dollar?' asked the proprietor as he rushed from behind the counter.

'No, I guess not. Do you deal on the square?'

'My frent, dot is exactly vot I does. I vas so square dot I lose $3,000 last year. Can I sell you an ofercoat for ten dollar?'

'No, I guess not. Here is an overcoat that I bought four weeks ago.'

'Bought of me?'

'Yes, I think you are the man. When I got it home we found that it was moth-eaten. I can pick it to pieces in a dozen places,' he said.

'Is dot possible! Und how much you pay?'

'Eight dollars.'

'My stars! And vhat you want now, my child?'

'I want my money back.'

'Vhell—vhell. My frent, I am sorry for you. You seem like an honest boy. It vhas too bad.'

'Yes, it was a swindle, and I want my money back.'

'Dear me, but I vish you vhas here yesterday! Let me explain to you. You bought dot coat four weeks ago?'

'Yes.'

'Vhell, I had sold out to my cousin Philip about one day before. Philip is not a square man.'

'What have I got to do with Philip?' asked the young man.

'Let me explain. In dree days Philip makes assignment to my brudder Louis. Dot Louis is a feedle off. He would sheat your eye-teeth away from you.'

'Yes, but I haven't anything to do with Louis.'

'Let me explain, my schild. Louis kept der place a week, und he gif a shattel mortgage to my fadder-in-law, and vhas bounced out.'

'I don't know anything about that.'

'Let me explain. My fadder-in-law vas took mit a fit and died, and he leaf dis place to my wife. My wife vhas gone to Europe for two years, and she leaf me as agent. Now you see how it was. I gannot tell you who sold you dot coat. Maybe it vhas Philip, maybe Louis, maybe my fadder-in-law. It couldn't haf been me for I vhas in Shikago. If you haf dot coat I vhill write to my wife. She is square, shust like me, and maybe she writes back dot you can take a linen duster and two white vests and call it all right.'

'This is a sneaking swindle,' exclaimed the young man.

'Maybe it vhas. Philip was a great big liar.'

'I'll go to the police!'

'Vhell, dot is all right; maybe der police vhill help me to catch Louis. I shust found oudt last night dot he cut all der hind buttons off all der coats in der store before he left.'

'If you'll step out doors I'll mash you, you rascal.'

'Vhell I like to oblige, but you see I vhas only agent for my wife.'

'Well, you'll hear from me again, and don't you forget it,' said the victim, as he went out.

'I hope so—I hope so. I like to make it all right. I vhas only agent for my wife, but I feel so square dot I take dot coat back for dree dollars if you want to trade it out in paper collars.'

LITTLE BILLY'S MEAN TRICK.

"Where is your little brother Billy?" asked an Austin Sunday School teacher of little Johnny Spilkins.

"He is home in bed. He is too sick to come out, and I'm glad of it," responded Johnny.

"Why do you speak so unkindly of Billy?"

"Because he played me a mean trick."

"What was it?"

"Billy told me that ma said the boy that eat the most meat for dinner should have the biggest piece of watermelon. I beat Billy all to pieces eating meat. He didn't hardly eat any meat, and when the watermelon came on I—boo hoo—had eaten so much meat that I had no room for the melon, and Billy, who hadn't eaten any meat hardly, ate up nearly the whole watermelon, and now he is sick, and I'm so glad it ain't me."

POSTSCRIPT.

According to Washington despatches received as we go to press, the President has withdrawn the nomination of Mr. E. B. Pope for the office of Postmaster of Plainfield.

VOX POPULI.

If Congress, in re-assembling after the holidays, would totally ignore partisan intrigue and lobby corruption, and go to work with business energy and foresight on matters of practical use to the country at large, great good might be accomplished and much harm prevented.

There are certain things which the public welfare demands should be done, and that speedily and aright.

The people want

A sensible revision of the tariff, not for prohibition to suit the greed of pampered monopolists on one hand, nor for unchecked license to please the whim of free-traders on the other, but a tariff impartially framed in the interest of adequate revenue and just protection to every legitimate pursuit and enterprise, and which shall not wrong any industries for the purpose of conferring special profit on others, a tariff alike friendly to the manufacturer and the farmer, the miner and sailor, the mechanic, merchant, artisan and laborer.

The people want

A system of revenue that will annually produce sufficient to meet the expenses of a government economically and honestly administered, provide for interest on the public debt and the redemption of a moderate per-centage of its principal, without accumulating in the treasury the dangerous temptation of a large surplus, and for that end, they require that internal taxes shall be carefully reviewed and lowered.

The people want

The national debt funded at three per cent., as the Democratic majority in the last Congress enacted, but which John Sherman and Company, behind a White House screen, vetoed, and thereby saddled millions of additional public expense upon the country.

The people want

A sound revival of our once flourishing ocean commerce, and the opening and enlarging of foreign markets for American products of every kind, and they view with well grounded suspicion the absurd official proposition to squander fifty million dollars or more in the construction and equipment of naval vessels, when our flag, as a commercial emblem, has through neglect almost vanished from the sea.

The people want

Rigid integrity and capability in all public offices, if necessary made obligatory by law, not for a Republican administration to commission as its agents other than political Republicans, or a Democratic one other than Democrats, but that every individual appointee, from the highest position to the lowest, shall possess ability to perform assigned duty, and a personal reputation for integrity and morality that will stand the severest scrutiny where he is best known.

Such are some things the people want. There are many others.

We hope Congress will turn a deaf ear to all voices other than those of the honest masses, whose patriotism estimates the public weal of far greater value than sordid private gain.

Fiedler, Democrat, was elected by a majority of 588 votes. The House of Assembly will now stand—Democrats, 31; Republicans, 28, and one Independent, who will vote with the Republicans.

LOCAL ANNEX.

M. E. Sunday School.

The Christmas entertainment of this School took place Thursday night, Dec. 29th. Notwithstanding the gloomy aspect of the weather, the school had a "full house." The members of the "Infant class" were attended to in the afternoon and the large portion of the school in the evening. Two large Christmas Trees occupied a prominent place on the platform, while to the left were seated the orchestra—piano, cornet and violin—which discoursed some good music during the evening. After a Christmas song, the Rev. J. M. Meeker, led in prayer, after which, the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut was introduced as "the Orator of the evening." This title was regarded as a huge joke by the respondent, who, nevertheless made a neat little speech on three words or sentences commencing with the letter "G" "Good News," "Good Will" and "Gratitude." This was followed by a short address by the Pastor —Rev. Mr. Stockton. Mr. James McGee was then called for and as he stepped forward it was plain to be seen that there was "something on his mind." After speaking briefly upon the significance of the occasion, he called for the sexton, Mr. Maynard, and after a prolonged search he was ushered into the room. He looked around, surveying everything therein as though thinking perhaps, a window was to be raised or lowered, or a gas pipe had bursted; but being directed to do so, advanced to the front of the desk, where Mr. McGee handed him a very suspicious white envelope, supposed to contain something substantial, at the same time referring to the school's appreciation of his past services, etc. The sexton, although taken quite by surprise, made a speech, which though very brief, was loudly applauded. He said "he hoped to do better, etc., than in the past." The next victim was the organist of the church who also takes quite an interest in the musical department of the Sunday School; he was presented with a handsome book, and attempted to rehearse the sexton's speech, but stopped short—probably for conscience sake—but was loudly applauded, nevertheless.

Rev'ds Mr. Stockton and Meeker with the Superintendent of the School, Mr. Jas. W. Jackson, and Mr. Wendell, Supt. of the Infant Department, were "called up" and presented with appropriate testimonials of esteem. Half a dozen male teachers and officers were then summoned to an adjoining room by the Superintendents, and assigned to the work of distributing several cart-loads—more or less—of cake, lemonade, oranges, and boxes of candy. Accompanying the latter was a roll of figured paper which was found to contain some condensed "4th of July," i. e., a narrow strip of doubled-up paper, with a mischievous fire-cracker in the middle. By pulling both ends of the paper the "thing" would go off, and it was particularly demonstrated that four hundred of them would make quite a "racket." In addition to the fire-cracker, this roll contained a hat, cap, hood, or some other kind of a "kiver" of the most interesting and unique design. The scene in the rooms by this time was one of animation and enjoyment, viewed from any stand-point in the rooms—or viewed by those who flattened their noses against the windows outside. Everything passed off satisfactory to all who attended.

Churchill's Readings.

The Deliber Society have secured Mr. J. W. Churchill, of Andover, Mass., to give the fourth annual installment of Lectures and select Readings. Mr. Churchill needs no recommendation to the citizens of Plainfield; he is probably as well and as favorably known here as any lecturer or reader that has appeared in Plainfield in years. Full particulars will appear later, when we will be better able to speak more extensively of the undoubted success the Society is preparing.

The Next Entertainment.

On Thursday evening of next week, the fifth of the Y. M. C. A. Course of Entertainments will be given in the M. E. Church, and the artist selected to sustain the interest of the occasion is ably calculated so to do. On the evening of the 3d of last March, Miss Nella F. Brown made her first appearance before the Plainfield public, and at that time satisfactorily proved herself a reader of exceptional talent and ability. Her success at the time was remarkable and sincerely flattering; so much so that Miss Brown must return to our city in just expectation of being received with sincere appreciation. We can recommend no greater treat than an evening spent in listening to that lady's rendition of a judiciously selected programme of popular compositions.

May we hope for a similar addition to the evening's entertainment as was experienced upon the last occasion of Miss Brown's appearance, when Messrs. Clark W. Banks and David Lyon contributed able performances on the piano and organ.

Society Gossip.

The Parlor Circle will hold its next sociable on the evening of the 12th inst., at the residence of a member not yet decided on.

The Clinton Society will be given a sociable at the residence of Mr. J. H. Worth, No. 41 Grove street, North Plainfield, on Tuesday evening of next week.

A number of Plainfield ladies and gentlemen recently attended an informal but enjoyable evening company at the residence of Miss Lillie Underhill, on 37th street, N. Y. city.

The Bric-a-Brac social club held, last night, at the residence of Miss Jean Murray on Central avenue, the first Masquerade of the season. The occasion was a most recherche affair, and the costumes as enchanting and becoming as they were mystifying.

A delegation of the Seventh Day Society's members attended a silver-wedding recently, of the real old-fashioned style. The stage-ride there and back of a number of the guests, was not the least pleasurable portion of the evening's enjoyment.

Upon the occasion of the debut of a Grove street young lady, which interesting event occurred on Thursday evening of last week, the dresses worn by the elite of the city were unusually elegant. The wife of a young Councilman of 7th street appeared in a pale blue silk exquisitely hand-painted, which shared the general admiration with a white silk costume artistically ornamented in the same manner, and worn by a prospective bride of Crescent avenue.

We would announce to our patrons and the public that we have doubled our manufacturing facilities during the past three months, and are prepared to lay before our customers this Fall a line of the CHOICEST STYLES OF GARMENTS, such as have never before been displayed in Newark. They have been cut from selected styles of Harris Rock, Belle Air, Lippitt and American Mills Cassimeres and Overcoatings, and finished in a superior manner.
We would particularly announce to the young men of our city and vicinity that we have secured from some of the leading manufacturers their hand loom samples, from which they have sold the production of their mills for this season at prices from 75c. to $1 per yard below the regular prices. Some of these samples we shall cut into suits, and our special style of Ulsteret. These garments must meet your approval, as we can sell at a profit where others must sell at cost to compete with us. We shall use some of these goods in Children's Suits from 4 to 9 years, and our Children's Essex Ulsterets, from 4 to 9 years, are a bargain. There are no two patterns alike, and you will not feel that you have to uniform your boys. We cut small lots in all our choice goods, and give our customers the benefit of a large assortment.
We have standard styles of Dress Suits and Semi-Dress Suits and Overcoats, cut in all the best makes of goods. Some of our low priced Suits and Overcoats cannot be made for the price to-day. To the Public.

Owing to the prevalence of the dread disease, small pox, in many cities along the line of many of our railroads, the precaution of vaccination is deemed very important. The Board of health would call the attention of the public to the facts above stated—and those having children who have never been vaccinated should do so without delay, and others should have it renewed.

By order of the Board of Health,
H. H. LOWRIE, M. D.
Jan. 1st, 1882. Secretary.

THE adjourned meeting of the friends of temperance and good-order in this city, will be held at the Seventh Day Baptist church on Tuesday evening next.

ON the afternoon of Monday last, Mr. Michael McVoy, an old resident of this city, died at his residence of inflammation of the bowels, in the sixty-third year of his age.

ON Wednesday afternoon the children of the Band of Hope were generously and happily entertained at the Holly Tree Inn in a manner calculated to be long remembered with pleasure.

ONE year ago North Plainfield was in quite a state of excitement over the death of George Harrison under circumstances that at first looked like murder but subsequently proved to be suicide.

WHILE a horse, owned by Constable Amos Moffet, was being driven through Front street on New Year's day, the animal dropped dead in front of Coriell's meat market. Old age was the cause of death.

THE January term of the Union County Courts convened on Tuesday last, Judge Van Syckle presiding. The following are the Grand Jurors from Plainfield: James E. Martine, Martin M. Thorn and John Simpson.

IN giving credit to the Committee in charge of the Saengerbund's Christmas festivities, we neglected to mention the name of Mr. Charles Maas, the popular President of the society, who greatly assisted the success of the entertainment.

ABBEY'S Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. gave an entertainment at Van Deventer Hall on Thursday evening of last week, which in spite of the disadvantages of a contracted stage, was quite an excellent affair. The blood-hounds and educated donkey, were worthy additions to the popular drama.

THE Somerset Messenger has changed hands, Mr. C. M. Jameson, the proprietor, having sold the establishment to Mr. J. H. Mattison, of New Brunswick. While regretting the withdrawal of Bro. THE Mother Goose and Kate Greenaway Entertainment to be given at VanDeventer Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings of next week, promises to be worthy of the patronage of all. It will consist of tableaux, recitations, nursery rhymes, Mother Goose march, etc., all under the able supervision of the ladies of the Congregational church. A matinee will be given on Saturday (the 14th) at 3 o'clock p. m.

ONE of the most successful evenings of dance and sociability was that given in St. Mary's Hall on Wednesday evening for the enlargement of the fund to be devoted to furnishing the new rectory of the church. The committee in charge deserve great credit for its able management of the affair, and we regret that the modesty of its members prevents our individual mention. The music was all that could be desired, the attendance was large and great financial result was undoubtedly achieved.

SOME of the many wonderful human marvels and attractions of Bunnell's New York museum, that had been placed "on the road" by that manager to make room at his headquarters for other curiosities visited our city on Monday and Tuesday. Performances were given during the afternoons and evenings, which were at*tended by large audiences that were* most satisfactorily entertained. The two-headed girl, the midgets, clever Carroll, Whistow and others combined in giving an unexcelled programme of interest.

THE great ball of the season is to be that of Gazelle Hose Co., at Van Deventer Hall, on Thursday evening next. The Committee in charge is Messrs. Charles Johnson, James Love, John Casey, Fred. Clark and George Demarest, all experienced in like affairs and sure to carry out the arrangements most satisfactorily. The music will be under the able leadership of Prof. Franze, and the new floor to be laid will add to the enjoyment of the dance. Seats in the gallery are to be reserved for spectators free of extra charge.

THE pastors of our city with the exception of the Episcopal and colored, have arranged a universal exchange of pulpits for next Sunday. The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond will preach in the Seventh Day church on Saturday, and the following is the order for the next day: First Baptist, Rev. J. C. Bliss; Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Rev. A. H. Humorous Character Delineation.

During the afternoon and evening of Saturday next at 2:30 and 7:30 o'clock p. m., Mr. Warren Richards the well-known delineator of character comicalities, will give entertainments of unusual interest and enjoyment at VanDeventer Hall. The flattering criticisms of the press throughout the sections in which this artist has publicly appeared, are exceptionally favorable and mark him as possessing unusual talent and ability. The afternoon admission for children will be 10 cents, and for adults 25 cents. In the evening 25 cents for all, with reserved seats at 15 cents extra, which may be secured at Dunham & Miller's pharmacy.

Common Council Proceedings.

THURSDAY EV'G, Dec. 29, 1881.

The Council met in special meeting, by call of the President at 7:45 p. m. Present—President Whiton and Messrs. Gilbert, Tracy, Tyler, H. Smith, Guion, Waring, A. Smith and Finch. Absent—Messrs. Darling and Hamilton.

The President stated the object of the meeting to be to consider further such ordinances as were before the Council.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the "Ordinance entitled an Ordinance to amend an Ordinance for the correction of certain nuisances" be read the third time. Carried, all aye.

Upon the completion of its reading by the Clerk, Mr. Gilbert moved that the ordinance be passed. Carried by the same vote.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the "Ordinance relating to the Treasurer of the City" have its third reading. Carried, all aye, and read by the Clerk.

Mr. Finch asked the Chairman of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances, whether in his opinion the Council had a legal right to provide that warrants of the City Treasurer for the payment of money should be countersigned by the City Clerk. He supposed that the Treasurer being elected by the people was therewith endowed with power to disburse their money upon warrants signed by himself.

Mr. Tyler was of the opinion that the Council could so order and moved that the ordinance be passed. Carried, Mr. A. Smith voting nay.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Council met in adjourned meeting at 8:15 p. m. Present—President Whiton and Messrs. Gilbert, Tracy, Tyler, H. Smith, Guion, Waring, A. Smith, Finch, Hamilton and Darling. Absent—none.

The President before proceeding, invited the members of the next Council that were in the room, to take seats inside the railing.

Mr. A. Smith, as Chairman of the special committee appointed to examine the books of the City Collector, presented the following report, which on motion of Mr. Tyler was received and the Committee discharged.

To the Hon. the Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

"Your Committee appointed to examine the books and accounts of the Collector of Taxes beg to report that the time which has elapsed since the matter was placed in their hands has not been sufficient to enable them to make as complete and thorough an examination as the case demands, owing to the fact that they have been compelled to consult their business engagements, as well as the convenience of the Collector in arranging the time to devote to this purpose.

The Committee have devoted several half days to the work and are prepared to submit only the result of a partial examination covering the years 1878, 1879, 1880, and the figures herewith presented are based entirely upon the correctness of the entries in the Collector's books. In order to determine definitely without reference to the Collector as to the correctness of his records, it will be necessary to make a demand upon each of the parties appearing to be delinquent, and the claim against each disproved or confirmed. In this way it will be possible to obtain a starting point concerning the correctness of which there can be no doubt. This will necessitate much time and labor, and your Committee respectfully suggests in view of the importance of the matter that a thorough examination be made by an expert with power to devote as much time as is required, and to make an examination that will cover a period of from six to ten years. Your Committee suggests this course as an act of simple justice to all parties concerned.

The following figures will present the result of the Committee's investigation so far as it has gone:

Total amount of Tax Levy of 1878, State and County Taxes	$22,339 88
1879 " " " "	21,994 [illegible]
1880 " " " "	21,389 27
Total		$67,[illegible]
Amount appearing to be delinquent as per Collector's Books," 1878	$6,[illegible]
1879	6,[illegible]
1880	7,[illegible] 74	20,[illegible]
Amount collected for '78, '79 and '80		$76,[illegible]
Amount of interest and costs reported paid		[illegible]
Total amount to be accounted for		$76,[illegible]
Amount paid County Collector for 1878	$17,[illegible] 77
1879	21,[illegible]
1880	22,[illegible]	72,[illegible] 77
Balance		$ 4,[illegible] 21
Am't transferred to City Treasurer		1,[illegible]
Amount in hands of Collector		$ 3,[illegible]

This amount of $3,599.96 has been retained by the Collector to pay fees claimed to be due to the Collector and Assessor for assessing and collecting State and County taxes for the years 1878, 1879, 1880, as set forth in the following statement:

Am't retained for	Collector.	Assessor.
1878	$[illegible]	$[illegible]
1879	[illegible]	[illegible]
1880	772 92	480 41
	$2,[illegible] 43	$1,[illegible]

The explanation given by the Collector for pursuing this course is that having performed the duties of his office and being entitled by law to compensation for the same, and having presented his claim to the Councils of 1878, 1879 and 1880 and no action having been taken thereon by either of said Councils, he felt justified in retaining the amount claimed to be due from funds in his hands. For the same reasons he claims to have been justified in retaining the amount claimed to be due the Assessor.

The bills of the Collector and Assessor which have been referred to your Committee and which are returned herewith show the basis upon which the charges for compensation have been made. An examination of the various statutes relating to the subject, satisfies us however, that there is at least grave doubt as to the correctness of the principle proceeded upon in making up the charges of the Assessor and Collector. Your Committee therefore recommend that the Collector be required to pay to the City Treasurer the amount so retained by him in order that the correctness of his and the Assessor's claims for compensation may be inquired into in the regular way.

Your Committee have ascertained that the Collector while in some instances charging interest and costs on delinquencies as required by law, in other cases has received delinquent payments without interest or penalties. Time has not permitted so thorough an examination as would enable us to state the amount so remitted, but we have no doubt that in his action the Collector felt that he was consulting the public interest—his main object being to collect the tax. Since the passage of a resolution by the Common Council requiring the Collector to demand interest and costs from delinquents, we are informed by him he has been careful to exact the same in every instance.

Your Committee, in closing, respectfully suggests that in future regular monthly reports be rendered by the Collector to the Common Council, showing amounts collected in the different classes of taxes. Amounts of interest collected, amounts of taxes delinquent in proper divisions as to different funds and years. Such reports and those of the City Treasurer should tally, and in the reports of these two officers taken together the whole current tax and financial business can be plainly set forth each month for the information of the tax payers."

SIGNED: A. H. SMITH,
H. SMITH,
A. GILBERT.

Mr. H. Smith from Aud. Com., reported correct the claims of Courtlandt Parker, $100; Assignee of E. A. Vermeule, 7.33; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Co., 127.62; A. Vanderbeek, 50; Mrs. Posey, 3; A. M. Runyon, 15; D. Hand, 104; Mrs. Wilkins, 6; Elizabeth Poor Overseer, 26.25 and Baskingridge Poor Overseer, 54. Warrants ordered drawn. All voting aye.

By the same the claims of the Plainfield Relief Association for supplies furnished the City's poor to the amount of $66. The Committee reported that each was correct except as to the amount of $5.37 which was for crackers, molasses, butter, onions and Indian meal—articles not allowed by the ordinance relating to the matter. It, however, recommended that the claim be paid in full as not settled.

Upon a motion to that effect being made, Mr. Tracy said that he felt it an unpleasant task to criticise any bill of so worthy an organization as the Plainfield Relief Association, but as certain supplies had been furnished in violation of the City's ordinance, he would prefer to pay for such himself rather than vote for their settlement by the city.

Mr. Gilbert stated he did not favor the policy of being just to the city at the expense of its individual creditors. He thought it impossible to strictly obey at all times both the spirit and the letter of the law, and was forced to recognize the fact that the ladies of the Relief Association had exercised a care for the paupers of the city, which had in the past year saved it much money. They came in contact directly and personally with the beneficiaries and find it absolutely necessary in some cases to supply articles that may not be allowed by the ordinance. There are other matters which the ordinance does not cover, but in dealing with which a just discretion has been allowed. There is no provision or authority for the burying of a pauper, yet no objection has been or should be raised against such action. The speaker closed his remarks by saying he should vote to pay the claim in full—obeying the spirit, if not the letter of the law.

Mr. Tracy replied that in relation to the expense and act of pauper burial, the ordinance did not profess to regulate that—it was authorized by the laws of the State. The ordinance in question was formed to govern the granting of supplies to the poor of the city and he thought he had no right to vote away the City's monies in violation of the City's laws.

A vote being taken, a warrant was ordered drawn for the full amount; Messrs. Finch, Tracy, Waring and Whiton voting nay.

The same Committee returned the claim of J. T. Pierson, grocer, Westfield, N. J., without its approval, as the supplies had not been ordered. Received and filed.

Mr. Darling from Finance Committee, reported in relation to the suggestions regarding the question of taxes, contained in the Mayor's message and the claim of the City against Mr. Jas. E. Martine, that certain action in both matters was being taken.

Mr. Waring from Lamps Com., reported that it had granted the applications of W. P. Scott and others to erect a lamp-post on Franklin Place, of A. J. Huff to move his frame wheel-wright shop on Fourth street and of J. R. France to connect his buildings on Sycamore street by a roof. Report received and filed.

Mr. Tyler from Laws Com., reported back the Hack ordinance referred to it, with the recommendation that it be handed to the Council of '82. Recommendation adopted.

Mr. Hamilton from Police Com., reported correct the claims of C. W. Dodd, $58.34; R. Randolph, $34.84; M. Bird, $62.50; M. Conway, $2.75; W. Addis, $4.25; Geo. Henry, $2; G. Rockfellow, $20.76 and W. Addis, $4.25. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Guion from Printing Com., reported correct the claims of Runyon & Leonard, $89.30 and W. L. Force & Bro., $111.60. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. A. Smith from Salaries Com., as correct the claims of Janitor, City Clerk and election officers excepting those of W. W. Coriell, $15; J. O'Neil, $15 and T. J. Gillies, $15. These latter being each $5 in excess of the customary charge were ordered returned for correction. Others ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Tracy from Streets Com., reported correct the claims of Street Commissioner Hand $155.24 and D. H. Manning $100. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

On motion of Mr. Gilbert the rules were suspended to allow him to report from the Alms Com., as correct the claims of George Mehl, $103; D. J. Boice, $36.55; T. J. Pruden, $80; D. Hand, $37.64 and W. C. Ayres, $15. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Tracy offered and moved the adoption of a resolution to the effect that the City Collector be requested to pay over to the City Treasurer all sums retained by him from State and County taxes for fees alleged to be due him for the collection of State and County taxes, and all sums retained by him for fees alleged to be due the Assessor for the assessing of the same.

Mr. A. Smith thought the officer referred to had no right to retain the money, but under the circumstances was now justified in keeping it.

Mr. Tracy expressed surprise at the sentiments of the last speaker who stated his opinion that an officer of the City was justified in doing that which he had no right to do. If the officer had no right to take the money; that settled the matter, and it should be paid to the Treasurer at once. The speaker continued in strong condemnation of the act of an officer in passing upon the correctness of his own bills and paying them upon his own authority.

Mr. Gilbert felt that in order to act justly to all concerned in the matter, both sides of the question should be fairly considered. There was no question whether the course pursued was legal, but the officer felt with reason that there was due him what he had faithfully earned by service. While condemning the irregularity of the method of payment adopted, he did not feel like passing a resolution too strongly censuring the action. Regarding the rate of fee charged, while not stating his settled belief in its incorrectness, the speaker con*fessed that he entertained strong doubts* of its being regular. He therefore most particularly urged a course that would result in the Collector's and Assessor's claims for compensation being passed upon by a competent body.

The resolution of Mr. Tracy was then adopted; Messrs. Hamilton and A. Smith voting no.

On motion of Mr. Tyler the petition and rule to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued against the city for the balance of State and County taxes of 1881, was referred to the Corporation Counsel for his attention.

It was resolved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet on Saturday evening next.

Mr. A. Smith moved that the matter of the claim of the estate of Jas. Leonard in relation to the New street sewer assessment, be indefinitely postponed. Carried.

Mr. Tyler moved that further action on the ordinance regulating the driving of cattle through the streets of the city, be indefinitely postponed. Carried.

Mr. Guion from the Printing Com., reported that the publication of the ordinances in book form as authorized, was in progress.

Mr. Darling from the Finance Com., stated for the information of the Council, that within a few days past there had been paid to the County Collector $15,837.15 on account of State and County taxes of 1881, leaving a balance due of $12,850. The amount paid for 1880 was $5,948.66, leaving a balance on such quota of $2,606.

The Council then adjourned.

SATURDAY, Dec. 31st, 1881.

The Council was called to order in adjourned meeting at 8:15 p. m. Present—President Whiton and Messrs. Darling, Finch, Gilbert, A. Smith, H. Smith, Tracy, Tyler and Waring. Absent—Messrs. Hamilton and Guion.

The minutes of the special meeting of the 29th inst and adjourned meeting of the same date were read and approved.

Mr. A. Smith presented the claims of H. H. Baker for services as an officer of election, $10 and L. E. Clark for preparing a list of delinquent tax-payers according to a resolution of the Council, $60; for the collection of taxes on duplicate, $120 and for stationery, postage &c., $20. On motion the above claims were referred to the next Council.

Mr. H. Smith from Aud. Com., reported correct the claims against the general fund of Chas. W. Dodd, $58.34; R. Randolph, 34.84; M. Conway, 2.75; W. Addis, 4.25; G. Henry, 2; G. W. Rockfellow, 20.76; M. Bird, 62.50; J. B. Miller, 10; T. O. Doane, 10; S. T. Varian, 15; M. M. Thorn, 10; P. Hoagland, 10; T. J. Gillies, 10; H. J. Martin, 15; R. Merritt, 10; L. F. Wadsworth, 10; W. B. Maxson, 10; J. Chandler, 10; V. W. Nash, 10; B. Gray, 15; W. C. Butler, 10; J. C. Seaman, 10; John Ross, 10; O. B. Leonard, 15; H. Hamilton, 32.50; O. B. Leonard, 98.25; W. Hand, 155.24; D. H. Manning, 100; W. L. Force and Bro., 111.60; Runyon & Leonard, 89.30. From Poor Fund, G. Mehl, 103.00; T. J. Pruden, 80; D. Hand, 35.42; W. C. Ayres, 15, and D. J. Boice, 36.55. Warrants ordered drawn.

Mr. Darling from Finance Com., reported correct the claim of Mr. G. W. Moore for collecting taxes (being a balance unpaid) $7.56. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Waring from Lamps Com., reported back the December bill of the Plainfield Gaslight Co., as not correct and therefore unapproved. He stated that it was in full for all the lamps for the month, in face of the fact that one of the officers of the Company had stated to him that during the early part of the month many of the lamps were not lighted. The Com. recommended that the report be referred to the incoming Council for its consideration. Carried.

Mr. Tyler from the Laws Com., reported back the bond of Collector-elect John B. Brown, with its approval. Report received and bond approved, all aye, and the Clerk instructed to notify Mr. Brown of the Council's action.

Mr. Tracy from the Printing Com., reported as correct the claims of M. Estil, $14.69 and 2.02. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Gilbert moved the adoption of a resolution to the effect that the bills of the Assessor and Collector for assessing and collecting State and County taxes for 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881 be referred to the Corporation Counsel for his opinion as to whether the fees charged were according to the law regulating such, and for information as to the custom of townships in the matter and the methods pursued by their officers in collecting the same.

In reply to a question as to the purpose of the resolution, Mr. Gilbert stated his desire to take such action as would most speedily result in justice to all parties. He felt a great deal of unnecessary and harsh criticism had been indulged in against the Collector for retaining the fees, when it should be remembered that no legal way had yet been discovered by means of which the officers could secure payment for their services, and that it was impossible for them to get their claims adjusted in any other way. "I do not want to go out of office," he continued, "without feeling that I have done everything in my power to secure justice for these gentlemen."

Mr. Tyler suggested a submittance of the rights of the officers to the Supreme Court in a friendly suit to secure an authoritative decision to regulate finally the question. He believed from such knowledge as he possessed that there were no fees legally provided for and that the Common Council is expected to determine a specified salary for these officers in payment of their services. He did not think that the Corporation Counsel was ready to decide the matter.

Mr. Gilbert understood that the Collector declined to become a party to any "friendly suit" and, in consequence, the only action that could be brought against the two officers would be one to compel the return of the fees retained, which action might result disastrously to them.

Mr. Tracy thought the better way would be to instruct the Corporation Counsel to take such steps as would most speedily determine officially the legality of the claims.

Mr. Tyler moved as an amendment that the bills of the Assessor and Collector be referred to the Corporation Counsel to secure an early and authoritative decision as to whether those officers were entitled to any compensation, and, if any, how much for the assessing and collecting of State and County taxes for the years 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881. Seconded by Mr. Tracy.

Mr. Gilbert in speaking to the amendment, said: "I am not in favor of a Shylock policy to compel a restitution by these gentlemen, if they have exceeded what may be decided as the legal compensation. For three years past they have endeavored to have their bills adjusted and settled without avail, and they then took such legal advice as was at hand and followed it. If it is the intention of the amendment to compel a restitution of any excusable overcharge, I am not in favor of it."

Mr. Tracy in reply to a question of Mr. A. Smith, said that he did not profess to be capable of deciding whether the officers had violated the laws of the State in charging and retaining the amount of fees in question, but believed there was every reason for grave doubts as to the legality of the proceeding. He thought the only course to pursue was to bring the case before the proper tribunal and have the matter settled authoritatively and finally.

Mr. Tyler's amendment was then carried. Messrs. Finch, H. Smith, Tracy, Tyler, Waring and Whiton voting yes. Messrs. A. Smith, Darling and Gilbert voting no. The resolution as amended was then carried.

A recess of ten minutes was then taken and upon reassembling the rules were suspended to allow the Aud. Com. to report as correct the claims of G. W. Moore, $7.56 and M. Estil, $16.71. Warrants were ordered drawn.

On motion of Mr. Waring the propositions of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., and the Plainfield Gaslight Co., for lighting the streets of the City, with the opinion of the Corporation Counsel on the same, were referred to the next Council.

On motion the rules were suspended and the report of the Finance Com., on the City's receipts, disbursements, etc., for the year 1881, was presented by Mr. Darling. The same was read by the Clerk and on motion of Mr. Gilbert, filed and ordered printed in the official papers.

The reading of the annual report of the City Treasurer was dispensed with and on motion it was also ordered printed in the official papers. Mr. Darling explained that it showed a balance of $3,500 greater than the Finance Com. report, as the Treasurer had not deducted the note charged up by the bank.

At the suggestion of the President the Clerk, on motion to that effect, read the minutes of the present meeting, which were approved.

On motion of Mr. Mason W. Tyler, the Council of 1881 finally adjourn.

MONDAY, Jan. 2d, 1882.

The new Council was called to order by City Clerk Leonard at 8 o'clock p. m.

Present—Messrs. Depew, Gardner, Ginna, Kaufman, Livingston, Lindsley, Newhall, Rushmore, Simpson and Thompson. Absent—none.

Upon a call for nominations of Chairman, Mr. Depew nominated Mr. Isaac W. Rushmore and Mr. Kaufman nominated Mr. Henry B. Newhall. Messrs. Simpson and Kaufman acted as tellers and the result of the first ballot was:

Rushmore, 4; Newhall, 4; blank, 1.

The second ballot stood Rushmore 5 and Newhall 4, thereby electing the former, although some discussion arose as to whether a majority of the votes present was not necessary.

Mr. Kaufman moved that Mr. Rushmore be considered temporary chairman and to become permanent president, if not otherwise ordered by the Council.

It being the desire, however, of those present to settle the office finally, a motion by Mr. Thompson that Mr. Rushmore be unanimously declared the President of the Council, was carried.

President Rushmore on taking the Chair, spoke briefly concerning the duties before him and claimed the indulgence of the Council until he had become familiarized with them. He then spoke of the City's embarrassments and needs, and closed with a passing allusion to the "question of State and County taxes."

On motions of Messrs Newhall and Lindsley respectively, Mr. O. B. Leonard as City Clerk and Mr. Henry Hamilton as Janitor, were re-elected unanimously by acclamation.

Mr. Depew moved that when the Council adjourns it be to meet again on Tuesday, the 10th inst. Carried.

It being moved that the Council proceed to fill the vacancy caused by the declination to serve of Mr. W. B. Clarkson, Mr. Lindsley nominated Messrs. John Simpson and Julian Carey.

A ballot resulted: Simpson 6, Carey 4, and the former was declared elected.

It being considered necessary to nominate a Police Board, a recess of five minutes was taken for consultation.

Upon reassembling Mr. Depew nominated Messrs. R. Simpson, Thompson and Gardner as members of the Police Board for the present year, and upon a ballot they were unanimously elected.

On motion of Mr. Kaufman, the Clerk was instructed to procure roll-call blanks, and the rules of order of the last Council were adopted for the present.

Upon motion of Mr. Livingston it was ordered that a Committee of three be appointed to confer with the County Board of Freeholders on matters of disagreement between it and the City.

On motion of Mr. Depew, that gentleman and Messrs. Lindsley and Newhall were appointed a committee to notify the Mayor that the Council of '82 had organized and was ready to receive any communication from him.

Council then adjourned.

A Mechanical Marvel.

The celebrated Engle Clock, the greatest wonder of the age, is to be exhibited at Laing's Hall during next week from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., of each day. The press notices received by the exhibition wherever it has been given, assures its claim upon the public patronage. The Boston Star of Dec. 29th says:

"The Engle Clock, now on exhibition at Horticultural Hall, is considered as a marvel of ingenuity, and has hardly its equal. Besides its wonderful clock-work combined with a pipe organ, there are forty-eight figures, operated in life-like attitudes and movements. It is impossible to describe all that is to be seen, in a few words, and nobody who has the opportunity should miss seeing this masterpiece of human skill." Admission—Adults, 15 cents; children under 12 years of age, 10 cents.

A Family (Republican) Jar.

On Tuesday evening last a large number of our citizens gathered together in Laing's Hall, brought together by curiosity and a circular calling for an expression of public feeling regarding the nomination of Mr. E. B. Pope for the position of postmaster of Plainfield. Mr. T. J. Gillies called the meeting to order and Messrs. John Harris and Wm. A. Woodruff were chosen respectively chairman and secretary. A series of resolutions adverse to the confirmation by the U. S. Senate of Mr. Pope's nomination, were offered by Mr. John Dietrich, and after some bitter, if not extended opposition, were adopted. A committee, consisting of Mayor Randolph and Messrs. Dietrich and Harris was subsequently appointed "to visit Washington forthwith and represent to the National authorities the feeling and wish of our citizens on the subject." During the evening Messrs. E. Lanphear, T. J. Gillies, Samuel Huntington, Julian Cary, Mayor Randolph and others spoke against the confirmation of Mr. Pope, while Mr. J. W. Murray upheld the character of that candidate and his eligibility for the office. All of which called forth personalities and abuse out of place and much to be regretted.

Election of Officers.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of this city, at a regular meeting held last Friday evening, elected the following persons to serve as officers for the ensuing term of six months: C. C.—Nathan Guttman. V. C.—Gideon Barnes. Prelate—Henry Waldron. K. of R. & S.—Webster Grant. M. of F.—H. C. [illegible]. M. of E.—Henry Rochman. M. of A.—George Rutherford. Trustee—B. Webster. G. R.—C. McGinley. G. A.—[illegible] Buckle. This Lodge has of late made very rapid progress both in the acquisition of good material for members also in numbers and in financial ability, and her present standing in all respects is encouraging in the highest degree. In view of the satisfactory state of things the brethren have felt warranted in procuring more commodious quarters, accordingly they have secured and will immediately fit up the Hall on the same floor on Front street side, where the brethren will hope and work for continued prosperity.

Personals.

George P. Doughty, a well-known railroad conductor on the Central Railroad, died at his father's residence in Somerville, on Jan. 1st.

Mr. [illegible] Spencer, well known to the North Plainfield public, lies dangerously ill of gangrene at his son-in-law's residence, Mr. Elias Allen, near Washingtonville.

Mrs. Sarah Layton, relict of John Layton, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Theodore Allen, in Peapack, Somerset County, on Tuesday last. Her remains will be brought to this city for interment on Friday.

It is with pleasure we notice the appointment by District Attorney M'Keon, of New York City, of our esteemed friend, Captain James M. Brady, to the position of Deputy Assistant District Attorney. Captain Brady did yeoman service for the Democratic party during the last Presidential campaign, in stumping the State of New York. He is a son-in-law of the late Silas D. Herring, the safe manufacturer, whose family resides in this city.

It becomes our sad duty to announce the sudden death of a well-known former resident of Plainfield, Mr. John H. Staats, son of Cornelius Staats, Esq. Some months since deceased was stricken with paralysis and was convalescing at his brother's residence, the "Rock House," North Plainfield township, when he had a second stroke of the affliction. He had so far recovered from this as to be able to visit his relative, James M. Dunn, of this city on Monday last, partaking of the family dinner and seeming in good health, returning to his brother's on Tuesday. On Wednesday morning, about 1 o'clock he received a third and final attack of his malady, and remained insensible and in convulsions until the time of his death, about 1 o'clock, Wednesday. Deceased was engaged in business in New York city, where he was recognized as a lawyer of ability. He was also a fine orator, and frequently addressed assemblages during political campaigns, being an uncompromising Democrat. He had many friends who will mourn his sudden demise.

FIRE MATTERS.

The members of "Gazelle" Eng. Co. No. 1, are requested to meet at their parlors on the evening of Monday next, at 7:30 o'clock, as business of importance will come before them.

Considerable excitement was occasion*ed last Monday night, about 8 o'clock, by* the sight of flames issuing to a great height from a kerosene lamp in Demarest's Grocery Store, on Front street. Passers-by forced an entrance into the rear door of the store and extinguished the flames, which were in danger of communicating to the desk on which the lamp was resting.

The workmen engaged in putting up a stove at the office of Dr. Monroe B. Long at No. 2[illegible] East Front street, misjudged the position of the chimney flue and inserted the pipe through the side wall of the room. In consequence, when a fire was lighted on Wednesday, the flames and heat found an outlet from the pipe into the space between the lath and upper floor, and a dangerous conflagration was threatened. Word was sent and the alarm bell rung, but before the apparatus reached the scene, the disaster was averted by other means.

Mr. D. D. Wotherspoon's residence on Front street, occupied by a family named Gardner, narrowly escaped destruction from fire on New Year's Day. Smoke was discovered issuing from the weather-boarding of the house by the inmates, and assistance obtained in the person of Justice Louis F. Wadsworth, a neighbor, to ascertain the cause. That gentleman, with admirable coolness, despatched his son to the engine houses and secured the assistance of firemen Ephriam Hedden, W. E. [illegible] and N. Conway who quickly tore up the hearth stone in one of the rooms, where the cause of all the trouble was found. Wooden beams beneath the hearth had caught fire and were charred and smouldering. A few pails of water soon extinguished the fire. Mr. Gardner, who was lying very low from sickness in another part of the house was not even aware of the danger to the building until all was over.

The Board of Managers of the Plain*field Fire Department met in regular* meeting at the Council room on Wednesday evening. Present—Pres. Van Winkle and Messrs. Gillies, Jones, Depew, Morris and Flaig. Absent—none. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. Mr. Morris from Com. on Repairs and Supplies reported as correct certain claims against the Department, and progress in relation to the building of the new truck. Mr. Jones from Com. on Wells reported that no expense could be saved by building "tile wells" and moved that the contract for the building of the wells for which bids had been received, be given Mr. G. W. Townley with power to award the same to the next lowest if the bid specified should not be fulfilled. On motion of Mr. Morris the motion was laid on the table—Messrs. Jones and Flaig voting against such action. A number of claims were then presented and ordered paid, while others were referred to the Com. on Repairs and Supplies for its examination. The consideration of the safety of the Alarm bell tower and the cost of re-building it, was postponed until another meeting. The matter of charges against a member of Alert Hose Co., presented by the Foreman of Warren Eng. Co., was then taken up. Mr. Geo. P. Suydam appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. C. [illegible] Marsh for the defendant. After some discussion, the plaintiff withdrew the charge of malicious intent on the part of the accused and declared the action of the latter to be merely of the accuser's personal belief. A resolution of Mr. Morris was then adopted, to the effect that such questions as the plaintiff and defendant may desire to propound, be presented to the Board for its decision at a future meeting. The Chair then declared that the charges against the accused having been withdrawn he was cleared of all such against him and the Board would express its thanks for his attendance. The meeting then adjourned.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

There is to be a grand Ball at Moffett's Hall, on Thursday evening, Jan. 12th.

The Secretary of the Health Board reports six deaths and five births in the Township of Westfield for the month of December, 1881.

The contractor, Joel Moffett, has the frame nearly ready to raise as soon as the foundation is completed for the Congregational church on Elmer street.

The week before Christmas Mr. Henry Hosford and family went to Kinderhook, New York State, to spend the Holidays with their relatives residing in that town. Their young son Arthur, aged ten years, was complaining at the time of not feeling well; but the family thinking it nothing serious took Arthur along with them. On Wednesday, Dec. 28, Doctor Cooper was summoned by telegram to attend him, the lad having become alarmingly ill. Upon the Doctor arriving there he found his illness of a serious character, from which he did not recover and died on New Year's day. His body was brought to Westfield on Tuesday, and the funeral services were held at the residence of his parents on Wednesday, the remains being taken to Greenwood for interment.

The Holiday Festival of Bethlehem Sunday school, Clark Township, which is a mission school of the Presbyterian church, Westfield, was held on Friday evening, Dec. 30, at the school house. An address was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Riggs, of Cranford, who spoke of his life in Syria. The selections for singing were very good and well rendered by the school and organist. Owing to the "green Christmas," Santa Claus did not appear as he did last year, yet proved that he did not forget the children, for in addition to a large Christmas tree, he sent a number of beautiful and appropriate presents for scholars and teachers as well as oranges and candies in great abundance. The ladies furnished a bountiful supply of cake. All present seemed well pleased with the exercises and with the school, which, since its re-organization two years since, has done good work under the care of its faithful Superintendent, James M. French. That gentleman we regret to say, sent in his resignation on Sunday, Jan 1st, being unable to attend to the duties of his office for a longer period, as he has lately removed to the village of Westfield.

The case of Collins vs. McMurray, for trespass before Justice Jacques, was adjourned on account of the absence of a material witness until Jan. 11, 1882. Fun ahead.

Esquire Godfrey issued a warrant for the arrest of John Kelley for assault and battery committed some two weeks ago, Kelly was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The new house of Mr. Hart, Jr., on Quimby street, is about completed, only awaiting the finishing touches of the painter on its inside wood work. It is a neat dwelling and no doubt will soon be occupied.

Those who have not as yet paid their taxes should look out and do so before February 1 next, or they will be recorded against them at Elizabeth, in the County Clerk's office, and an extra expense will be added to have them released.

The burial of Mrs. Sarah Staples, which occurred on Dec. 26th inst., at her residence in Brooklyn, took place on Wednesday, 28th inst., from the Presbyterian church. Burial in Fairview Cemetery. Mrs. Staples was formerly a resident of our town.

The Town Committee have about completed their labors in paying and settling with the Overseers of Roads and other officers. They will soon be ready to prepare and publish their annual statement of the financial condition of the Township for the past year.

The large store building recently purchased of Dr. F. A. Kinch by James T. Pierson was started on its journey along Broad street on New Year's day under the supervision of John D. Emmons, of Newark, N. J., the contractor, who expects to have it on the new foundation adjoining C. B. Peddie's in about two weeks.

Last week was a season of rejoicing for the little folks. Santa Claus had a busy time in supplying all their wants, but good natured old soul, he always delights in seeing happiness among the children, no matter how much of fatigue it may bring to him. In the Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, "the advent," a service of song and responsive readings, was rendered by the children of the school. The church had been neatly and appropriately trimmed with evergreen, in the form of stars, crosses and crowns; over the pulpit was a unique design in the form of a shield having a large star in the centre with words "All Hail" above and the word "Emanuel" below. A large and appreciative audience gathered to hear and see, and went away thoroughly satisfied with all.

On Wednesday evening Santa Claus made his annual visit to the Sunday school children and their pleasant school room. Two trees were loaded with dolls, carts and nice things for the little folks, while the larger pupils were presented with boxes well filled with candy, and also with beautiful Christmas cards. The success of this is largely due to its Superintendent, Rev. Wm. H. Gill, and the Ass't. Superintendent, W. H. Elston.

The doings in the Baptist Sunday school on Monday morning reflect great credit upon their Superintendent, A. F. Grant. The songs by the school were well rendered, the responses were well uttered and the gifts received by both children and teachers were sources of much merriment and happiness.

On Monday evening the M. E. church had their Christmas tree and jollification. It is enough to say that the school and all its appointments were under the direction of Mr. Robert R. Sinclair, its Superintendent, and all well know it must have been a success.

On Tuesday night the outlying schools of Westfield had their Santa Claus fete, Willow Grove and Locust Grove.

On Wednesday the Episcopal Sunday school had its festival and Christmas festivities. The church was handsomely decorated with evergreens and the tree loaded with presents for scholars and teachers.

On Thursday night the Congregational church held a supper and had a Christmas tree, and under the guidance of Mr. Henry Hosford, its Superintendent, it proved a grand success. AJAX.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

SKILL IN THE WORKSHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have enfeebled his hand or dimmed his sight, let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1880.

GENTS—I have been very low, and have tried everything, to no advantage. I heard your Hop Bitters recommended by so many I concluded to give them a trial. I did, and now am around, and constantly improving, and am nearly as strong as ever. W. H. WELLER.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 8

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THREE CHANCES FOR A WIFE.

If a man has three chances for a wife he should certainly improve one of them. Yet Sam Hopeful did not succeed even with such heavy odds in his favor. He shall tell his own story:

'I once courted a gal by the name of Deb Dawkins. I made up my mind to get married. Well, while we were going to the deacon's I stepped into a mud puddle, and splattered the mud all over Deb Dawkins' new gown, made out of her grandmother's old chintz petticoat. When we got to the deacon's he asked Deb if she would take me for her lawful wedded husband.'

'No,' says she.

'Reason,' says I.

'Why,' says she, 'I've taken a mislike to you.'

'Well, it was all up then, but I gave her a string of beads, a few kisses, some other notions, and made it all up with her; so we went up to the deacon's a second time. I was bound to come it with her this time, so when he asked me if I would take her for my wedded wife, says I:'

'No. I shan't do no such thing.'

'Why,' says Deb, 'what on airth is the matter now?'

'Wey!' says I, 'I have taken a mislikin' to you.'

'Well, it was all over again; but I gave her a new apron and a few other trinkets and we went up again to get married. We expected that we would be tied so fast that all nature couldn't separate us; and when we asked the deacon if he could marry us, he said:'

'No. I shan't do no such thing.'

'Why, what on earth is the reason?' say we.

'Why,' says he, 'I've taken a mislikin' to both of you.'

'Deb busted out cryin',' the deacon busted out scoldin' and I busted out laughin,' and such a set of busters you never did see, and that is the reason I never married. My chance has gone.'

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

A Southern paper relates how G. T. met an old friend, who was formerly a prosperous young lumberman up North, but whose bad habits of drinking resulted, as they often do, though he has since reformed and is trying to do better.

'How are you?' said G. T.

'Pretty well, thank you, except that I've had a good deal of worriment caused by the prevailing throat difficulty, and I have just been to a doctor to have him look at my throat.'

'What's the matter?'

'Well the doctor couldn't give me any encouragement. At least he could not find what I wanted to find.'

'What did you expect him to find?'

'I asked him to look down my throat for the saw mill and farm that had gone down there.'

'And did he see anything of it?'

'No, but he advised me if I ever had another mill, to run it by water.'

DON'T MENTION IT.

A citizen of Detroit entered a Michigan avenue grocery the other day, and said he wanted a private word with the proprietor. When they had retired to the desk he began:

'I want to make confession and reparation. Do you remember of my buying sugar here two or three days ago.'

'I do.'

'Well, in paying for it, I worked off a counterfeit quarter on the clerk. It was a mean trick, and I came to tender you good money.'

'Oh, don't mention it,' replied the grocer.

'But I want to make it right.'

'It's all right—all right. We knew who passed the quarter on us, and that afternoon when your wife sent down a dollar bill and wanted a can of sardines I gave her that bad quarter with her change. Don't let your conscience trouble you at all—it's all right!'

FORCE OF IMAGINATION.

'You know,' said Rice, 'how the negro likes possoms.' Two darkeys were riding from the field after a hard day's plowing. They began to talk about the good things to eat. 'T-a-k-e a good f-a-t possum—part bile him—put him in an ole fashion Dutch oving—roas' him brown,' the other darkey's eye rolling and mouth watering as the description went on, 'sarve him up wid c-o-o-n graby.' 'Shut yo' mout, yo' niggah, I'll fall right off'n dis hoss.'

LENGTH AND BREADTH OF THE U. S.

The greatest length of the United States from east to west is 2,800 miles; greatest breadth from north to south, 1,600 miles; average breadth, 1,200 miles.

Clara—'Oh, Charley, you naughty boy! I saw you throw your segar away just as I came around the corner.'

Charley—'Why didn't you say that you wanted it? How was I to know?'

A little boy weeping most piteously was interrupted by some unusual occurrence. He hushed his cries a moment; the thought was broken. 'Ma,' said he, resuming his sniffle, 'what was I crying about just now.'

'It's a long way from this world to the next,' said a dying man to a friend who stood at his bedside.

'Oh, never mind, my dear fellow,' answered the friend, consolingly, 'you will have it all down hill.'

'Look heah, Uncle Mose, you fooled me wid dat ar hoss I buyed from yer last week. He jest drapt dead in his tracks.'

'He never drapt dead in his tracks or anywhar else as long as I had him, goin' on twenty years.'

'Be yer takin' much interest in politics this Fall, Bill?' asked the first tramp.

'Skursely,' answered the second tramp; 'but I expect to be runnin' for suthin myself purty soon.'

'What do yer 'spose yer'll run fer, Bill?'

'The poor house wagon.'

A clergyman in Scotland preached from the text: 'Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.' The wife of a farmer who was present went home and told her husband that the text was, 'If you don't pay rent you shall leave the parish.'

'Do let me have your photograph,' said a dashing belle to a gentleman who had been annoying her with his attentions. The gentleman was delighted, and in a short time the lady received the picture. She gave it to her servant with the question, 'Would you know the original if he should call?' The servant replied in the affirmative. 'Well, when he comes, tell him I am engaged.'

They sat together in the lamplight and read the advertising columns of their local paper, when he suddenly exclaimed: 'Look, only $15 for a suit of clothes!' 'Is it a wedding suit?' she asked. 'Oh, no,' he answered, 'it's a business suit.' 'Well, I meant business,' she replied. That settled it.

'What is that on the table?'
'That is cake.'
'What are those things looking at it?'
'Those things are children.'
'Do children like cake?'
'No, children do not like cake.'
'Does cake like children?'
'Yes, cake likes children.'
'Where have the children gone?'
'The children have gone up stairs.'
'Where has the cake gone?'
'The cake has gone with the children.'

The Sun.
NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little!

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

POETRY.

RECOMPENSE.

The earth gives us treasure four-fold for all that we give to its bosom;
The care we bestow on the plant comes back in the bud and the blossom.

The sun draws the sea to the sky, O, stillest and strangest of powers,
And returns to the hills and the meadows the gladness of beautiful showers.

The mother regains her lost youth in the beauty and youth of her daughters,
We are fed after many long days by the bread that we cast on the waters.

Never a joy do we cause but we for that joy are the gladder,
Never a heart do we grieve but we for the grieving are sadder.

Never a slander so vile as the lips of the willing rehearser,
And curses, though long, loud, and deep, come home to abide with the curser.

He who doth give of his best, at that best is the certainest user,
And he who withholds finds himself of his gaining the pitiful loser.

The flowers that are strewn for the dead bloom first in the heart of the living,
And this is the truest of truths, that the best of a gift is the giving!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

JOHN PAUL.

He was doubtless a tramp. His worn and dusty dress, his crushed felt hat, his dirty shoes, and the checkered muslin shirt, tied at the neck with a bit of rusty black ribbon, and the little bundle borne on his shoulder from the end of a stout stick, told the story plainly.

Added to this was the beard of a week's growth, except the moustache, which had not been touched by a razor. He was rather a gay and good-looking fellow for all that, with a keen eye, and open countenance, and a well-knit figure, and he strode along as though he felt that the wandering idler was really the king of the other men, and tramping a superior art.

Presently he threw down his stick and bundle, and made a leap in the road, just in time to stop a runaway horse, with the long reins flapping about his feet, and the wagon behind him swaying from side to side.

The occupants of the wagon, a couple as old-fashion as the carry-all in which they sat, were crying frantically to the horse to stop, and now that some one had stopped him, were profuse in their thanks.

"Bob is not vicious," said the man, whose language and dress showed him to belong to the Society of Friends, "but two geese flew across the road, and before I knew it he had jerked the reins out of my hands and started on a run. I'm obliged to thee, for if thee hadn't caught him, he might have spilled us over the high bank below there."

The tramp nodded and turned to go, when the woman spoke.

"Friend," she said, "thee has split thy coat up the back."

"Have I?" returned the tramp, feeling for the rent. "So I have. I must get it mended somewhere."

"As thee did it helping us—" said the man, putting his hand in his pocket.

"I bar that," said the tramp, raising his hand, and showing with his laugh a set of white teeth. "I don't take money for stopping horses; but I thank you for your intention."

"I tell thee what to do friend—I don't know thy name," said the woman.

The tramp smiled again, and said, "You may call me John Paul, if you choose."

"Well, friend Paul, does thee see that white house among the trees off from the road yonder? Thee go there, and say to Rachel—that's our niece—that her uncle and aunt, Mahlon and Naomi Stacy, sent thee, and ask her to sew thy coat for thee."

"Thank you ma'am; I'll do so."

The tramp removed his battered felt hat, made a bow rather more courtly than might have been expected, and the parties pursued their several ways.

A brisk two minutes' walk brought John Paul to the lane leading from the road to the Stacy farm house. Down the lane he turned, and when half way in it, heard a woman scream.

The next minute a pretty young girl, with her hair flying over her shoulders, ran out of the house, pursued by a great, burly rough fellow, who stopped when he saw the other tramp coming. The girl ran on, but when she observed the new comer, stopped also, in doubt whether he was not a confederate.

"Anything wrong?" inquired John Paul.

"That—that man!" gasped the girl.

There be tramps, and tramps. The one to whom Paul advanced was of the baser order, brawny, whisky-sodden and brutal.

"What do you mean by frightening this young lady?"

"Take it easy, pard," rejoined the big tramp, grinning. "The gal gave me a lunch, and I wanted to sweeten the victuals with a kiss. There's is no bones broken."

John Paul's face reddened. He took off his coat and threw it on the fence.

"Now," said he, quietly, "you'll leave."

"When I get good and ready," answered the other, insolently.

"No, sir—now."

"Ha! ha! Suppose you spell able. Do you see that?" and he thrust his fist under his nose.

It was dashed away suddenly, and the right hand of John Paul fell with full force between the eyes of the tramp, who fell, doubled in a heap. He was up in an instant, to go down again by another facer. Picking himself up, he made a rush with both arms extended toward his opponent. It was impossible to parry this, and it was not attempted. Paul stepped suddenly aside, and before his antagonist could recover himself, caught him on the throat with his right arm, and suddenly bending him over his own extended knee, threw the great mass of flesh to the ground. The ruffian lay there for a minute or so motionless.

"Thee hasn't killed him?" timidly inquired the girl.

"No, miss," said John Paul, "but I've given his backbone a jar that makes him sick of fighting. Come, sir, get up," he added, as the man began to stir; "pick yourself up and go, or I'll give you more of it, and worse."

"I'm going," said the other, rising slowly, and rubbing his back—"I'm going, boss. But I say, you ain't a man; you're a steam engine, you are."

As soon as the fellow had dragged himself out of sight, and finding on inquiry that her name was Rachel, gave her the message of her aunt. He followed at her request to the house, where he seated himself on the veranda, while Rachel, coat in hand, disappeared in the kitchen.

In a few minutes she came out.

"There is thy coat, friend, as good as new; it was only ripped in the seam, not torn, and—Oh, dear! There is that vexatious Crumple in the garden again."

Paul looked and saw that a cow had got into an enclosure not meant for browsing ground, and volunteered to get her out. It did prove an easy job, however; and by the time he had managed to overcome her dodges and manœuvres, and got her safely into the barnyard, he saw the farmer and his wife drive in, and he knew from her manner that Rachel was telling them all about the fight. As he came forward to reclaim his mended coat, Mahlon Stacy met him with a beaming countenance.

"Thee has placed me under obligations again, friend Paul," he said. "I hear thee was obliged to resort to force. It is against the principles of Friends, but since thee had to do it, I am glad to learn thee did it well. A big man, too, for I think the one we met with blood on his face was the one thee dealt with."

"There was no trouble in handling him, sir. The matter is not worth speaking of. I am only too glad to have been of service to the young lady." With these words he moved off.

"Stop, friend," cried the farmer. "If thee won't have compensation for thy service, thee will at least grant us another favor, and take supper with us."

The young man hesitated, but glanced at the woman, said: "I—I am not in a fit condition for the table; I—"

"If that's all," eagerly rejoined Mahlon, "we can arrange that. Come with me."

And the young man was speedily ushered into a chamber, where his host gave him shaving materials and left him, to hear more definite particulars about the encounter, in which, like many men of peaceful habits, he took a deep interest.

At the supper table John Paul, in evading minute inquiry, let them know that he lived in New York when at home, and gave them some account of the metropolis, of which they had heard, but never seen, and did it in a plain and lucid way that showed he kept his eyes open while he was tramping.

After supper Mahlon Stacy and John Paul sat on the veranda while the women folk where clearing the table, and the former, after two or three preliminary hems, spoke his mind.

"Thee was looking for work, perhaps?"

"No I can't say that I was."

"Thee would take a job if thee could get one, maybe?"

"That depends on what it is."

"Can thee mow?"

A smile broke over the young man's face.

"Not very well," he said. "I did learn how to swing a scythe—once—when I was on a farm for a month in the hay season; but I'm not an expert mower."

"That might come by practice," rejoined the farmer. "You see, my man was obliged to leave me before the hay was all made; and when I met thee I was going after some one to take his place, and did not succeed. Thee might be of help if thee would, and I would give thee fare wages."

"Well, sir, it is a new business for me; I'll do the best I can for you till you can do better; and as for the wages, we'll not differ on that."

"Then thee'll stay here, and we'll tackle the south field to-morrow," exclaimed the farmer, joyously. "Naomi, thee'll get a room ready for friend Paul. He is going to help with the hay."

So John took service with Mahlon Stacy, or, as he put it to himself that night. "I'm hired by Rachel's uncle," and he laughed at the same time as though it were the funniest thing possible.

The hay-making was over in three days, but John, as they called him now, remained. He evidently knew very little about farming, but took teaching kindly. He developed a great knowledge of horses, their needs and wants, and altogether Mahlon was satisfied with his raw hand. The fourth day it rained so that out door work was stopped. Mahlon and John sat in the kitchen, the farmer in a rather down-cast mood. John watched Rachel's motions for some time, as she moved about gracefully, and then took a book which stood on a shelf, and began reading. Mahlon smiled grimly.

"If thee likes to read," he said, "there's 'No Cross, No Crown,' and Barclay's 'Apology' in the sitting room. That is a foolish book of poetry that Rachel delights in. But it can do no one any good. It is very funny in parts, though."

It was Hood's poems.

"Some of these is by no means funny," said John; "the 'Bridge of Sighs,' for instance."

"I don't remember. Will thee read it out!"

John read the poem, and in a way that no one there had heard—read it with feeling and force.

"Thee reads remarkably well, John," said Mahlon.

"Poor creature!" said Naomi. She referred to the heroine, and not to John.

Rachel said nothing, but her eyes were full of tears.

On Saturday John got two hours' leave of absence, and returned with a bundle, which he carried to his room. The next day he came down to breakfast in a new light suit. Mahlon made no comments, but after breakfast asked John if he would go with them to Friends' meeting, or to some other place of worship, or would he stay at home. "We go to meeting, of course; but Rachel's father was 'Piscopal, and Rachel goes there. Then there's the Methodists and Presbyterians."

"I shall go to the Episcopal church," said John.

"Ah! Well, we drop Rachel at the crossroad always, and thee can get out there."

So John walked from the getting-out place to the church, which was a missionary chapel, where the rector of an adjoining parish gave a service every alternate Sunday.

There were few attendants, and the coming of a fine looking young man made a sensation. When service was over, however, and they all came out, some one whispered that the new comer was "Mahlon Stacy's hired man," and the sensation died out.

Absalom Browning was waiting in his buggy.

"Shall I drive thee home, Rachael?" he asked.

"Thank thee, no, Absalom. I came in the carry-all with uncle and aunt, and they'll stop for me at the corner."

Absalom walked alongside, however, leading his horse and talking to Rachael, and John fell behind. When they came to the corner, Mahlon and his wife were already there, and Absalom renewed his request. Rachael made no demur, for Naomi said it would relieve their horse with one less in. John smiled to himself. The aunt favored the courting.

The summer months came and went. Absalom Browning came and went once a week, and sometimes twice, and John Paul remained on the farm.

He grew to be a favorite, and his activity and physical strength, with the great good-nature, made him popular with the young men around. Absalom did not like him, however. With Rachel he got along famously. She had been his friend from the first, never forgetting his opportune championship.

Then he read so beautifully, and was full of tales of adventure, for, according to his own account, he had traveled a great deal. In his wanderings he had picked up a deal of knowledge, too, as leaked out bit by bit, and he bade fair to make a good farmer, so the farmer liked him, too.

But Mahlon, whose spirits had been getting lower and lower, at length grew quite gloomy, and his gloom was shared by his wife, and even infected Rachel.

The cause of this trouble, John Paul learned one day from the talkative clerk at the store where the Stacys dealt, and with it he got some of the family history.

It appeared that Rachel Taylor, the youngest sister of Mahlon's wife, had eloped and married with Gordon Forsyth, a gay and wealthy young gentleman from New York, who had accidentally met and fallen in love with her. Rachel had been 'disowned' for marrying 'out of meeting,' but worse followed. Forsyth, who was on the downward course, soon got tired of his pretty wife, resumed his dissipation, and was drowned while drunk two years afterward, leaving his widow with a one-year-old child.

Rachel Forsyth did not long survive her husband, who proved to have been at his death bankrupt. He had managed to get Mahlon Stacy, who believed in him, to become bondsman in a case involving. It afterward turned out, a questionable transaction.

Mahlon paid the judgment, but was obliged to mortgage the farm, which had been in the Stacy family for four generations. He adopted the little Rachel, sent her to the West Town School to be educated, and bit by bit accumulated money sufficient to discharge the mortgage.

The bank in which he kept his savings broke, and he not only lost his store, but was unable to meet the interest for a year. The mortgage was in other hands—a rich New Yorker held it—and proceedings to foreclose had been begun. If Rachel married Absalom Browning, who was rich himself and a rich man's son, there would be no difficulty.

"They say that Rachel hangs back," concluded the clerk. "I rather guess she give in at last. That's the way Mahlon'll pull thro', in my judgment."

John came home after hearing all this, and found Absalom Browning there. The young Quaker was got up quite smartly—in plain clothes, to be sure, but his shad bellied coat was of the finest broadcloth, and his hat of the very best beaver.

He remained to supper, and was treated with mark consideration by the farmer and his wife. Rachel seemed to be a little embarrassed. John glanced at her a little curiously, but she avoided his eye.

The hired man went out after he had eaten his supper, attended to the horses and cattle, and, this done, came into the house. It was usual for the family to sit together for an hour or two after supper, before retiring to rest. It was their main recreation from daily labor. But the old couple had retired, and John retired also, leaving the younger couple together.

John sat at the window in the dark, looking out on the night, and thinking. In a little while Absalom Browning left, and he heard the wheels of his wagon driven after the fashion of Jehu, the son of Nimshi. Then he heard the light step of Rachel on the stairs on her way to rest.

The next morning John went out early to see to the horses and cattle. When he returned to breakfast he observed that Mahlon was curt and monosyllabic of speech, Naomi gloomy and Rachel distressed. John ate his meal silently, and then went to the field with Mahlon.

But he soon made an excuse to return to the house. Rachel was alone there, seated with her face buried in her hands, and so intent on her thoughts that she did not hear him come in.

"What is the trouble, Rachel?" he asked.

The girl started up, and the blood rushed to her face, but she made no reply.

"Is it to be a wedding?" he continued.

"John Paul, thee's—thee's—"

"Or did you send Absalom about his business last night?"

"What's that to thee, John? Uncle is displeased with me, and aunt is sorry, and now thee must—what is it to thee whether I have or not?"

"Rachel," said he, taking her trembling hand and retaining it in spite of her effort to withdraw it, "it is everything to me, for I love you, dearly."

The eyes of the girl filled with a sudden light. "Thee—thee love—me!"

John read the answer to his question before he put it, and drew the sobbing Rachel to his breast.

How long they stood there neither could tell, but at the sound of Mahlon Stacy's heavy step on the veranda, Rachel made good her escape.

"What keeps thee in the house, John?" inquired the farmer, entering the room. "We have work to get through with."

"Let that pass for a moment, Mr. Stacy. I have something to say. Who holds now the mortgage on the farm?"

"Why does thee ask?"

"From no idle curiosity. What is his name, and where does he live?"

"His name is Frobisher, and he lives in New York. It is his lawyer, Woodford, who has the business in hand."

"Woodford! Not Charles Woodford? So! In that case make yourself perfectly easy. I can arrange all that for you."

"Is thee serious, John Paul? Does thee think Frobisher would do it for thee?"

"Why not? He never refused me anything I wanted yet, from the time he went to the same school."

"Thee must be out of thy mind. John Frobisher, they say, is worth a million of dollars. Does thee expect to influence him? If I didn't know thy habits, I should say thee'd been drinking."

"The man you speak of is worth more than you say, in estate, but he'll give you all the time you need. Let me see. It is nearly eight. The mail closes at ten. I have time to write a letter, hitch up, and get to the post office in good time. You'll have an answer by to-morrow evening," and without further words he went out, harnessed the horse and drove to the village, leaving Stacy staring in amazement. When he came back the farmer was still in the house, with Naomi and Rachel, discussing John's freak. During that day and the next morning Mahlon would glance at John at times with an expression made up of hope, and suspicion of John's sanity.

At noon next day John quietly hitched up the horse again and without asking leave, drove off, with a reassuring smile to Rachel's inquiring looks as he went.

This was hours before the mail was due, and John had on his Sunday clothes, too. He did not get back until supper time, and then handed a letter to Mahlon in the presence of the rest. It was postmarked "New York," and the farmer opened it with trembling hands.

"John," said he, after he had handed it to Naomi, "thee made no vain boast. Woodford says I can have all the time I want. Thee has done me a great service. I only wish I knew how I could repay thee."

"Perhaps you can," said John, smiling and taking Rachel by the hand. "Suppose you let me take care of this young lady in future?"

"Why, Rachel!" cried Mahlon, in astonishment. "Does thee and John—"

But Rachel's answer was not distinctly audible, her face being so close to John Paul's waistcoat.

"Has thee thought about means to support a wife?" inquired Naomi, with a last flutter of expiring loyalty to Absalom Browning.

"There need be no trouble on that score;" returned John. "But I have a confession to make. I have in some measure deceived you. When you asked my name, I just said—John Paul.

"And has thee been using a name to which thee has no right?" demanded Naomi, severely.

"I have a right to that name, but there is more of it. I am John Paul Frobisher."

"Frobisher!" exclaimed Mahlon, as a light broke in on him. Then thee is—"

"I am, or rather was, the holder of your mortgage. I say was—" drawing a paper from his breast pocket and handing it to Naomi. "I have been to West Chester and made an assignment to your wife. I hope she'll be a lenient creditor to you, Mahlon. You see, I had been taking a pedestrian tramp for health and amusement, and you came across me just as I had run sufficiently to seed in the journey and was about to take the cars for home. The face of Rachel's attracted me, and she's the captive of my bow and spear, anyhow. I won her by fair fight," said he, laughing.

They all sat down to supper. The farmer said his customary grace with great unction—"For what we are about to receive, the Lord make us truly thankful! and John, whose hand had found that of Rachel somehow under the tablecloth, responded with a fervent "Amen!"

YOUNG LOVE'S DREAMS.

She was a real pretty bread and butter, peaches and cream style of a green country girl, and she almost broke the hearts of the clerks in the post office when she came up to the window and asked to buy a postage stamp.

'Ah,' said Oscar, with a smile of killing variety, as he noticed she had a yellow envelope in her hand, 'why not buy a plain white stamped envelope?'

'I don't want a stamped envelope,' she simpered. 'I want a stamp.'

'Oh, very well Miss, but you know that stamped envelopes are all the rage now.'

'I don't care, I want a stamp.'

'Well, you are just too utterly too too.'

'Won't you tell me why you want the stamp?' and the young man wrapped a smile around his face like a sheet around a ghost.

'You won't tell anybody?'

'No, of course not.'

'Nobody?'

'No.'

'Well, then—te he—te he,' she laughed, 'you see my beau he don't like stamped envelopes. He lives away out in Colorado and he says he never gets to see me, but if I lick the stamp and stick it on, he can take it off and chew it, and it is the next thing to kissing me.' Then she blushed and looked teased, and Oscar got so red in the face that he gave her a stamp and seven cents change for a three-cent piece.

TOO TOO-TROOLY AWFUL.

She lived on Main street.

'Are you my lily, dear, he asked soothingly, and looked down at the little form that nestled confidingly in his arms.

'Yes, John.'

'Are you my decorated wall pattern, my painted pottery, my gold-and-yellow butter-fly o' the mist?'

'Yes, John, and I'm your little honey-flower-of-the-dale,' she ventured, turning her soft eyes upon him, and burning with their intensity of love, a hole through his stiffly-ironed shirt-bosom.

'You are all this, dearest?'

'I am, John. Can you distrust—'

'No, no. Don't think that, you wrong me.'

'Forgive me, John, but you—what are you? Are you my great cardinal sunrise, gleaming golden through the dawn?'

'Yes,' said he, 'I am; and I am your peach blossom of joy, your intensity of oyster pie and church fairs. Besides this, I am your pink-eyed, saffron-hued, pretty chin-bearded, mellow, sad-souled and wormy watermelon.'

'Oh, John?'

'Yes, dear.'

'You are not my watermelon?'

'Why am I not your watermelon?'

'Because watermelons are green, John.'

A cold shudder ran through his frame as he thought of the sarcasm that might lurk in her last remark, but it was quickly dispelled as she began to stroke his silken beard, and his mind was as peaceful as an angel's when a few moments afterward they measured noses as a parting token of love.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Tuesday at Trenton was an exciting day among the representatives, by reason of a dead-lock that arose upon the attempted organization of the Assembly. Two Democratic members from Hudson County, Messrs. Clark and McLaughlin refused to vote for Speaker because the caucus of their party refused to select their man, "Terry" McDonald, for Sergeant-at-Arms; and the result of this action called forth many justifiable expressions of disgust at the conduct of the bolters. McLaughlin was afterwards brought to a realization of his duty to party, but Clarke encompassed in the toils of the Republicans, held out until an adjournment proposed by John T. Dunn, the nominee for Speaker, brought to a close the disgraceful scene. The blame falls upon the Clerk of the last House, Cummins O. Cooper, who ruling without authority or precedent as would best suit the interests of the Republican party, refused to entertain any motion that might bring order out of chaos. On reassembling the following day, however, the dead-lock was broken by the return of Clarke to his rightful position among the Democratic majority, and the organization of the House was effected by the choice of the following officers, by a strict party vote of 31 Democrats to 28 Republicans: Speaker—Hon. John T. Dunn, of Union County; Clerk—Arthur Wilson, of Monmouth County; Engrossing Clerk—Julius W. Munger, of Essex; Assistant Clerk—Timothy A. Byrnes, of Atlantic; Sergeant-at-Arms—T. Donovan, of Hudson; Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms—Michael Hurley, of Mercer. After the introduction of a dozen bills and a resolution deploring the death of Gen. Judson Kilpatrick, and requesting the Senators and Representatives in Congress to cause the Federal Government to secure the removal of his remains to this State, the House adjourned until Monday.

In the Senate on Tuesday the following Republican officers were elected: Garret A. Hobart, of Passaic, President over Thomas Lawrence, of Sussex, by a vote of 13 to 8. George Wurts, of Passaic, was then elected Secretary; Wm. T. Hunt, Assistant Secretary; Journal Clerk, Jas. S. Hulme, of Burlington; Engrossing Clerk, A. L. English, of Atlantic; Sergeant-at-Arms, David Claypole, of Cumberland; Assistant, Joseph Donovan, of Union; Doorkeepers, David Bielsman, of Middlesex; Chas. Randall, of Camden; J. V. Albertson, of Atlantic, and R. H. Herbert, of Mercer. The Governor's message was read (as presented to our subscribers with this issue in a supplement) and the Senate adjourned until Wednesday. On that day but little business was transacted. A resolution was adopted deploring the death of President Garfield and urging that speedy justice shall be dealt out to the assassin. An adjournment to Monday was then carried.

JUSTICE AND TRUTH.

To the credit of ex-President Grant it is publicly announced that he now openly avows himself in favor of General Fitz John Porter, and declares that his former opposition to him as a military commander was founded entirely upon error. That decision would have done Gen. Porter essential good had it been uttered sooner, but even at this late day it will go far towards securing for him long delayed justice, and certainly confers honor upon both distinguished gentlemen.

The fact of the matter is the bitter persecution of Fitz John Porter was partisan malignancy and nothing else, he being, as he had freedom's right to be, a pronounced Democrat. The same despicable spirit hounded the illustrious Democrat George B. McClellan when at the head of the Union army.

Partisanship for the dignified and honest suport of principles, measures and candidates is a proper and respectable calling, but prostituted into an agency for the personal defamation and injury of those holding opposite political views, it becomes the most contemptible of human actions. It is then the base criminality of a robber and sneaking pick-pocket combined.

We hope the day approaches when partisan leaders will discover that public stealing, systematic lying and personal slandering are unprofitable investments.

The people can teach them that important lesson, and the reputation and welfare of country demands early and fearless instruction of the kind.

Any man has the perfect right to be either a Democrat or a Republican, as his own judgment may elect, and under the Constitution of the United States no human being possesses the legal or moral privilege to complain of or interfere therewith.

Let others be what they please, we are Constitutional Democrats.

The political history of Mr. Garfield's administration is finding early publicity. The latest chapter is a letter sent by the editor of the Tribune to Mr. Garfield touching the fight over the New York Collectorship. This letter is published in the Herald in defence of Mr. Garfield by one who undertakes to show, by way of "friendly defence," that the late President was not to blame for the quarrel in the Republican party because he was a "puppet" in the hands of others. This letter is republished by the Tribune editor, who says its aim was to give Mr. Garfield the facts of the situation in New York in answer to written requests that he would do so. It appears from the letter itself, however, that the editor went far beyond his instructions, and after having warned the President that Conkling was organizing a tremendous pressure to secure the withdrawal of Robertson, went on to ply him with advice about standing firm, as the only safe course, and telling him whenever pressure on Platt and James is necessary, let us know, and to "beware of James' soft, insinuating way." The editor of the Tribune then, Mr. Garfield having permitted some one to copy the editor's private letter, prints a letter headed "private," from Mr. Garfield to one Nichols, to show that Mr. Garfield exonerated Mr. Blaine from blame for the New York fight. It must be pleasant reading to Republicans.

In the selection of Hon. John T. Dunn of Union County as Speaker of the House of Assembly, the Democrats have made a good and wise selection. Mr. Dunn has had years of experience in legislative halls, and most thoroughly understands the routine duties of the presiding officer of so important a body. Besides, he will, by reason of his position, be enabled to keep a watchful eye upon any bill presented detrimental to his constituents and the whole people of the State. He will make a good Speaker.

Comment at Washington on the Porter case leads to the belief that the matter will again be submitted to Congress and be disposed of favorably to General Porter. Yet there is no likelihood of its being hurried through. Opposition to his reinstatement still exists as bitterly as ever among its chief opponents in the past. It is said that they will unearth a speech prepared but not delivered by General Garfield, who was a member of the court-martial that sentenced General Porter. The strongest and most convincing argument from General Garfield's standpoint abounds in the speech, which also is understood to treat in detail of the disposition of troops, the topography of the country around Manassas and the general plan of battle. All this is to be buried at the case together with arguments by Logan and others.

LOCAL ANNEX.

In the Fireman's Standard of December, 1881, we find under the head of "distances thrown by Amoskeag engines, as certified to by parties using them," the following:—"Gazelle 1, Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 12, 1869—one 1 inch nozzle—850 feet of hose, 176 feet. One 1¼ inch nozzle, one hundred feet of hose, 228 feet." By reference to the files of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of that date, we find the figures are correct. The trial of the engine took place at the foot of Water street.

Mr. William Shotwell, of North Plainfield, hands us the following printed call, which, it will be seen, was issued in 1849. As the document is rather of a curiosity, we re-publish it by request:

A DAY OF UNITED and SPECIAL PRAYER PROPOSED.

The undersigned, Ministers of Christ, after prayerful consideration, solemnly believing that the present significant indications of Providence, the great spiritual dearth and deadness in our churches generally, the fearful increase of wickedness in the world around us, and the awful signals of Divine displeasure, which hang over our community and country, call loudly and seriously upon ministers and Christians, of every name, to merge their minor differences, and betake themselves to personal and special humiliation and prayer before God; do therefore hereby, [illegible] affectionately and earnestly invite all under their influence, both professors and non-professors, to unite with them in observing Monday, the 20th instant, as a day of special humiliation and prayer before God!

Public meetings to be held according to the following arrangements, viz: Preaching at 9 o'clock A. M. in the Seventh Day Baptist; at 10½ in the First Presbyterian; at 3 P. M. in the First Baptist, and at 7½ in the Methodist churches.

Plainfield, August 16th, 1849.

*I subscribe the above, but think the words "merge their minor differences," of doubtful utility and should be left out. L. C.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Town Committee will meet on Monday evening, Jan. 16th inst., at 7:30 p. m. By order of chairman.

It's a boy; weight 11 pounds; the happy father Charles Lee, son-in-law of Joel Moffett, residing on Central avenue.

On Monday, Jan. 16th inst., the "Little Four" minstrel troupe of Elizabeth, N. J., will give an entertainment at Lyceum Hall, to consist of negro sketches, jokes, songs, &c. Three hours of solid fun.

There will be a select Dramatic entertainment at Lyceum Hall on Thursday evening, Jan. 19th inst., by amateur ladies and gentlemen of New York and Brooklyn. The proceeds to be divided between the Village Improvement Committee and Westfield Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1.

The Society of the Congregational church held their annual meeting on Thursday evening, 10th inst. This church is in a flourishing condition, and is anxious to get their new church completed as soon as possible, which they expect will be ready for occupancy by June 1st next.

One of our young residents of Smokey Hollow is about starting in the steam laundry business, he having purchased and has now being put up on the premises, the steam boiler which Mr. Irving had originally in his carriage factory. Manning, do not put on a whistle or look out for Charlie.

The members of the Presbyterian church and congregation were somewhat surprised on last Sunday morning. The Rev. Joseph Greaves occupied the pulpit. After the conclusion of his sermon and before the benediction was pronounced, he read the resignation of the pastor of the church, Rev. Wm. H. Gill, he having received and accepted a call to preach at a place in the interior of Pennsylvania, near to where he formerly was stationed before his coming to Westfield.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Westfield Game and Fish Protective Society, was held on Tuesday evening, whereat considerable business of importance was transacted for the benefit and welfare of the Society. Albert A. Drake, Esq., was elected Director in place of John J. Willis, resigned. The Society is in a flourishing condition, gaining new members monthly and they have already secured several hundred quail which they are keeping until Spring to stock the hunting grounds with. It is their intention to secure the right to stock certain lands with birds, and prevent pot hunters and non-residents from shooting the same for gain instead of sport. Every farmer should be interested in the welfare of the society and give it a helping hand.

On Sunday morning at 9 o'clock a. m., Jan. 8th inst., F. Webster, a young man who works for the Welch Bros., painters, on Broad street, on going to the barn to feed and take care of the horse, discovered the body of a man hanging by his shoulders fast to the hay rack in the corner of the stall in which the horse was. He recognized the body to be one of his fellow workmen, Edward Korppe, who had been on a spree since New Years, but on Saturday afternoon had gone into the hay mow in the barn to sleep off the effects of the intoxicating drinks before going to his room in the house where he boarded, with Mr. W. Welch. Mr. Welch had seen him on Saturday evening about five o'clock in the barn, and asked him to go in the house and go to bed. He said he would in a little while. He must have got off the hay mow to come down the ladder, but in the darkness mistook his way and fell through the hole where the hay is dropped in the rack for the horse, and got caught between the slats of the rack in such a position he could not help himself and died from suffocation. He had, from the looks of the body, evidently been dead over twelve hours. His watch had stopped at 9 o'clock, which probably was the time on Saturday evening he fell through into the rack. Mr Welch notified Constable Marsh, who telegraphed to County Physician Terrill, who arrived at 2 p. m., and made a thorough examination of the body and the circumstances surrounding the case and granted a permit of burial. The body was taken charge of by William W. Connoly, undertaker, under the direction of Samuel E. Young, overseer of Poor. Korppe has a brother residing in Wahlenburg, Province of Silesia, Prussia. He was a good mechanic and well educated; his only fault was too much alcoholic drinks. He would, when on his periodical sprees pawn his clothes for money to buy whiskey or beer, and even did so on Saturday before his death. The person that gave him money for his clothing for that purpose is morally, if not criminally responsible for his death.

The special parish meeting of the members of the Presbyterian church and congregation was held on Tuesday evening to take action in regard to the resignation of its pastor, the Rev. Wm. H. Gill. The meeting was held in Lecture room adjoining the church at 7:30 p. m. Evert M. Pierson was chosen moderator, and William H. Elston, Secretary. The Secretary read the resignation of the pastor, after which Mr. Gill, in short address, gave his reason for resigning the charge. Dr. F. A. Kinch made a motion that the resignation of the pastor be accepted. After remarks by Dr. F. A. Kinch, Wm. H. Elston and by the moderator, the motion was unanimously carried, and E. M. Pierson, Joseph Cory, F. A. Kinch, D. G. Fink and James T. Pierson were appointed commissioners to present and ask the Presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relations. Dr. F. A. Kinch offered the following resolutions on behalf of a committee of the Trustees of the church, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Our Pastor, the Rev. Wm. H. Gill, has tendered his resignation with the view of his accepting an invitation to another field of labor; and

WHEREAS, He has given us to understand that in this matter his determination is fixed and unalterable, believing that he is following the leading of God's providence; therefore

Resolved, That we are pained and surprised at this announcement; that inasmuch as his resolution is fully taken, appreciating the purity of his motives and the weight of his reasons, while it causes us grief, we do hereby yield our assent to our much-loved Pastor's desire, accepting his resignation and uniting with him in the request to Presbytery to dissolve that relation which for four years has so pleasantly existed between us.

That in parting with our Pastor we desire to record our heartfelt appreciation of his personal worth, and that of his most estimable wife, whose gentleness has won every heart and the strong hold which she has on the affections of this people will be long remembered.

That we cannot too strongly express our deep sense of the valuable service our Pastor has rendered to this church and congregation both in a material and spiritual point of view, which we now contemplate with an honest pride, and while they intensify our sorrow at parting with our Pastor, will serve to perpetuate his memory to coming generations.

That as a preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ as an able, faithful and eloquent expounder of God's word, as an active and untiring worker in all that tends to the welfare of his flock and especially in the Sunday school and his visitation of the sick and in the chamber of death he has been a most faithful minister of comfort and consolation.

That in our Pastor's removal not only our church and congregation have sustained a great loss, but the entire community in whose welfare he took great interest in every enterprise whether secular or religious.

That in parting from us our Pastor and his wife carry with them our best wishes and earnest prayers for their health and usefulness in their new field of labor, wherever God in His providence may direct and order their lot.

That these resolutions be recorded in our church records and published in the New York Observer, Evangelist and local journals, and a copy forwarded to the pastor.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

NEW CLASS FRONT STORE,
797 Broad St.,
NEWARK, N. J

We would announce to our patrons and the public that we have doubled our manufacturing facilities during the past three months, and are prepared to lay before our customers this Fall a line of the CHOICEST STYLES OF GARMENTS, such as have never before been displayed in Newark. They have been cut from selected styles of Harris Rock, Belle Air, Lippitt and American Mills Cassimeres and Overcoatings, and finished in a superior manner.

We would particularly announce to the young men of our city and vicinity that we have secured from some of the leading manufacturers their hand loom samples, from which they have sold the production of their mills for this season at prices from 75c. to $1 per yard below the regular prices. Some of these samples we shall cut into suits, and our special style of Ulsterettes. These garments must meet your approval, as we can sell at a profit where others must sell at cost to compete with us. We shall use some of these goods in Children's Suits from 4 to 9 years, and our Children's Essex Ulsterets, from 4 to 9 years, are a bargain. There are no two patterns alike, and you will not feel that you have to uniform your boys. We cut small lots in all our choice goods, and give our customers the benefit of a large assortment.

We have standard styles of Dress Suits and Semi-Dress Suits and Overcoats, cut in all the best makes of goods. Some of our low priced Suits and Overcoats cannot be made for the price to day. Remember, all our Fall and Winter Suits and Overcoats have been manufactured since July 1. We have no old stock. Our Boys', Youths' and Children's Department has been carefully attended to. You will find bargains in each Department. Our Custom Department has a carefully selected stock of Seasonable Goods, both Foreign and Domestic. All our garments will be trimmed in a first-class manner, and cut by Artistic Cutters.

Estimates furnished for Railroad, Band, G. A. R. and Military Uniforms—one of our specialties. We refer to Q. M. Gen. Perrine, Brig. Gen. Plume, Col. Bernard, Col. Campbell, and other commandants whose commands we have uniformed. Also, to Lincoln Post and Kearny Post, G. A. R., as to the quality and cut of our garments.

"It was all over town," Monday! Mud.

THE year 1882 begins and ends on a Sunday.

IT's a new year, but news is superlatively scarce.

THE past two weeks have been full of broken resolutions.

THE cart before the horse. The thaw arrived before January did.

THE sun rose half a minute earlier this morning than last. Bad for lazy folks.

THE month of December, 1881, was the warmest of that name in thirty-eight years.

A MAD dog was shot in Third street on Monday, before any damage had been done by it.

Do not forget to attend the next lecture by Dr. De Hase, at the Park avenue Baptist Church on Tuesday evening.

A ROCKAWAY carriage will be raffled for at Hartfelder's saloon, on Somerset street, during Saturday evening next.

IT seems that Mother Shipton has been misquoted all along. She said "The end of the World is sure to come due in 1882."

IN answer to a question of "Tri-color," the postal rate on book manuscript is one cent an ounce or any fraction of such.

THE mystery has been fathomed. The Keely Motor is run by a "crank."—True American. We wonder who it supports for postmaster at Plainfield?

THE journeymen painters of this city met on Thursday evening of last week and passed resolutions asking an advance of wages to $2.50 per day after March 1st.

A RECEPTION was tendered Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, from 5 to 9 o'clock p. m., on Monday, by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, at the latter's residence on Rockview avenue.

THE Rev. A. H. Lewis having been called away on Sunday last, the pulpit apportioned him in the general exchange was occupied by the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond.

COUNCILMAN H. B. Newhall, as Superintendent of the Crescent avenue Sunday School, entertained the teachers at his residence on Seventh street, during Monday evening.

AN evening sociable was given at the residence of Mrs. Firman Harris, corner of Front street and Plainfield avenue, on Wednesday evening, which was a most enjoyable affair.

ONE of the handsomest calendars we have seen for the year 1882, is issued by the Phoenix Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn. of which Mr. O. B. Leonard, of this city is agent.

ON Saturday evening there will take place at Heideloff's saloon, a raffle for a mule and a two-seat jagget wagon. The highest and lowest to win the prize, the former having his choice of the two.

WE are under obligations to Bro. Babcock of the enterprising Fredonian, for a copy of that journal's almanac. The issues of past years have been invaluable, and that of '82 is fully up to the standard.

THE Board of Education met on Thursday evening of last week and organized by the election of Mr. Jacob Kirkner as President in place of Dr. C. H. Stillman, deceased. Mr. John W. Murray was elected Secretary and Treasurer.

PLAINFIELD has two so-called Republican newspapers, and as a consequence the usual Republican majority is "going to the dogs." If you want to break up a political party in a small town establish two rival newspapers of the same political faith and the work is soon done.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

A RECORD of the rainfall in 1880 and 1881 shows that, notwithstanding the drought which prevailed during a part of the latter, the average fall for the year was greater than in the preceding year. But while the fall in the months of July, August and September 1880, was 13.33 inches, in the same months of 1881 it was only 4.25 inches.

P. T. BARNUM offers a prize of $10,000 for the handsomest man in the United States, to travel with his circus. Well, Phineas, our present business engagements are of such a nature, that we cannot accept, although we believe that $10,000 is more money than we can make for the next three weeks running a newspaper.—Ocean Democrat.

A NOVEL and appropriate advertising card has just been issued for Blackwell's Durham Cigarettes. It is in the shape of a plaque, on which is painted a scene entitled "The Honey Seekers." Mr. W. A. Bass, of this city, is connected with the above tobacco firm, and it was his prolific brain which produced this admirable picture as an advertising medium.

THE locomotive of the 7:01 a. m. train from this city on Monday, had a "blow-out" at Richmond street, which was quite an exciting if not otherwise, affair. With but little delay, however, the train was enabled to proceed to New York by the use of the cylinder that had not lost its head during the excitement of the occasion. It arrived only eleven minutes behind time.

THE contrast between the weather thus far this winter and that of last winter is very great. Last year at this time there had been several weeks of fine sleighing, most people had their ice houses nearly or quite filled, and zero weather reigned supreme. This year there have been but two or three slight flurries of snow, not a day's sleighing, and hardly ice enough for skating.

THE first of a course of lectures in aid of the building fund of the church of the Heavenly Rest of Evona, was given at that place on Tuesday by the Rev. H. H. Oberly—subject, "Some elements of American character." Others will follow on the evenings of the 17th and 24th inst. by the Revs. W. C. Roberts and Wm. S. Langford, on "Beaten paths" and "William Tyndal and his Bible."

THE editor of the Somerset Gazette in speaking of the Republican fight over the office of postmaster in this city, says:—"The Central Times understands thoroughly well the Republican situation at Plainfield, and is not likely to go astray in its comments on home affairs. But as it is all a local matter, no doubt the good Plainfield citizens will act as becomes them in the premises, regardless of all outside opinions."

THE readings of Mr. J. W. Churchill that are to be given in the M. E. church on the evening of Feb. 3d, under the auspices of the Deliber Society, are already being looked forward to with interested expectation. The general admission will be fifty cents, with reserved seats at twenty-five cents extra. Tickets may be had of members or at Reynold's pharmacy, where the sale of seats will be commenced on the 23d inst.

WHO can estimate the value of a newspaper? You buy it for a couple of cents, learn all the news of the day, can then place it against your chest under your coat and thus keep from catching cold, can read it again in the evening, and, if lacking in bedclothing, can use it as a blanket at night. After that it is the best thing in the world to put under carpet, and when tired and sick of it you can trade it off for a plaster image.

THE New York Observer says that "the whole system of giving concerts and fairs, theatricals and excursions and picnics for benevolent purposes is a delusion and a snare. The people who have the means will give what they ought to give if the object is properly placed before them, and this idea of giving them something to get something is only an appeal to their selfishness and not to their charity. Christians ought to have no part or lot in it."

THERE has been a slight change since our last issue as to the performances to be given by the Mother Goose and Kate Greenaway artists at Van Deventer Hall. The entertainment will take place on Friday evening at 8 o'clock and repeated Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock; to consist of tableaux, recitations, nursery rhymes, songs, etc. Admission, 30 cents, children half-price; the proceeds to be devoted to the building fund of the new Congregational church.

THE "first grand sociable" of the Jolly 8 will be held at Laing's Hall on Wednesday evening of next week, for which invitations have only been issued to the friends of the managers. Consequently, the attendance will be of the most select, and those so fortunate as to secure an "invite" are certain to have a most enjoyable time. Those in charge of the affairs are noted for the good times they always arrange, and success deserves to attend them on this occasion.

THE game season is over.

DR. De Hase' lecture, Jan. 17th.

THE Council meets in adjourned meeting next Monday evening.

THE days are growing longer at the rate of about two minutes per day.

WELL! we have had snow enough to make a "January thaw," anyway.

THE winter—or rather the time of the year—is edging along towards spring.

THE latest Republican "difference" is a split among the Elizabeth Councilmen of that party.

THE ice men who had commenced to gather in the harvest have temporarily suspended operations.

It seems to have, at least, a leaning towards the granting of liquor licenses—our new Council does.

OUR Carrier would herewith publicly thank those of our patrons who remembered him and his year's service.

SPRING-like weather greets us almost every morning. We are having a varied assortment of weather this winter.

LOOK out for the bargains that Bachman will offer through the advertising columns of this paper, in its next issue.

THERE was a false alarm of fire on Tuesday evening at about 8:30 o'clock, and the "boys" had a fine run. All of which the citizens have to pay for.

THE Saengerbund has decided to hold its annual masquerade as usual on the evening of Feb. 22d, but whether in its own hall or elsewhere is not yet settled.

A CONCERT will be given in Van Deventer Hall by the Plainfield Saengerbund on the last Monday evening in March, for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital.

ONE of our most efficient watchmakers is Mr. Rudolph Laurent, who has recently established himself at the corner of Somerset and Front streets, under Pope Bros.

THE twenty-sixth annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association will be held at the American House, Trenton, on Monday the 16th inst., at 11 o'clock a. m.

THE fall of snow Tuesday night was hailed with exclamations of extreme delight by shoe dealers, who thereby had a chance to work off some of their stock of "rubbers."

SEVEN applications for liquor licenses presented at the last meeting of the Council, evidences that there are some who hope the present is not an anti-license Council.

WITH this issue we hand our subscribers a copy of Gov. Ludlow's annual message. It is, as usual, a document of interest, full of advice and suggestions for the good of the people and the State.

No fault can be found with the Committees selected by President Rushmore, except to question the justice of making one member of the Council Chairman of two and another member Chairman of none.

THERE has been no change in the "post-office contest" since our last. Mr. Vail still occupies the position and Mr. Pope's confirmation has made no progress, even if his name has not been virtually withdrawn.

THE Directors of the U. & M. C. M. A. A., are being severely criticised by the public for their delay in paying the premiums awarded at the last fair. They should state when and where such can be obtained.

SUNDAY afternoon and evening "Old Prob" dealt out a miserable hand in the shape of weather. The services at the churches were, in consequence, not very largely attended, and but few persons were to be seen upon the streets.

ANY of our citizens desiring waiters for private parties, weddings, &c., can secure such at short notice by addressing Messrs. Vanliew and Dunham, P. O. Box, No. 25, Plainfield, or by calling at their residence, No. 166 West Fourth street.

THROUGH the fraternal indulgence of "our esteemed contemporary" the Central Times, we are enabled this week to present the annual message of His Honor, the Mayor, in full. Our readers as well as ourselves are the gainers, and will unite in thanking our brother-journal.

THE small boy with new rubber boots has been sorely perplexed this week in his efforts to find "slush holes" deep enough to wade in, so that the water could get in over the tops of his boots and then go home and tell his mother that Jim, so and so, pushed him down.

THE Union County Board of Freeholders have thought better of their late refusal in the same direction, by appointing, on Thursday evening of last week, a Committee to consult with one from our Common Council in relation to an amicable arrangement of the differences between the two bodies.

IN spite of the discouraging effect of a small audience, Mr. Warren G. Richards gave a most enjoyable entertainment at Van Deventer Hall on Saturday evening. The young elocutionist proved himself a dialect reader and facial contortionist of remarkable talent, and undoubtedly deserves to achieve the success in his profession he seems bound to attain.

THE Eagle Clock on exhibition during the present week at Laing's Hall, is attracting large crowds; and we would advise no one to miss the opportunity of inspecting this modern wonder of mechanical skill. Not only is it scientifically marvellous but also artistically beautiful, and the exhibitor Mrs. Capt. Reid is a lady possessed of the elocutionary powers best adapted to explain understandingly its amazing features and extraordinary merits. Go and see it.

THE latest addition to the weeklies of New York city, and which we gladly welcome to our exchange list, is the Democratic Advocate. It seems so thoroughly posted regarding the cause it aims to advance, that success should certainly attend its existence. The following brief definition taken from the head of its editorial page, is so true and complete, that it deserves republishing: "Democracy is a sentiment not to be appalled, corrupted or compromised. It knows no baseness; it cowers to no danger; it oppresses no weakness; it is destructive of despotism; it is the sole conservator of liberty, labor and prosperity; it is the sentiment of equal rights, of equal obligations, the very law of Nature itself pervading the land."

The Collector's Books.

The newly-elected City Collector, John B. Brown, has at length gained possession of the books retained by the old Collector since the late election, he declining to surrender them. On Wednesday last, Collector Brown, with Messrs. City Clerk Leonard, D. J. Marshall and T. J. Gillies called at Mr. Clark's office and formally demanded the books, pointing out to him a law bearing upon the subject, which would impel the new Collector to go before the Grand Jury and make a complaint in the case if they were not surrendered. After reading the law, Mr. Clark surrendered the books under protest.

De Hase' Lecture Course.

Dr. De Hase gives the second lecture of his course on Classic Oriental and Bible Lands at the Park Avenue Baptist church, on Tuesday evening next at 8 o'clock. He is a man of rare intellectual ability and his personal acquaintance with the countries he describes gives his lectures an interest that can scarcely be exceeded. These lectures are given in behalf of the General Aid Society of the Park Avenue church. All who can appreciate a first-class lecture are sure to get their money's worth and at the same time aid a good cause. Tickets for the remaining two lectures are only 75 cents. Single admission 50 cents. See adv.

I. O. O. F.

Odd Fellows' Hall on Park avenue, this city, was crowded to its utmost seating and standing capacity last Monday night, the occasion being a public installation of officers. There was a very large attendance of ladies, which was very natural when we consider the fact that they have a natural "hankering" after odd fellows at all times and in every age. The public exercises commenced at 8:15 (after the regular business of the Lodge had been transacted) by singing the opening ode "Brethren of our friendly order," followed by a prayer by the Chaplain. A male quartette from Elizabethport Lodge then sang a selection of music, after which the following officers were duly installed by the Deputy Grand Officers: N. G.—William Boe; V. G.—James Ryno; R. S.—Jas. K. Arnold; P. S.—Peter V. Weaver; Treasurer—T. J. Young. The three last named being their own successors. Mr. Ellis of the quartette, then sang two songs of a very amusing character, after which the Rev. Robt. Pearse, Principal of the Flemington High School and an earnest worker in the order, was introduced as the speaker of the evening. Brother Pearse spoke forty-five minutes, and was very interesting throughout, closing his address with an earnest defence of the principles of the order, containing as it does [illegible] members in the United States. The quartette then gave another selection; when Brother Pearse, (who by the way is Grand Conductor of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey) consented to recite "Brudder Watkins' fare-ye-well," the rendition of which brought down the house. "The Frenchman and the Rat" was then recited by the D. Grand Master of this Lodge district, in a very amusing style. After more good music by Mr. Ellis and the quartette, the "closing ode" was sung, the Chaplain offered prayer and the exercises were at an end. Praise is due to the visiting brethren for their kindly assistance which did so much in making the occasion a grand success.

Common Council Proceedings.

TUESDAY, Jan. 10th, 1882.

The Council met in adjourned meeting at 8 o'clock p. m. Present—President Rushmore and Messrs. J. Simpson, Depew, Lindsley, Thompson, R. Simpson, Gardner, Ginna, Livingston, Newhall and Kaufman. Absent—none.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved after correction.

Mr. Livingston moved for a suspension of the rules to allow him to present a matter of business that he was desirous of having finally settled before proceeding. In answer to a question of a member, he stated that there seemed to be some doubt entertained as to the election of the President, and as he had voted for that gentleman he wished to exercise his right to move a reconsideration of the matter.

Mr. Depew was unable to see how there could be any "doubt" about the election of an officer, when such an election had been made unanimous.

Mr. Kaufman stated that at the previous meeting he had made a motion covering the same ground but it had been then ruled out of order. He, consequently failed to see why it was in order now.

The President called the gentleman's attention to the fact that when the motion was made there was no presiding officer to rule on the matter.

The motion to suspend the rules was carried, and a motion to reconsider the vote electing the present President, was made by Mr. Livingston and seconded by Mr. Lindsley.

Mr. Kaufman disagreed with the mover as to the necessity of another vote to fully establish beyond question the title of Mr. Rushmore to the position. He read from Cushing's Manual in support of the stand he took, that an "absolute majority" was necessary to elect, and the speaker understood such to be a majority of those entitled to vote and not a majority of the votes cast.

Mr. Livingston respectfully submitted that such was the identical position he was himself upholding in relation to the question.

The motion to reconsider was carried: Messrs. R. Simpson, Lindsley, Thompson, Ginna, Livingston, Newhall, Kaufman and Rushmore voting in the affirmative, and Messrs. Depew, Gardner and J. Simpson in the negative.

Mr. Rushmore then left the chair, and the Clerk stated that the Council was now without a presiding officer.

Upon a call for nominations, Mr. Depew presented the name of Mr. Isaac W. Rushmore as President.

Mr. Kaufman, in view of the fact that he had nominated Mr. H. B. Newhall for the office at the previous meeting, would do so again if agreeable to that gentleman.

Mr. Newhall thanked the member for the nomination and thanked those who had previously voted for him, but he was convinced that Mr. Rushmore had undoubtedly been elected by the Council as its President for the year. Although at the previous meeting he had refrained from voting, he now intended to vote for Mr. Rushmore and requested his friends to do likewise.

Mr. Kaufman thereupon withdrew the name of Mr. Newhall, and a motion by him that the nominations be closed, was carried.

Messrs. Livingston and Kaufman acted as tellers, and the result of the ballot was the unanimous vote of the Council in favor of Mr. Rushmore.

That gentleman on again assuming the office of President, said that he had already made a speech thanking the Council for the honor he supposed was then conferred upon him, which sentiments he desired to be understood as expressing his present feeling in the matter.

It was moved by Mr. Lindsley, seconded by Mr. Thompson, that unless there were objections, the seats as at present occupied be retained by the members during their term of office. So arranged.

The President then announced the following as the Standing Committees for the year:

Alms—Newhall, Ginna, and Depew.

Auditing—J. Simpson, Kaufman and R. Simpson.

Finance—Depew, Newhall and Lindsley.

Fire, Water and Lamps—Thompson, Depew and Livingston.

Laws and Ordinances—Ginna, Livingston and Lindsley.

Licenses—Livingston, Newhall and Gardner.

Police—R. Simpson, Thompson and Gardner.

Printing and Stationery—Kaufman, Ginna and J. Simpson.

Salaries, Officers and Election—Lindsley, Kaufman and J. Simpson.

Streets and Public Health—R. Simpson, Thompson and Gardner.

Also as a special committee to confer with the Union County Board of Freeholders respecting the present relation of the City and County towards each other, as provided by a resolution passed at the last meeting—Messrs. Livingston, Ginna and Lindsley.

Mr. R. Simpson presented a petition from Mr. Monroe B. Long M. D., requesting the permission of the Council to erect a frame shed adjoining the barn on his premises at No. 23 East Front street. Ref'd to Lamp's Com.

By the same, petitions for licenses to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, as follows:

Joseph B. Miller, inn and tavern at Laing's Hotel.

Charles Zimmer, saloon at No. 19 West Front street.

Fred Casper, saloon at No. 5 East Second street.

William Sullivan, saloon on Third street between Liberty and Plainfield avenue.

Also, by Mr. Gardner:

William Heideloff, inn and tavern on Somerset street.

James Conneely, saloon at No. 33 Park avenue.

Charles Smith, saloon corner of Front and Somerset streets.

All referred to License Com.

Mr. Depew presented the claim of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., (Dec. bill) $128.93; referred to Lamps com.

The President presented the annual message of his Honor the Mayor, which was read by the Clerk. On motion received and ordered filed.

The President also presented a report from the late City Collector, Mr. L. E. Clark, containing an account of the assessing and collecting of taxes for the past year and the proceedings thereon. Also giving the amount collected and still delinquent, and the officer's bill for services. He stated that he had made a return of the warrant issued to him, to the Justice of the Peace that had issued it, and requested that the report be referred to a committee empowered to audit and approve.

On motions to that effect, the report was referred to the Finance Com., and the bill for services to the Salaries Com.

Mr Thompson moved for adoption a series of resolutions referring the several suggestions contained in the Mayor's Message to the particular committees in whose hands the subjects properly belonged. Carried.

Mr. Newhall presented the following:

Resolved, That the Central Times and THE CONSTITUTIONALIST be designated the official papers of the City for the present year.

Seconded by Mr. Ginna, and carried; all ays.

Mr. Livingston presented the bond as Constable of Mr. Conway, elected at last Charter election. Ref'd to Law's Com.

Mr. Ginna moved, seconded by Mr. Newhall, that the City Treasurer be called upon to present his bond at the next meeting of the Council. Carried.

Mr. Livingston moved that when the Council adjourns it be to meet on Monday evening next. Carried.

Mr. Depew presented a resolution that the City Treasurer be authorized and directed to pay at once to the County Treasurer all sums in his hands of the taxes of 1880 and '81 applicable to the quotas of State and County taxes of those years.

Mr. Newhall thought that before giving any instructions recognizing the City Treasurer as such, the Council should receive and approve his bond. He was averse to holding any communication with an officer not yet completely qualified as such, in every particular.

Messrs. Depew and J. Simpson considered the Treasurer still covered by his bond of the past year.

Other members objecting on the plea that the Treasurer having failed to file his bond was not yet qualified to hold or disburse the city's moneys, Mr. Depew withdrew his resolution with the remark that he failed to understand the position taken. It was held that the officer had no right to hold the money and yet objection was raised to a resolution taking it out of his hands.

Mr. J. Simpson thought the best way would be to pay the County $8,000 of the $15,000 in hand towards the $16,000 that was due the County, and the latter would probably thereupon consent to wait three months or so, for the balance. The City would then have some money to pay its expenses with.

Mr. Lindsley felt assured that the Committee appointed to confer with the Board of Freeholders, was one efficient enough to secure some such arrangement.

The Council then adjourned.

One Year Ago.

The Good-Will Band of New Brunswick was entertained by the Zephyr H. & L. Co., whom it serenaded. The dreaded small-pox first appeared in the sickness of a young girl residing in North Plainfield. The sleighing was remarkably fine.

Chess Tournament.

The games won and the winners in the present tournament, are as follows:

Asa Collier 7, John H. Jackson 7, Geo. P. Saydam 6, Chas. Opdyke 3, Chas. Dewey 3, Geo. B. Hunt 3, Alexander Gilbert 2, Chas. R. Thiers 3, Geo. Long 2.

It is too early yet to surmise the possible and final victors. Before the close of the tournament the first may be last, as those who stand lowest so far have more games to play than the higher ones and may have more to their credit at the end.

Plainfield Temperance Union.

We regret the want of space necessary to give an extended notice of the formation of the Plainfield Temperance Union. As the result of an adjourned meeting of citizens interested in the cause, held at the Seventh Day Baptist church on Tuesday evening, an organization so named was formed with the following officers:

President—Rev. A. H. Lewis.
Vice Prests. { Rev. J. C. Bliss, Rev. Rob't Lowry.
Secretary—Edward St. John.
Treasurer—Henry Smith.

Besides these, Committees on Finance, Elections, Prosecutions, Publication and Lectures were formed and a plan of organization adopted. The Revs. Yerkes, Hurlbut, Ketcham and Lewis and Messrs. Isaac L. Miller, C. Potter, Jr., L. N. Lovell, L. W. Serrell, E. V. Shotwell, A. Gilbert and others took an active part in the evening's discussion.

Literary Notes.

The North American Review will present in its February number, to be published on the 15th of the present month, Part III. of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It will be from the pen of Geo. P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School,—as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the Christian faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is expected.

The fiction of the Midwinter (February) number of THE CENTURY will embrace the continuation of "A Modern Instance," by Mr. Howells, in which the author humors still further the hero's fondness for flirtation; another chapter of Mrs. Burnett's "Through One Administration," containing a piquant "morning-call" conversation between Tremdenis and Bertha; a racy story by Frank R. Stockton, entitled "Euphemia Among the Pelicans," which introduces two or three familiar characters of the "Rudder Grange" series; and the play of "Esmeralda," by Mrs. Burnett and W. H. Gillette, which is having a long and successful career at the Madison Square Theater. The play will be read with peculiar interest by those who remember Mrs. Burnett's short story of "Esmeralda," that appeared in the magazine for May, 1877. Readers who are familiar with Mrs. Burnett's novels may also look for traces of "Louisiana" in the drama.

A New Version.

1. And behold when it cometh to pass that the evening had set in, Mary, the daughter of Samuel, was alone in the habitation of her father and she was sore afraid and calleth in the daughter of James and the two maidens abideth one with another.

2. And the young men of the city came also and visiteth the maidens, and there was William the son of Abram and he who was called Lennie for short.

3. And while the young men and the maidens communeth together there arose a great noise in the halls of the mansion, and verily the daughters were afraid and clung one to another and wept many tears in their great fear.

4. But the young men waxed brave in spirit and counseleth them that they be not alarmed for we are with you; and they expectorateth upon their hands and set forth to do battle for the maidens, for verily I say unto you there were none that macheth like unto the sons of Abram and David.

5. And they found in the hallway men whose hair had become grey in their great wickedness for they were thieves who had broke through to steal and to carry away the treasures of Samuel, aye, even his daughter; and they sought to do dire injury to the strangers within his gates.

6. And it came to pass as it had been spoken that the wicked seized upon the just, and they cast Lennie the son of David upon the ground and he fell amid the crumbs beneath the rich man's table, and great was the fall thereof.

7. But the son of Abram wrestled long in his strength, and drove the unjust forth into the night; for they heard the loud lamentation of the maidens but knew not what it was, and were afraid that the wrath of the mighty fellows had fallen upon them. And again it cometh to pass as it had been written, the wicked flee when no man pursueth.

8. And when peace had been restored and the sons of Abram and David wendeth their way to their own households, they spaketh to William the son of Hildreth who was with them and upbraideth him and said: Knowest thou that thou art a coward and shieldeth thyself behind the skirts of the women. Wherefore camest thou not with us in our wrath to oppose the forces of the unrighteous in their deeds of wickedness.

9. And he answered them and said, believest thou this, verily ye have exposed yourselves to the taunts of the multitudes and called down upon thy heads the scoffs of the wise by reason of much preciousness.

10. And they believest him not but wondered greatly and said, what meanest thou?

11. And he said, thou wert deceived. The wicked thou cast out were but the brother of Mary and his friend, who were arrayed in strange raiment and did pretend falsely.

12. And when the sons of Abram and David had listened and heard these things, their wrath was even beyond the knowledge of Solomon, and they were cast down in their pride and searchest for a hole wherein to hide themselves from the eye of man.

13. But the people of the city heard of what happeneth, and rest cometh no more to the bosoms of the young men from henceforth and forever. Selah.

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:

It is to be hoped that the year upon which we are entering will not be attended with the same difficulties of administering the municipal affairs of Plainfield as has been the year from which we have just passed. The severity of the winter and the outbreak of the small pox proved evils more amenable to reasonable treatment than the unheralded mandamus which confiscated the city's resources and tended to cripple it in many ways. A single fact is enough to substantiate this. Of the cost of taking care of the city during the year 1881, including the objects of health, police, streets, law, poor, and other matters, less than $100 has been paid out by the City Treasurer. For the rest, the city owes to parties doing work and furnishing supplies, and to others, who, to keep important interests from suffering have made needed advances. $12,450.11. $6,306.64 was paid out of moneys received for city taxes and license fees, to satisfy the mandamus obtained under the suit instituted in 1880 by the Board of Freeholders, for balance of State and county quota of taxes claimed as due on levies of 1878 and 1879. The application for mandamus to recover alleged deficiency of quota in 1880, was denied by the Court, after a full statement and argument, which, could it have been heard in time, would also have defeated the suit of the previous year. The Court, in rendering its decision denying the mandamus, intimated, rather than declared, that the city might be held responsible for the State and county quota when all parties should be in court and the moneys were found to have gone through the proper channels. Seemingly, in delivering this opinion, and in indicating the applicability of Sec. 4 of the Charter amendment of 1878, the Court omitted to note that the terms of that very section prevented the city authorities from taking a step toward the issuance of the warrant for the enforced collection of any State and county taxes. One important result has been achieved by this adjudication. It is held that the charter is explicit enough (though lacking certain plain provisions on this point found in other charters) as to the assessments and control of State and county taxes. Thus, action of the city as such (provided the law permitted any action) toward pressing delinquents on the State and county list would probably be sustained by the Court. The chief practical difficulty is that the dates fixed in the above mentioned section (which we in Plainfield know as a matter of history were intended to apply to the raising of city taxes, but are now interpreted by the Court as having an application to all taxes, including those paid to the State and county) are inconsistent with those other times and periods which form a part of the general tax system in the State. This inconsistency interferes with the issue of the magisterial warrant and the enforcement of the taxes.

Although our disability has been made known to the Chosen Freeholders, they have thus far insisted on the payment of the whole quota, whether collected or not, and whether the city have power to collect or not. It is needless to say that the city has been unable to meet such demands. The County Board, after carrying over $9,112.86, claimed as deficiency of 1880 account, into the 1881 levy, has recently served notices of the commencement of two suits against the city, one for $7,452.42 for 1880 account, one for $26,647.15 on 1881 account. The correct amount of the deficiency on all State and county quotas to this date, does not exceed $16,000. No such sum as this, even, can now be paid by the city without leaving it destitute of means to pay its outstanding cash obligations, and equally unprovided for as to the necessities of the next twelve months.

Following the adjudication, it was evident that some reasonable business arrangement between the county and the city would be in order; looking probably to the assumption by the latter of the State and county burden, whenever legislative power could be obtained by the city enabling it to control the situation, meanwhile according a cessation of litigation and the removal of impediments to proper care of the city and its interests. It is well that another effort be made for the arrangement of this matter with the county authorities, and I trust this one will be more successful than that made some weeks since by your predecessors. Meantime, so long as suits are carried on against the city, we must defend our trust to the best of our ability.

The city's case, as such, has not been heard by the Court. When it is made plain to the Court that the charter, as lately expounded by Judge Dixon "will not work" (to use Mr. Cortlandt Parker's plain expression) as a means of collecting State and county taxes, that until we have either a different law or a different interpretation of the present one, not a step can be taken by the Council, or by any city officer, to force delinquents to pay these taxes, it is not reasonable to expect that the Court will demand of the city that it shall do the impossible. If such an unprecedented decision should, however, be given, it would be for the Council to determine whether or not they would be justified in raising money for city purposes, all of which would, under such conditions, be diverted from the objects indicated in the charter. As I have already stated, however, a far better plan and one even more in the interest of the county than of the city, is for both parties to recognize the difficulties of the situation and agree harmoniously, on a mutually advantageous settlement; such a one as would enable the city to use, for its own proper purposes, the means which it was the design of the charter to place at the disposal of the Common Council, and would at the same time, comprehend arrangements for obtaining careful legislation, such as would enable the city officers to enforce, beyond peradventure, the collection of all State and county taxes.

It is at least some ground for satisfaction that the real defects of our tax laws, and the misfortune of certain judicial precedents as applied to Plainfield, particularly the shortcomings of our charter in this regard, have been fully discovered and plainly set forth, after many years of misunderstandings and errors. According to Judge Dixon's opinion, the management and supervision of this business were at fault for at least a half-dozen years. Again, a decision, unfortunate for Plainfield, was rendered in 1880 declaring the inability of the city judge to carry forward the work of his predecessor in office, as to the issue of tax warrants. It is also now seen that the tax lien on real estate in our city is more than doubtful, and of course the right to sell real estate for taxes does not exist. These well nigh appalling facts (known or suspected by only a few who seem thus to have escaped their share of the public burden) taken in connection with the city's lack of practicable means to control or enforce payment of any State and county taxes show how necessary it is to obtain careful legislation, to avoid worse evils, even, than we have yet encountered.

I respectfully suggest the reference of this subject to your Law and Ordinance Committee, or the appointment of a committee of legislation from your honorable body to co-operate with the citizens' committee appointed for a like purpose. Meantime in dealing with the question of the city's liability for the quota of State and county taxes, we should exercise the same reasonable care and foresight which any upright and prudent business man would use in assuming obligations to pay large sums of money annually. It is necessary especially when assuming obligations in a trust capacity to know that our lawful resources and powers are adequate and complete beyond peradventure.

In the enforcement of the city taxes a vigorous policy has been pursued. Though, as has been intimated, there seems to be scarcely ground for construing a lien on real estate in Plainfield, even as to these municipal taxes (taking the charter and the general statutes together), there nevertheless is a means for issuing the warrant of the magistrate following a proper return of the delinquencies on the day indicated in the charter; and under this warrant city taxes have been collected the past year with more than usual promptness and success.

In order to the proper administration of the city's affairs pertaining to finance and taxation, a perfect understanding between the council and the fiscal officers is necessary; also explicit and frequent information from them to the Council, and through it to the people. In this connection it is well that a monthly report be obtained and published of the operations of the collector's office.

Despite our financial difficulties, good results in many directions have been attained during the past year. The officers and servants of the city have, in general, seemed to appreciate the necessity for increased diligence and devotion, despite the circumstances of their having increased duties to perform at very low rates of compensation, and having to take their compensation in the form of drafts on a non-paying treasury. The streets, though not improved as the public good demanded, have been reasonably protected and cleaned, and have been lighted for nine out of the twelve months. Certain nuisances of many years' standing and which were doing much harm, have been abolished, and many minor evils of a similar character have been cured. There has been a marked improvement in the health of certain sections growing out of attention to these subjects and, whilst there are still some matters of this kind which might be treated with advantage, little remains to be done that is within the range of the powers conferred under the charter. Last year a law was passed (approved March 24) by the legislature of New Jersey, entitled "An act to provide for drainage where the same is necessary to the Public Health" and this seems to furnish a means or process by which a neighborhood can, outside of municipal interference, rid itself of a certain class of unhealthful influences. Meanwhile we have a right to congratulate the city of Plainfield as being, on the whole, decidedly the healthiest in the State.

The same success that has attended the efforts to rid the city of unhealthful influences has been manifest also in the departments of law and police protection. Despite our poverty, we have won the law suits in which we have been forced to engage—thus saving considerable sums, directly and indirectly, to the tax payers; and, touching the punishment of offenders, it is proper to say that the convictions had, both before the city court and the justices of the peace—both under the city ordinances and the State law—have been prompt and significant, serving as a protection against the particular criminals and a warning to evil doers. Most of the bad characters who have attempted depredations here within the past year, have been convicted and sentenced. In one or two cases arrested parties are awaiting in jail the action of the grand jury. The tramp nuisance has had constant attention, and, though here and there for short periods, vagrants have become an annoyance, arrests and punishment of this class of offenders have been frequent enough to discourage and, for the most part, to prevent vagrancy from being pursued as a profession in Plainfield. Disorderly and indecent houses have been broken up, and the illicit selling of liquor has been checked, care being taken to enforce the ordinance bearing on this subject as well as others, even to the extent of conviction for breaking the law.

The city has been divided into four wards pursuant to a law passed early in the year.

The Council of 1881 has also occupied itself in an extended and painstaking review and revision of the ordinances of the city, and has nearly completed the task it set for itself, greatly improving and somewhat condensing the ordinances previously considered in force. It is to be hoped that your honorable body will see your way to the prompt completion of the work which has, up to the close of the year, been carried so well forward, and to the printing of the revised ordinances in suitable book or pamphlet form.

Two subjects may be mentioned in particular as necessarily left unsettled for the present. Possibly circumstances may favor their being dealt with by the Council of 1882. I refer first to the "water supply" question, and, secondly, to that of Street Lights. As to the former, I venture to recommend to the Council of 1881, that the consideration of what was needful and desirable in Plainfield should be taken up by a practical engineer or expert, and a report on the topography and requirements of our city be made, for the information of the Council and the citizens. Lack of means, among other circumstances, postponed any action of this kind. I might well add that the co-operation of the Fire Department has very properly been considered an indispensable requisite to the adoption of any plan of water supply—one most important purpose to be served being the securing of protection against fire—and the Fire Department has, like the general city administration, had its own financial and other difficulties to contend with. It is to be hoped that at no distant day, the matter may be dealt with on its merits, and that whenever the Council grants the privilege of laying pipes and placing hydrants in the streets, it will be granted to parties of unquestioned responsibility, and with proper stipulations as to work materials and supervision.

Touching street lights, it is evident that Plainfield pays too much for what it receives, or, (the lights being extinguished at midnight) receives too little for the sum it pays. This would have been remedied in some form late in the year by the last Council, but for the objection to making then any contract reaching over into 1882 or beyond. President Whiton collected valuable information showing how much better, in proportion to the charges made, other cities were served in the matter of lights, and a proposition was made by the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co. offering to light the streets all night long, for 20 nights a month, for considerably less than is now paid for lights burning one half the number of hours. This brought a counter proposition from the Plainfield Gas Light Company offering practically twice as much gas as is now furnished, at an expense increased ten per cent. beyond the present charge. I trust your honorable body will give this subject your very early attention, and either make a saving in the expense or secure a more extended, or sufficient, service, or both, if found practicable. Whilst naturally we prefer to deal with citizens of Plainfield in such matters—other things being equal—there is evidently a larger and more pressing duty of seeking the greatest good of the greatest number.

I can not do less than speak a word of commendation respecting the manner of dealing with the city poor, during the past year. The unselfish and beneficent co-operation of the ladies of the Relief Association has not only lightened the labors of the Overseer, but has effected a large saving to the city, besides making the money (or rather the city warrants issued in lieu thereof, and taken by citizens in this behalf) accomplish far more than would otherwise have been the case in relieving actual distress. If only our finances could be put at once on a satisfactory basis, and the poor fund kept intact, we might hope soon to have the means to start a "poor farm," the judicious management of which would effect a further saving and be a decided advantage to the city and its poor. I am not without hope that this may be accomplished at an early day.

It is but a trite remark that the subject of poverty has close relations with that of intemperance. How to deal practically with this subject—particularly as to granting licenses to sell intoxicating spirits—has always been a problem of difficult solution; and particularly in Plain*field, where we have one settlement divided* into two parts by the arbitrary line of Green Brook, marking the boundaries of two local governments and counties. I do not need either to present familiar facts or to urge arguments. It might, and I think would, be better for an excise board outside of the Council to have to deal with the question. But under our charter it is a duty which devolves upon your honorable body, and I can not doubt that the conclusion reached by you will be a wise one. If you grant licenses in exceptional cases I shall still seek in justice to those who pay the fees, as well as to the community, to guard against illicit selling; and if you deny license, I shall simply be doing my duty by making the most earnest efforts to have the law respected and obeyed, without fear or favor.

I feel that I am under personal obligations to the Council of 1881 for their kind and consistent co-operation in seeking to promote the public welfare, and that, in the work wrought by them, our city has benefitted through their constant and self-denying labors. I am glad to believe that my relations with your honorable body will be as cordial as have been those which have characterized my intercourse with your predecessors, and that the year 1882 will not only be, as the past year has been, one of substantial progress in many respects, but that its end may discover our municipal interests released and definitely delivered from the difficulties and misfortunes which now environ them.

Very respectfully,
L. V. F. RANDOLPH,
Plainfield, Jan. 10, 1882. Mayor.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

SKILL IN THE WORKSHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have enfeebled his hand or dimmed his sight, let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1880.

GENTS.—I have been very low, and have tried everything, to no advantage. I heard your Hop Bitters recommended by so many I concluded to give them a trial. I did, and now am around, and constantly improving, and am nearly as strong as ever.

ONLY TWO BOTTLES.

Messrs. Johnson, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of Gen. John C. Fremont, Gov. of Arizona, had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

People are constantly changing their homes from East to West and from North to South or vice versa, in search of a healthy state. WONDERFUL POWER.

When a medicine performs such cures as Kidney-Wort is constantly doing, it may truly be said to have wonderful power. MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A REMEDY FOR DIVORCE.

Marry in your own religion.

Never both be angry at once.

Never taunt with a past mistake.

Let a kiss be the prelude of a rebuke.

"I forgot" is never an acceptable excuse.

If you must criticise let it be done lovingly.

Make marriage a matter of moral judgment.

Marry into a family which you have long known.

Never make a remark at the expense of the other.

Let self-abnegation be the greatest earthly blessing.

Give your warmest sympathy for each other's trials.

If one is angry let the other part the lips only for a kiss.

Never talk at one another, either alone or in company.

Neglect the whole world besides rather than one another.

Never speak loud to one another unless the house is on fire.

Let each strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.

Marry into different blood and temperament from your own.

Always leave home with loving words, they may be the last.

Never deceive, for the heart once misled can never trust again.

The very highest felicity is in the mutual cultivation of usefulness.

Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain a fault has been committed.

It is the mother who moulds the character and fixes the destiny of the child.

Let all your mutual accommodations be spontaneous, whole-souled and free as air.

A hesitating or glum yielding to the wishes of the other always grates upon a loving heart.

Do not herald the sacrifices you make for each other's tastes, habits and preferences.

Those who marry for physical characteristics or external considerations will fall of happiness.

Consult one another in all that comes within the experience, observation and sphere of the other.

Never reflect on a past action which was done with a good motive and with the best judgment at the time.

The beautiful in heart is of a million times more avail, as securing domestic happiness, than the beautiful in person.

SPOOPENDYKE DIDN'T GO TO THE MASQUERADE.

'Say, my dear,' said Spoopendyke, as he hurried in, hot and breathless, late from his business, 'did you get me a fancy dress to wear to the masquerade to-night?'

'It's all ready,' replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, beaming. 'You go as—let me see—I go as a Spanish guitar girl, and you go as—as—it's either Louis Fourteenth, or Oliver Cromwell, or Sir Robert Burns, I've forgotten which the man called it.'

'I do, do I?' said Spoopendyke, glaring around. 'I go as one of 'em, do I? As they are all dead, and as I will do for all three, perhaps you've a coffin? Show me the coffin! Fetch out the interconvertible catafalque and help me on with it. Has it got sleeves?'

'It isn't a coffin,' exclaimed Mrs. S. 'It's a doublet and—'

'It's a doublet, is it? Well that relieves me of one of 'em. I thought from the way you spoke, Mrs. Spoopendyke, it was a triplet. Is there a trousers with it? Got a shirt? I told you to get a bandit suit, didn't I? Fetch out this Cromwell business! Show me this man Burns! Any sword go with it?'

Mrs. Spoopendyke, brought forth a worn red velvet jacket, trimmed with tarnished braid, and a pair of yellow knee-breeches, slashed up the sides. This she supplemented with a felt hat and a pair of spurs.

'Maybe it's a bandit's suit after all,' she suggested.

'Which is the Louis Fourteenth end of this thing?' demanded Mr. Spoopendyke.

'Where does the Oliver Cromwell part begin? Show me the Burns element on this schedule! If I'm going to get into this thing chronologically, I must begin with the measly king and wind off with the poet; which is the king part?' and Spoopendyke shot out of his business suit and drew on the velvet trousers. 'Where is the rest of 'em?' he demanded, surveying an expanse of unclouded limb. 'This whole thing is only one leg. Where is the pair for the other leg? Give me some more trousers.' And Spoopendyke scowled about him.

'Don't the boots come up to meet them?' asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, in some trepidation.

Spoopendyke pulled on the boots, but still there was an exposed space of nearly a foot.

'I s'pose this bare-legged arrangement is the Burns part,' grinned Spoopendyke. 'He was a highlander, and this much of me is Burns. Show me the Cromwell part now. Is that hat it?' And he put on the hat and breathed hard. 'Where's the rest of me? My head and legs are all right; bring out my back and stomach!'

Mrs Spoopendyke handed him the jacket and he plunged into it with a jerk. 'That's what you wanted,' he howled. 'Couldn't you make more'n three epochs of me. Pull that jacket down a couple of centuries, can't ye?' Spoopendyke tugged at the abbreviated coat and snorted with wrath.

'Maybe that was the way it was meant to go' argued Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'I—I saw—'

'You sawed off the coat and pants, how s'pose you saw off a rod of this hat and patch 'em out again! Bring me some Charles I. to hide my legs! Please God from whom all blessings flow, for man was made to mourn because his head was chopped off!' shrieked Spoopendyke. 'Look out for some Scotch romance!' and he ripped off the pants and fired them into the grate.

'And we can't go—go to the masquerade at all!' sobbed Mrs. Spoopendyke.

'Put three bells in my side and a torn stair carpet at my back and I'll go as a french flat! But if you think I'm going in bare legs like a baby, and bare-backed like a circus, you're left, Mrs. Spoopendyke!' and he drew on his night shirt.

'It's too awful mean for anything,' mused Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'I tried to get something that would suit him. Another time I'll get him a shoe and a pair of socks, and if he tears 'em up it won't cost so much,' and Mrs. S. said her prayers and planting her cold feet in Spoopendyke's stomach sank gently to rest.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The testimony in the Guiteau case is now all taken and the jury will soon be called upon to render their verdict, which should be "Guilty" and a speedy execution follow.

The High Bridge Branch of the Central Railroad is said to be the best paying road of its length in the State. An immense quantity of iron ore is transported over this road from various mines in Hunterdon and Morris counties.

Edward Wadsworth, who while confined in the Union County Jail for assault upon a young half-witted girl in his photograph gallery at Elizabeth, some two years since, escaped from that institution, was arrested in New York last week. On Wednesday last, he came up for trial in the Union Co. Courts and was fined $500 and costs for jail breaking.

Mr. W. F. Kidder of Grove street, Orange, ex-President of the New Jersey Driving Association, has been presented by some New York friends with a handsome whip, the like of which has never been made in this country. The bands on the whip are of solid gold and extend more than three-fourths its length. Mr. Kidder's monogram is inscribed in rubies and gold. Its value is estimated at $350.

A mysterious case of poisoning happened at Elizabeth a few days since. A man named Wm. Alcorn, died suddenly after partaking of some gruel prepared by his wife. Previous to his death, he declared that his wife had threatened to make way with him. An inquest was held over the remains on Tuesday by Coroner Stratemeyer, the jury rendering a verdict that Alcorn came to his death from poison administered by his wife.

The immigrants arrived at New York during the year ending Friday, includes: 113,465 from the British Isles, and 316,005 from other parts of Europe. There were but 24,016 that came as cabin passengers. The others experienced life in the steerage on their journey to the New World. A very limited number arrived by coast vessels from home parts. Spain sent 55 steerage and 1,501 by cabin. China's contribution was 222 saloon passengers and 117 from below decks. All of these were from native ports. Japan increased American population 49, each one of the number paying cabin rates.

Improvements in the construction of theatres and public halls, with a view of lessening the danger that may result from a panic and stampede, have occupied the attention of many ingenious and experienced minds. Mr. E. F. Underhill, of New York city, has invented and secured letters patent on an improved theatre seat which folds into a recess in the floor, leaving the back of the seat, when it is thus folded, a portion of the floor itself. The machinery of this contrivance is simple and not expensive. In case of danger or panic in a crowded auditorium, an attendant at a safe point in the front of the building, disengages a lever connected with the machinery which sustains every seat on a given floor, and in a few seconds the seats sink and their backs folding over they become part of the floor itself. But a few minutes will be required to raise the seats into their proper positions when it is desired to do so. Aside from the question of safety, Mr. Underhill's invention possesses the merit of convenience, for by applying it a theatre or concert hall can be turned into a ball-room in less than two minutes.

The Sun.
NEW YORK, 1882.
THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.
THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.
THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.
By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.
We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.
In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.
THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.
Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little.
If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.
Our terms are as follows:
For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.
The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.
The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

The treasurer shall receive all moneys belonging or in any way appertaining to the city, and deposit the same in such bank as the common council shall from time to time designate as the depository of city moneys; and he shall open and keep two distinct accounts with such bank, one in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield as Trustee for the State and County," to the credit of which he shall immediately deposit all moneys received by him for state and county taxes, and the other in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield," to the credit of which he shall deposit all other moneys which he shall receive, belonging or in any way appertaining to the city.

Sec. 3. The treasurer shall, at or immediately after the time in each year when state and county taxes in said city shall become due and payable to the county collector, pay over to said county collector all moneys theretofore received by him derived from the collection of state and county taxes, and thereafter, whenever there shall be in said bank to the credit of said account in the name of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield as Trustee for the state and County, moneys derived from state and county taxes in the aggregate equal to or exceeding five hundred dollars, he shall immediately, by his own draft on such bank therefor, pay the same over to the county collector, and so far as practicable he shall in every instance apply the moneys received from or on account of the state and county tax levy of each year to the payment of the deficiency of that year, and in each case of payment so made, he shall take a proper receipt therefor; and every other payment by the treasurer for the city shall be made by a draft on such bank, signed by him and countersigned by the city clerk, payable out of the fund in such bank to the credit of the said account in the name of the treasurer of the city of Plainfield; provided, however, that if at any time moneys derived from city taxes or other city funds, shall have been used to pay the city's quota of state and county taxes, then and in that event the treasurer shall transfer from the aforesaid account as trustee for the state and county to his aforesaid account as treasurer of the city, such sum as shall be required to make good to the city the amount so paid whenever there shall be a surplus to the credit of his said account as trustee for the state and county sufficient for that purpose over and above the amount required for the payment of the city's quota of state and county taxes.

Section 4. The Treasurer shall keep in a suitable book or books separate accounts of the several funds for which moneys shall be received or paid out by him, each under its proper head and title, so that the account of each of such funds shall show at all times the exact amount to the credit or debit of such fund. Moneys received for State and County taxes shall compose one of such funds; moneys received for general city taxes shall comprise another of such funds; moneys received for taxes for the support of the city poor shall comprise another of such funds; moneys received for licenses and for fines and penalties paid to the city shall comprise another of such funds; moneys received for the City Library shall comprise another of such funds; and moneys received from other sources shall comprise others of another of such funds. The Treasurer shall also keep a detailed record of all assessments made or authorized to be made by the Common Council, setting forth the date and purposes of each assessment, the names of persons assessed, the amounts assessed against each and the date of the payment of the same.

Section 5. Whenever the Common Council shall borrow money on the credit and in the name of the city in anticipation of the collection of taxes, in pursuance of the provisions of the city charter in that behalf, the Treasurer shall prepare and sign a note for the amount borrowed, payable at such time as shall be fixed by the Common Council in conformity with the charter, which note shall likewise be signed by the Mayor, and, unless otherwise directed by the Common Council, the Treasurer shall cause such note to be discounted at the Bank, which at the time being shall be the designated depository of city moneys, and the net proceeds thereof to be deposited and credited to the account in the name of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield in such Bank. At the maturity of any note so discounted the Treasurer shall (unless otherwise directed by the Common Council) pay the same by his own draft on such Bank payable out of the moneys therein to the credit of such last mentioned account, provided there shall be in such Bank to the credit of such account a sufficient sum for that purpose; and if he shall neglect so to do, and such payment shall not have been otherwise provided for by the Common Council, it shall be lawful for such Bank to apply so much of the moneys on deposit in such Bank to the credit of such account in the name of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield as shall be required for that purpose, to the payment of such note, with all lawful interest and charges thereon, and thereupon to debit the amount of such note and interest and charges so paid to such account. In all other cases, payments by the Treasurer for the city shall be made only upon the presentation of a warrant or warrants drawn in pursuance of the provisions of the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance providing for the issue of warrants on the City Treasurer for all current claims against the city," approved June 4, 1872.

Section 6. The Treasurer shall render to the Common Council at each of its regular meetings, a statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him for the city, and for State and County taxes, or credited or debited to the city in either of the aforesaid accounts with said Bank, from the date of his last preceding statement; and at the last meeting of the Common Council in each year he shall render to the Common Council a statement of all moneys received and disbursed for the city and for State and County taxes, or credited or debited to the city in either of the aforesaid accounts with said Bank during the current year, and also a statement of all assessments remaining unpaid.

Section 7. The Treasurer shall submit his Books to the Mayor or to the Common Council or its appropriate committee for inspection whenever he shall be requested by the Mayor or Common Council or such committee so to do.

Section 8. The ordinance entitled "An Ordinance concerning the duties of the City Treasurer," approved June 1, 1869, is hereby repealed.

SUPPLEMENT.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JANUARY 12, 1882.

First Annual Message

OF HIS EXCELLENCY,

GEORGE C. LUDLOW,

GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY,

To the Legislature—Session of 1882.

Gentlemen of the Senate and General Assembly:

In pursuance of my duty under the Constitution, to communicate to you the condition of the State, and to recommend such measures as I may deem expedient, I take pleasure in thus presenting the result of my observations during the past year and in making suggestions as to such of our public affairs as have a bearing upon the welfare of the State.

A kind and overruling Providence has been pleased to vouchsafe to us a period of peace, prosperity and public happiness, unbroken, save in one instance, by any extraordinary event. The law, giving, as it does, protection and safety to the rights of all, has been regularly and wisely administered and promptly executed; the public officers and servants have, with fidelity, performed the duties and guarded the trusts committed to their care; while a drought has in some degree lessened the productiveness of our farms, yet the injury has been temporary and partly compensated for by the higher prices which the tillers of the soil have been able to secure; mercantile affairs have been active and prosperous; the manufacturers have been able to secure increased business at remunerative rates; new avenues for railroads have been opened and utilized, and those which had been compelled to go into insolvency have assumed, or are about to assume, the management of their own affairs with fair prospects of success. Turn in what direction we may, we find evidences of a natural and healthy prosperity existing with us as individuals and as a people. There has been neither pestilence nor public disorder, but as a State we have prospered and in a measure advanced.

The one dark spot upon the picture was the assassination of the President of the United States, in July last. The shock created by the horror of the act and the universal regret felt that one who had entered on a new career of public service, with such bright hopes of honor to himself and benefit to the nation, have scarcely been dulled by a recollection of the noble manliness of the victim; by the universal outburst of sympathy for him and for our country from within and without our borders, and by the overwhelming proof that it was the act, not of conspirators, but of a single individual, barely accountable for his deeds. The fairness and impartiality which have marked the trial of so villainous a criminal, at a time so near to the commission of his crime, are deserving of our own respect and that of the civilized world. I took occasion on the announcement of the wounding of the President at once to communicate with the Secretary of State, and subsequently, on his arrival in this State, I tendered to him on the part of the State whatever services could be rendered looking to his comfort and convenience; but all that sympathy and intelligence and earnest effort could do were of no avail. He died in our State. Together with several of the officers of the State and my personal staff, I attended the funeral ceremonies which took place at Elberon and Cleveland, and joined in the last sad rites which are all the tributes which the living can pay to those who have gone before.

FINANCES.

The financial condition of the State is well and fully set forth in the reports of the Treasurer and Comptroller. The income and expenditures of the State are divided by the Treasurer into four general accounts, viz.: Agricultural College Fund, State Library Fund, School Fund and State Fund, and will be considered in that order.

The Agricultural College Fund is composed of State bonds resulting from the sale of lands donated by the general government. The income from these securities, amounting to six thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars ($6,960), is collected by the State Treasurer and paid over to the Trustees of Rutgers Scientific School for certain specified purposes.

The State Library Fund consists of an unexpended balance of one hundred and twenty-eight dollars and fifty cents ($128.50); an annual appropriation of seven hundred and fifty dollars ($750); and a special appropriation made by the Legislature of 1881 of one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500); amounting to two thousand three hundred and seventy-eight dollars and thirty cents ($2,378.30). Of this amount, there was expended during the year, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and two cents ($1,737.02), leaving a balance for the coming year of six hundred and forty-one dollars and twenty-eight cents ($641.28), in addition to the annual appropriation of seven hundred and fifty dollars ($750) above mentioned. This account is not treated as a separate fund by the Comptroller, its income being derived exclusively from appropriations from the State Fund.

The School Fund.—The reports show a steady increase in the receipts and accumulations of this fund. This is due to the fact that not only is there being annually added to the principal amount a large sum of money derived from the sale and lease of riparian lands, but that the income of the fund from investments already made exceeds the only expenditure which can, under present laws, be made from it, viz.: an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) to aid in the support of public schools. The assets of the fund, at the close of the fiscal year, may be stated as follows:

Railroad and bank stock	$46,500 00
United States bonds	305,000 00
Railroad bonds	117,000 00
State and city bonds	35,000 00
Bonds of school districts	22,760 00
Bonds and mortgages	958,138 50
Principal of Riparian leases	959,674 95
Real estate	62,000 00
	$2,506,888 45
Interest due on bonds and mortgages	47,154 79
Rents due on Riparian leases	55,913 61
Cash on hand	290,706 15
Total property of the fund	$2,899,658 00

These figures show an increase since the last report of one hundred and thirty-five thousand five hundred and eighty-nine dollars and five cents ($135,589.05).

The receipts of the fund and the sources from which they are derived is shown by the following summary:

Interest on United States bonds	$12,975 00
Interest on Railroad bonds	7,020 00
Interest on New Jersey bonds	1,200 00
Interest on Jersey City bonds	900 00
Interest on bonds of school districts	5,345 70
Dividends on bank stock	660 00
Dividends on railroad stock	3,450 00
Interest on bonds and mortgages	42,347 34
Rentals on riparian leases	61,235 52
Grants of riparian lands	7,816 41
Tax on Hibernia Mine R. R.	747 06
Rent of real estate	1,313 75
Loans paid off; and leases converted into grants	120,458 28
	$267,369 05

There should be deducted from this amount the last item of one hundred and twenty thousand four hundred and fifty-eight dollars and twenty-eight cents ($120,458.28), because it is not properly to be considered as a part of the income of the fund, but as a change in the form of the securities from loans and leases to cash in hand. This leaves, as the actual income of the fund, one hundred and forty-six thousand nine hundred and ten dollars and seventy-seven cents ($146,910.77). The only disbursement which can, at present, be made from these receipts is the one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), above mentioned; and this being made, leaves a balance of nearly forty-seven thousand dollars ($47,000) to be invested, or otherwise disposed of. There is no reason to believe that this income will decrease in future years; as the investments from which it is derived are safe and substantial. On the contrary it is reasonably certain that it will be increased because of the continued receipts from the sale and lease of riparian lands, and the expected collection of the amount due as unpaid interest on bonds and mortgages and rents on riparian leases already made. This is certainly a very favorable showing of this branch of the State's finances; and particularly so, when it is considered that the method of levying the two-mill tax for the support of public schools under the act of 1881, will produce over the yield of the previous year an increase of three hundred and four thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars and thirty-two cents ($304,955.32).

The State Fund.—Under this title are recorded the receipts and expenditures for the maintenance of the government of the State. The securities of this fund are stated to be as follows:

Stock of the Joint Companies	$288,700 00
Bonds of the Joint Companies	24,000 00
Centennial stock	74,116 67
Bonds of the several counties for surplus revenue of United States, loaned	764,670 44
	$1,151,487 11

From this amount there should be deducted the Centennial stock, which is valueless, and the bonds of the counties, on which no interest is paid. This will leave as actual assets the stocks and bonds of the Joint Companies, of a par value of three hundred and twelve thousand seven hundred dollars ($312,700).

The operations of the State Fund are thus summarized from the statements of the Comptroller:

Balance in bank Nov. 1, 1880	$384,730 45
Receipts	878,747 87
	$1,263,478 32
Disbursements	1,096,203 93
Balance in bank Oct. 31, 1881	$167,274 39

That we may the better understand the means by which the State Fund has reached its present condition, it will be well to examine the reports of the Comptroller of the Treasury for several years past. The Comptroller, at the close of 1879, having an available balance in bank of two hundred and ninety thousand six hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty-three cents ($290,688.63), subject to no charges for unpaid appropriations, made a very careful and liberal estimate for the expenses of the then coming year, putting them at nine hundred and ten thousand dollars ($910,000). This estimate was in excess of the ordinary expenses of the previous year. The Legislature of 1880 authorized expenditures which caused the disbursements to amount to the sum of one million seven thousand three hundred and seventy-nine dollars and thirty-four cents ($1,007,379.34), an excess of ninety-seven thousand three hundred and seventy-nine dollars and thirty-four cents ($97,379.34) over the estimates. At the close of 1880, the then Comptroller, having a long and intimate acquaintance with the finances of the State, in a report remarkably clear and full, taking the expenditures of the previous year as a basis, and making ample allowances for contingencies, estimated the disbursements of the coming year at one million and twenty thousand dollars ($1,020,000). The authorized expenditures of that year reached the sum of one million ninety-six thousand two hundred and three dollars and ninety-three cents ($1,096,203.93),—an excess over the estimates of seventy-six thousand two hundred and three dollars and ninety-three cents ($76,203.93). The excess of disbursements in the two years, 1880 and 1881, over the estimates was, therefore, one hundred and seventy-three thousand five hundred and eighty-three dollars and twenty-seven cents ($173,583.27); and the balance in bank October 31, 1881, was one hundred and sixty-seven thousand two hundred and seventy-four dollars and thirty-nine cents ($167,274.39). The Comptroller estimates the expenditures of the coming year at one million one hundred and ninety thousand dollars ($1,190,000)—an excess over his estimate of the receipts for the year, and the available bank balance, of two hundred and sixty-four thousand five hundred and sixty-nine dollars and thirty-six cents ($264,569.36). Recognizing the utter inability of any possible receipts to meet these expenditures, he points out two courses of action—without recommending either of them—the sale of a sufficient amount of the State's securities, or the imposition of a State tax. The first method, I agree with my predecessors, would be ill-judged; because the possession of these securities enables the Treasury to borrow money to meet any unexpected demand, as has often occurred in the past, and undoubtedly will in the future; and because it would result only in a postponement and aggravation of the evil attempted to be treated, inasmuch as the State would be deprived of the income now derived from them. As to the second plan suggested, I feel that, while it is advisable that the government of the State should be administered with reasonable liberality, it is equally clear that the people have the right to demand that that administration should be as economical as is consistent with the dignity and well-being of the State. Before resorting to the levying of a tax, therefore, our first duty should be to ascertain whether, or not, the receipts cannot be increased, and the existing expenditures from, and charges against, the State Fund be judiciously reduced.

Taking as a basis of calculation the receipts and disbursements of 1881, a careful examination leads me to the following conclusions:

Receipts.—The State tax has all been collected, and the receipts for next year will not include this item of one hundred and twenty thousand five hundred and sixty-four dollars and twenty cents ($120,564.20). The State Prison receipts will in all probability be increased to eighty thousand dollars ($80,000); there will be paid by railroad corporations on taxes of former years about thirty thousand dollars ($30,000); the amount received from judicial fees should be increased ten thousand dollars ($10,000); and from official fees some seven thousand dollars ($7,000). In view of the marked appreciation in the values of railroad property in this State, it does not seem unreasonable to expect that the tax derived from railroad corporations will be considerably increased during the year. The other items will, it is believed, be substantially the same as last year. Taking the above differences into account, it seems safe to estimate the receipts for the coming year at eight hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars ($828,000). The balance in bank at the beginning of the fiscal year was, as stated above, one hundred and sixty-seven thousand two hundred and seventy-four dollars and thirty-nine cents ($167,274.39)—which includes deposits in insolvent banks, to be deducted—leaving an available balance of one hundred and forty-five thousand four hundred and thirty dollars and sixty-four cents ($145,430.64), which added to the probable receipts gives as the total resources of the Treasury for the present year about nine hundred and seventy-three thousand dollars ($973,000), exclusive of the possible increase of the tax on corporations.

It will be remembered that the estimated expenditures for 1880 were only nine hundred and ten thousand dollars ($910,000).

Disbursements.—Among the estimated expenditures for the year from the State Fund are the items of salaries of the Riparian Commission and their officers; support of and repairs to the Normal and Farnum Schools; salaries and expenses of the State Superintendent and assistant; expenses of the State Board of Education and of Teachers' Institutes; and legal and other expenses connected with school fund investments and with suits in which the fund is interested. All of these expenses are for the purposes of public education; they have hitherto been paid from the State Fund, but, in view of the cramped condition of that fund, in my judgment they should be borne by the fund provided for educational purposes. The income of the School Fund is sufficiently large to meet this expense without interfering with the annual appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000). While the School Fund was weak, it was well that it should be aided by the surplus wealth of the State Fund; but these conditions have been reversed. The School Fund has reached very large proportions, and the effect of this change will simply be to impose upon it an expense fairly chargeable against it, and relieve the State Fund of an expense which otherwise must be met by taxation.

Upon the idea that the State is expected to receive the fines and costs imposed upon criminals sent to the State Prison from the several counties, it is called upon to pay the large item of transportation and costs; as a matter of practice it receives nothing, and the expense should be transferred to the counties, where it properly belongs. To meet this expense by a State tax would be unequal and unjust, as will be seen by the fact that during the last year three of the counties called for no part of the expenditure; and more than one-third of the whole amount was paid to the authorities of a single county,—while another of equal size and population received less than one-third as much.

Several of the institutions of the State report considerable balances on hand, the accumulations of previous years, and if the appropriations for the year are made with a view of using up these balances and restricting them to necessary expenses, a large saving can be made. The State Prison expenses need not be so large as last year, as no extraordinary repairs, such as were then paid for, are contemplated. The reprinting of law and equity reports involves a considerable annual expenditure and may be discontinued without much disadvantage, and a saving might be made in the original publication of these reports. The salaries paid to legislative officers are largely in excess of those paid for similar services to other officers of the State, and might very properly be reduced. The cost of the inspection of fisheries is large, and the expense of the propagation of food fish might very well be dispensed with, temporarily, at least. I am advised that the expenses on account of the militia may properly be reduced at least twenty (20) per cent. The number of newspapers publishing the laws, proclamations, &c., might very safely be cut down without materially affecting the ability of the people to be informed of the action of their representatives. The cost of printing the various reports is unnecessarily large by reason of the fact that there is much contained in some of them that is valueless; a little attention on the part of some competent persons authorized to supervise these before publication would effect a considerable saving without any detriment to the documents themselves. The further publication of historical records could well be suspended for the present. The expenditures to county lunatic asylums will necessarily be less and might be further reduced by an examination into the method of admission of patients, and the payment for such only as would be paid for in the State institutions. The pension account and the expense of repairs to buildings will be less than last year. The payment of bounties on sugar and fibrous plants should either be discontinued or provision made that they shall not exceed a small amount.

Should these suggestions be adopted by you, and the line of thought pursued, I have no doubt that it will be found that we have succeeded in placing our expenditures, including those peculiar to the present year, within the limits of our probable receipts, as stated above. The result of this action will be that we will not only have avoided the imposition of a State tax for this year, but, what is of far greater importance, we will have inaugurated such measures of economy as will enable us to avoid it in the future;—or, if it then should become absolutely necessary, we can limit it to the smallest possible amount. To do otherwise would, in my opinion, be to foster and encourage the growth of habits of extravagance, which from the very nature of things will undoubtedly outstrip any probable increase of our resources. Besides, it must be remembered that while the burden of a State tax would be but light to some communities, yet there are others upon which it would fall with heavy weight. There is, unfortunately, no small part of our State which is to-day struggling along under the weight of necessary municipal and county taxes, and there are two cities which have confessed their utter inability to meet existing liabilities, and have placed themselves at the mercy of their creditors. To impose an additional load upon these, unless it be absolutely necessary, would be alike unwise and oppressive.

SINKING FUND.

The report of the Commissioners gives the following statement of the assets of the fund:

Principal amount of mortgages	$797,217 19
Interest due on same	44,749 64
United States bonds	20,000 00
Chambersburg school bonds	8,000 00
Notes	3,806 37
Real estate (thirty-five (35) pieces) purchased at foreclosure	373,512 36
Balance in bank	17,713 48
	$1,265,000 43

The outstanding war bonds, for the security of which this fund is intended, amount to one million eight hundred and ninety-six thousand dollars ($1,896,000). One hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) of these bonds mature each year up to 1891, and to meet them as they come due there is annually paid from the State Fund the sum of ninety thousand dollars ($90,000), the Sinking Fund being required to provide the additional ten thousand dollars ($10,000) of principal and the amount of interest. As will be noticed in the above statement of assets, the Commissioners have been compelled to purchase by foreclosure a considerable amount of real estate, for the protection of the fund. These properties are, in the main, considered valuable. The Commissioners have, very properly, made some expenditures in keeping them in a saleable condition, so that when there shall be a fair market for real estate, they can be disposed of at a very little, if any, loss to the State.

RIPARIAN COMMISSION.

The business of the Commission for the past year was very large, and shows a considerable increase over that of the preceding year. There is evidently a disposition on the part of individual shore owners to secure by grant or lease the rights of the State in the riparian lands in front of them. This disposition is constantly growing, and will continue to increase as public opinion becomes more settled in regard to these rights. The decisions of the Courts are gradually sweeping away all doubts as they arise, and the title of the State will soon be decided beyond dispute. The Commissioners report the following transactions during the year:

Grants of the fee	$65,106 59
Leases, bearing 7 per cent. interest	73,397 09
	$138,503 68
Received on grants and leases of previous years	61,835 82
	$200,339 50

There has been received since 1864 for riparian grants the sum of one million three hundred and eighty-nine thousand nine hundred and eight dollars and thirty-four cents ($1,389,908.34), in addition to which leases have been made of the principal amount of nine hundred and sixty-nine thousand five hundred and seventy-four dollars and nine cents ($969,574.09). On these seven per centum rent is paid. The expenses of the Commission are paid out of the State Fund.

STATE PRISON.

The reports of the Keeper, Supervisor and Inspectors are full, and contain valuable information and suggestions. The number of convicts on the 31st of October, 1880, was eight hundred and thirty-six (836); four hundred and twenty-eight (428) were received during the year and four hundred and sixty-one (461) discharged, leaving the number in confinement on October 31, 1881, eight hundred and three (803). The following statement of the financial operations of the institution is given by the Inspectors, and practically agrees with the figures as presented by the State Treasurer:

Maintenance	$58,004 52
Less increase of inventory	1,195 84
		$56,808 68
Repairs		8,785 37
Repairs extraordinary		7,550 88
Salaries of deputies, &c.		46,345 19
Salaries of Supervisor, Keeper and Inspectors		9,207 34
Paid discharged convicts		1,339 50
		$125,036 45
By cash received from Supervisor		56,147 52
Net loss to the State		$68,888 94

This amount is twenty-one thousand five hundred and twenty-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents ($21,528.67) in excess of the deficiency of last year. The increase is accounted for by a combination of circumstances. 1st. There was charged against the institution this year seven thousand five hundred and fifty dollars ($7,550) for repairs of shops injured by the fire; 2d. The sum of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) was paid to a contractor for loss of time and business caused by the burning of the shops, and the payment diminishes the amount of cash reported as having been paid by the Supervisor; 3d. An excess of loss in productive labor this year over that of last, pending the rebuilding of the shops, amounting to about nineteen hundred dollars ($1,900); 4th. The abandonment by one of the contractors of his contract, three months before it would have expired, at a loss to the State of twenty-four hundred dollars ($2,400); 5th. A loss in the employment of labor during the adjustment of the contracts under the new law, amounting to about thirteen thousand four hundred dollars ($13,400), making a total of twenty-six thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars ($26,750). Allowing for these losses peculiar to the year, it would seem that no greater deficit occurs this year than the last. Or, in other words, that had the opportunity been afforded to work the men as many days this year as last, the amount of earnings would have been the same, and the comparison between the income and the expenditures would have been as favorable.

The law passed at the last session of the Legislature, limiting the number of men to be employed in any one branch of labor to one hundred (100) has been strictly complied with by the authorities. Contracts have been made with different parties for the supplying of labor in the manufacture of seven (7) different articles. These contracts, while requiring the manufacturers to pay for twenty (20), forty (40), eighty (80) and one hundred men, whether used or not, allow them to employ as high as one hundred (100) men if their business requires it. And, as a matter of fact, there have been used and paid for, at times, in the month of October last, as nearly as four hundred and seventy-five (475) men, with a daily average during the month of four hundred and nineteen (419). The reports of the officers point strongly to the conclusion that there would be no difficulty in employing all the available force if sufficient accommodations were provided.

The Inspectors and the Supervisor unite in the statement, however, that, at the present rates received for the labor of the prisoners, even if all the men were employed, the State would not receive more than ninety thousand dollars ($90,000) per annum. To meet the usual and ordinary expenses of the prison one hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($120,000) is required. An offer was made to the Supervisor in June last by a manufacturer to take all the labor of the prisoners at rates which would have produced an annual income of one hundred and ten thousand dollars ($110,000); but he was unable to accept it because of the law above mentioned, and contracts were made as has been stated, which are expected, with other ordinary receipts, to produce some eighty thousand dollars ($80,000). But even at the prices now obtained it is claimed to be practically impossible to employ more men than at present, because the subdivision of contracts calls for more shop room, for the storage of raw material and manufactured goods and for shipping facilities, than is at the disposal of the authorities. How best to provide this is a question of importance to the institution and the State. It has been proposed that the prison walls should be extended so as to include the grounds now occupied by the arsenal. This plan would necessitate the building of a new arsenal elsewhere, and the almost entire reconstruction of workshops or other structures in the arsenal grounds, because the buildings now there would be entirely unfitted for the new purposes. This would necessarily entail a very large outlay of money, which, in the present experimental condition of the new law, I would consider it very unwise to make. There is, however, a large plot of ground, between the prison wall and the arsenal, of which only about one-third is occupied by the new workshop and structures connected therewith. Examination and consideration of the subject convince me that it would be much better to construct on this ground buildings suitable for storage and shipping rooms, and thereby relieve the present building of much which occupies considerable space, and does not need the protection of so massive and expensive a structure. This being done, the opportunity would be afforded of employing all the men whose labor is likely to be sought for under the present system.

REFORMATORY INSTITUTIONS.

Reform School for Boys.—The reports of the managers and superintendent show the number of inmates at the beginning of the year to have been two hundred and fifty-eight (258); committed and returned to the school during the year, ninety-eight (98); total, three hundred and fifty-six (356). Of this number fifty-eight (58) were returned to relatives and friends; twenty-one (21) were put out to farmers; five (5) escaped; two (2) died; and four (4) otherwise disposed of; total, ninety (90). The number remaining in the Institution on thirty-first October last was two hundred and sixty-six (266). Of the number committed during the year thirteen (13) were over the age fixed by the law, and fifteen (15) were for minor offences, such as vagrancy, truancy and incorrigibility. The financial statement shows receipts (exclusive of balance on hand) amounting to fifty thousand seven hundred and twenty-two dollars and seven cents ($50,722.07); of which thirty-three thousand dollars ($33,000) were from the State; fifteen thousand four hundred and ninety-two dollars and sixteen cents ($15,492.16) from the labor of the boys on various contracts; one thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight dollars and eighty-two cents ($1,978.82) from produce, material and stock sold; and two hundred and fifty-one dollars and nine cents ($251.09) from miscellaneous sources. The discrepancy between the amount reported as received by this institution, and that paid by the State Treasurer,—three thousand dollars ($3,000),—is accounted for by the fact that that amount was paid and received after the close of the fiscal year.

The disbursements were fifty-six thousand three hundred and ninety-two dollars and twenty-four cents ($56,392.24), of which forty thousand eight hundred and thirty-five dollars and seven cents ($40,835.07) were for salaries, provisions, labor, fuel, clothing and other expenses for the support of the institution; eleven thousand four hundred and fifty-nine dollars and sixty-seven cents ($11,459.67) for machinery, farm implements, boilers and boiler house, pumps and fire apparatus, furniture, repairs and improvements to buildings, and labor and machinery at brick yard; and four thousand and ninety-seven dollars and fifty cents ($4,097.50) for new barn.

The health of the institution has been unusually good. The new sources discovered and utilized have yielded a plentiful supply of pure, wholesome water. Precautions have been taken against the danger of fire by the purchase of a steam fire pump and apparatus. The farm has been well worked, and at a profit of nearly five thousand dollars ($5,000). The brick yard turned out four hundred and sixty thousand (460,000) brick and eighteen thousand (18,000) drain tile. Four hundred thousand (400,000) of the bricks were used in the construction of the barns and walks, and would have cost, if purchased, about six dollars ($6) per thousand; and some were sold; the tile were used for drainage. The total cost of this department was one thousand one hundred and sixty-nine dollars and thirty-eight cents ($1,169.38). The shirt manufactory and laundry, in which the labor of the boys is hired out, produced an income of fifteen thousand four hundred and ninety-two dollars and sixteen cents ($15,492.16), a result reached without at all overworking them, as is evidenced by the fact that one hundred and seventy (170) of them have been given credit for eight hundred and forty-seven dollars and ninety-eight cents ($847.98) for work done above the tasks set them.

The improvements in buildings and machinery heretofore authorized have been completed, and suggestions are made as to others, which, while not necessary, will tend to the convenience of the institution, but the many other subjects of expenditure, some of which are pressing, should preclude for the present any other appropriations in this direction.

Industrial School for Girls.—The report of the operations of this institution for the past year shows a continuance of its proper management. The number of pupils at the beginning of the year was forty-one (41); received, nine (9); total, fifty (50). Of this number fifteen (15) were indentured; five (5) discharged and five (5) were returned to their relatives—leaving twenty-five (25) at the close of the year. The payment made by the State last year was three thousand dollars ($3,000), which, with other receipts, amounted to six thousand six hundred and ninety-two dollars and seventy-two cents ($6,692.72). Of this amount, six thousand two hundred dollars and forty cents ($6,200.40) was expended, leaving a balance of four hundred and ninety-two dollars and thirty-two cents ($492.32).

I call your attention to the propriety of limiting the scope of these institutions to the purposes for which they were designed: the seclusion and reformation of youthful offenders against the law, who may thus be turned from the life of crime on which they have entered, rather than the furnishing by the State of parental care and and control to refractory youth. If they are kept within these bounds the present accommodations will be ample for years; if allowed to go beyond them, there will be a constant demand for money.

SCHOOLS.

The report of the State Superintendent gives an exhibit of the condition of the public schools. The amount raised by the two-mill tax—one million three hundred and twenty-two thousand seven hundred and forty dollars ($1,322,740)—is an increase of three hundred and four thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars and thirty-two cents ($304,955.32) over that of last year; and the number of pupils enrolled is two hundred and three thousand five hundred and forty-two (203,542)—a decrease of eleven thousand four hundred and nineteen (11,419) from that of the previous year. The law of last year, providing a new method for the assessment and distribution of the school tax, has been carried into effect without any expression of dissatisfaction.

NORMAL SCHOOL.

This institution continues to increase in prosperity and influence. There were during the last year two hundred and thirty-six (236) pupils, and the last graduating class numbered fifty (50) persons, nearly all of whom found immediate employment in schools throughout the State. This fact bears strong testimony of the estimation in which this institution is held by the local school authorities, and is conclusive as to the need which it fills. The health of the pupils at the date of the report was good. Some improvements in the boarding houses are suggested, which are well worthy of consideration. The amount paid by the State during the last year on account of the institution was sixteen thousand and fifty-six dollars and twenty-four cents ($16,056.24)—fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) for support and one thousand and fifty-six dollars and twenty-four cents ($1,056.24) for repairs.

THE INSANE.

The care of the insane in this State is entrusted to the State institutions at Trenton and Morristown and to County Asylums in the counties of Essex, Hudson, Burlington, Camden, Passaic and Cumberland. For the support of its insane the State pays one dollar ($1) per week for each county patient in the State and county asylums, and seven dollars ($7) per week for each convict patient in the State asylums. Each county pay three dollars ($3) per week for each patient sent from it. These two payments are the principal sources of revenue of the State institutions.

The report of the managers of the Trenton Asylum shows that there were at the beginning of the present fiscal year five hundred and fifty (550) patients under treatment in that institution; one hundred and fifty-seven (157) were admitted, making the total number under treatment seven hundred and seven (707); one hundred and thirty (130) were discharged or died, leaving five hundred and seventy-seven (577) at the close of the year, of whom four hundred and sixty-one (461) are county, thirty-six (36) State, and about eighty (80) private patients. This number is as large as can be properly cared for and treated in the institution. The State patients are such as have been, after the commission of a crime, either declared innocent on the ground of insanity or have become insane during the term of punishment. The managers renew their protest against the confinement of this class of patients in this asylum, because of the want of room for their classification, owing to the crowded condition of the institution, and because they are unable to make proper provision for the double duty of guarding them as prisoners and caring for them as patients. Of the fifty-nine (59) patients of this class which have been sent to the asylum seven (7) have escaped, eight (8) have died, and (3) have been discharged, as recovered, feigning insanity, &c. The managers have used every effort to keep the buildings and grounds in good condition with the means at their disposal. The machinery for water supply has been improved and extensive precautions taken against the danger of the building taking fire from the heating apparatus. The farm, dairy and grist mill have continued to be sources of profit to the institution, in addition to the advantage of affording a guarantee of the quality of food supply. The inventory shows property of the value of one hundred and fourteen thousand three hundred dollars ($114,300), an increase of five thousand three hundred and fourteen dollars ($5,314). There has been paid from the State Treasury for the support of the institution during the past year forty-four thousand and eighty-four dollars and twenty-six cents ($44,084.26); of which twenty-one thousand seven hundred and twenty-one dollars and fifty-six cents ($21,721.56) was for county patients; thirteen thousand nine hundred and seventy-four dollars and seventy cents ($13,974.70) for insane convicts; seven thousand two hundred dollars ($7,200) for salaries, and one hundred and eighty-eight dollars ($188) for appraisement of property and fees of experts in determining insanity.

The Morristown Asylum contained at the beginning of the fiscal year five hundred and eighty-six (586) patients; one hundred and eighty-seven (187) were admitted, making the total number under treatment seven hundred and seventy-three (773); of these one hundred and thirty-two (132) were discharged or died; leaving in the institution at the close of the year six hundred and forty-one (641) patients, of whom five hundred and seventeen (517) are county patients and one hundred and twenty-four (124) private patients. There are no convict patients in this institution. The managers have just completed a storage reservoir which ensures a plentiful and regular water supply. They ask an appropriation of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) for the completion of the building and the improvement of the grounds, in order that they may be made available for the proper exercise of the patients. The institution has been kept in good order, and the farm, garden and dairy show a net profit of nearly four thousand dollars ($4,000). The annual inventory shows property of the value of ninety-nine thousand four hundred and seventy-three dollars and fourteen cents ($99,473.14); an increase of seven hundred and forty-nine dollars and ninety-eight cents ($749.98) over last year. There has been paid from the State Treasury to this institution during the past year, thirty-five thousand four hundred and twenty-two dollars and sixteen cents ($35,422.16); of which twenty-five thousand six hundred and ninety-three dollars and thirteen cents ($25,693.13) was for county patients; nine thousand four hundred and fifty dollars ($9,450) for salaries, and two hundred and seventy-nine dollars and three cents ($279.03) for expenses of appraisement and of the managers.

The Commissioners of the Morristown Asylum report the disbursement of six thousand one hundred and four dollars and eight cents ($6,104.08) for expenses connected with the building of a new reservoir, &c., and a balance in hand of six thousand one hundred and twenty-seven dollars and thirty-eight cents ($6,127.38).

Of the several county asylums no knowledge is had except as to the number of patients for whom the State is called upon to pay one dollar ($1) per week under the act of April 4th, 1873. The amount paid to these institutions last year was forty-one thousand three hundred and twenty-nine dollars and twenty-eight cents ($41,329.28), a part of which, however, was for previous years for which no bills had been presented. The number of patients in the several institutions at the date of their last bill presented to the Comptroller was as follows: Essex, three hundred and three (303); Hudson, two hundred and seventeen (217); Burlington, sixty-seven (67); Camden, seventy-four (74); Passaic, thirty-one (31); Cumberland, seventy-one (71)—a total of seven hundred and sixty-three (763). How these patients are admitted, how cared for and treated, and how discharged, are matters about which the State authorities have neither any knowledge nor the means of securing any. The law simply requires them to pay one dollar per week for each county patient certified by the director of the board of chosen freeholders to have been supported in such asylums.

While this law seems to be fair, yet it is subject to great abuses. If the State pays the same per capita to the county asylums as to those of the State, it should receive the same services; the beneficiaries should be only such as would be admitted to the State institutions; they should receive equally good care and treatment, and be subject to the same rules as to discharge. The subject is worthy of your careful examination and consideration; and I have no doubt if they are bestowed upon it, and the system is placed upon a proper basis, the result will be a considerable reduction in the expense to the State.

DEAF AND DUMB, BLIND AND FEEBLE MINDED.

In pursuance of a method long since established, the State provides for the care and instruction of this class of pupils in institutions located in other States. This has been done because it avoided the expenditure of a large capital amount for the purchase of land and erection of buildings, and because it is believed that the annual expenditure is not more in such establishments, than would be needed to maintain a system requiring special corps of instructors and special appliances, in addition to the ordinary expenses of the care of the pupils. All the necessities of the case are met, and the institutions to which the State's pupils are sent, are worthy of every confidence; some of them being under the charge of gentlemen who have acquired a world-wide reputation in the profession. The number of New Jersey pupils upon the rolls of the several institutions and the amounts which they were entitled to charge for the same, during the past year, were:

Deaf and Dumb	156	$48,004 00
Blind	40	11,390 00
Feeble Minded	57	14,790 00
		$74,184 00

The institutions for feeble minded children have, in the course of the year, refused the admission of certain applicants on the ground that they were subjects of care, rather than of instruction. The law, as at present framed, is based upon the idea of the instruction of pupils of these classes, and I have been to some extent restricted by it. And yet, some of the cases of the greatest hardship and necessity are those of persons utterly incapable of receiving instruction, for whom, under the law, there is no provision. Whether or not such persons should be made the subjects of the State's care, in our Asylums or otherwise, is a matter for your consideration and decision.

HOME FOR DISABLED SOLDIERS.

This institution established in 1866, has continued to meet the demand for which it was created, namely, the care of soldiers of the State who have become disabled by wounds or sickness contracted in or consequent upon their service, and who are necessitous. This policy was one worthy of the State, and has been liberally maintained—the State having contributed to it in the last nine years over three hundred and sixty-nine thousand dollars ($369,600.) The report of the institution for the past year shows that there were three hundred and sixty (360) inmates on October 31, 1880; new admissions during the year, one hundred and twelve (112); readmissions, two hundred and twenty-one (221); total, six hundred and ninety-three (693). There were discharged, two hundred and seventy-two (272); expelled, twenty-one (21), and thirty-six (36) have died, leaving at the close of the year, three hundred and sixty-four (364) inmates. Of the total number of inmates during the year five hundred and fifty-six (556) served in the New Jersey regiments, and one hundred and thirty-eight (138) in those of other States and the regular army and navy. While these figures indicate that the Home is used temporarily by many persons, yet it is also clear that it is of permanent advantage and benefit to a large number of soldiers of New Jersey, for whom it was designed. Nor are its benefits limited to those who receive care within the walls of the institution, for the report shows that out of a total expenditure of thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000), nearly ten thousand dollars ($10,000) was distributed among a class of beneficiaries known as "out-patients," that is, "persons who have some, but not sufficient means for their comfortable support." The receipts for the running of the institution, as reported by the superintendent, are made up of thirty-four thousand two hundred and ninety-five dollars and twenty-six cents ($34,295.26) from the State, four hundred and thirty-seven dollars and thirty-five cents ($437.35) from the sale of produce, &c., and eight hundred and forty-one dollars and two cents ($841.02) paid by patients drawing pensions. The last item is received under the provision of the act that the applicant for admission shall give his "consent and agreement to transfer to the State for the use of the Home any pension to which he may be entitled from any State, or from the United States, during the time he shall be a patient at said Home." Three hundred and ninety-nine (399) of the beneficiaries received pensions of over eight dollars ($8) per month from the General Government. The managers ask an allowance of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) in addition to the regular appropriation of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000). As there remains to their credit in the hands of the State Treasurer an undrawn balance of nine thousand one hundred and seventy-four dollars and sixty-one cents ($9,174.61), it would seem that the regular appropriation will be more than enough to meet the expenses of the institution for the ensuing year.

The Legislature of last year, recognizing the fact that the lease of the premises now occupied by this institution would soon expire, adopted a resolution looking to the acquirement by the State of a suitable property and the erection of buildings thereon for the use of the Home. In this direction, I suggest, whether it would not be wise to devote to the uses of this institution the establishment formerly used as a Soldiers' Children's Home. The grounds are ample, pleasantly and healthfully located, easily accessible for all purposes and abundantly supplied with water; the buildings are commodious and well adapted to the purpose, and have, during the past year, been put in perfect repair, and the State has no other use to which they can so fittingly be devoted.

MILITIA.

The number liable to militia duty in the State is two hundred and twenty-three thousand and ninety-four (223,094). The National Guard is organized as one division of two brigades. The First Brigade is composed of four (4) regiments, two (2) battalions of infantry and one (1) battery of artillery, numbering one hundred and fifty-six (156) officers and one thousand eight hundred and one (1,801) men, and the Second Brigade of three (3) regiments of infantry and one (1) Gatling gun company, numbering one hundred and eleven (111) officers and one thousand three hundred and seventy-four (1,374) men. One (1) Gatling gun company, with four (4) officers and fifty-four (54) men, is unattached. The entire force of the National Guard, including the general field and staff officers, is, therefore, three hundred and twelve (312) officers and three thousand two hundred and twenty-nine (3,229) men, being an increase of one hundred and thirty-two (132) over last year. It may truly be said that in no time in its history has the National Guard been in a better condition than at present. The number of members in the several companies is well and easily kept up. The composition of the force is of a high standard, and there pervades the whole body a spirit of enterprise and discipline highly commendable. These have, necessarily, resulted in an exceptional degree of efficiency. The entire force is armed with the Springfield breech-loading rifle, and is thoroughly equipped. Under the law of 1880 great progress has been made in the supplying of the entire force with the regulation service uniform. But two (2) regiments, about seven hundred (700) men, yet remain to be supplied. The furnishing of these uniforms has increased the expense of the National Guard during the last two years, but the investment is one which will not be soon again required. Besides the ordinary tactics the force has been well drilled in rifle practice; and the returns show that more than twice as many members of the National Guard have pursued this special branch of instruction this year as last. The expenses of this branch have been very materially reduced this year, and a much larger reduction can safely be promised for the coming year. The use of one of the ranges has been abandoned, and arrangements have been made by which the cost to the State of the other two will be materially lessened. The Arsenal is well supplied with the necessary arms and ordnance. The entire expenses of the National Guard during the past year, as reported by the Quartermaster General, was seventy-three thousand five hundred and fifteen dollars and twenty-two cents ($73,515.22), against seventy-nine thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars and sixty-nine cents ($79,225.69) for the previous year.

YORKTOWN CENTENNIAL.

By a joint resolution, approved March 17th, 1881, I was authorized and requested to organize a provisional battalion to be composed of companies of the National Guard, which should take part in the celebration of the battle of Yorktown. The celebration of this anniversary had been determined upon by Congress, and the management of its details had been assigned to a joint committee of that body. That committee had extended invitations to France and Germany, the potential allies of our struggling nation in the event designed to be celebrated. Both of these governments responded with enthusiasm and accredited, as their representatives, the descendants of the distinguished officers participating in the memorable siege and victory which led to our recognition as an independent nation. The National Government detailed portions of its army and navy; and the larger States of the Union announced their intention to be represented. It was to such an occasion that I was requested to send a representation creditable to the State. The selection of the material of which to form the battalion was made in the manner prescribed by the resolution, and the result amply justifies the wisdom of the suggestion. The whole of the National Guard was put upon its best efforts to secure admission into the battalion. A spirit of enterprise and emulation imbued it, and when the time came for the selection to be made the whole force was in such a condition that no difficulty would have been felt in doubling the number required. The command of the battalion was assigned by me to Col. E. Burd Grubb, of the Sixth Regiment, Second Brigade, and competent officers were selected, who, under his instruction, immediately and constantly devoted themselves to the work assigned to them. In the early stages of the enterprise I became convinced that the safety, health and comfort of the command would depend entirely upon whatever preparation should be made by ourselves. They were to be sent to an isolated section of country subject to malarial influences, remote from all extraneous sources of supplies, and the ordinary resources of which would be more than taxed by the influx of a large temporary population. It, therefore, became necessary to take extra precautions in order to secure their safe transportation, to avoid any unnecessary exposure to the danger of sickness more likely to occur because of the unprepared condition of the men taken suddenly from comfortable homes; to provide suitable and generous food and ample clothing and camp equipage. While nothing was stinted, care was exercised to prevent extravagance or waste, as will be noticed when you observe the statement of the expenditures required by the resolution to be submitted to you by the comptroller, and which will be filed with that officer during your present session. This important part of the work was performed through Quartermaster General Law-

Perrine, to whose experience and energy is fairly to be attributed much of the successful result. The method established for the formation of the battalion was not calculated to secure that unity of action so essential to its proper appearance as a body. But the admirable material of which it was formed, animated by a spirit of emulation and pride to worthily represent the State, was, under the excellent instruction and example of the Colonel and other officers, very soon unified. Notwithstanding the fact that they had but once before been together as a body, from their first appearance in the streets of Baltimore they became the subject of admiration and praise. Their conduct, while encamped, left nothing to be asked for and nothing to be condemned, and when the time came that they were to be brought into comparison and competition with the regiments of other States, many of which had become famous as entire organizations, the unhesitating expression was: that as individuals and as a body; in equipment and in drill; in camp and in field, New Jersey's National Guard were unexcelled. They were an honor to the State and to the Nation; and the prize which was awarded to them was honorably deserved and won.

During the entire period of absence from the State, the health of the command was good. But one accident worthy of note occurred, viz.: the maiming of private Randolph F. Disbrow, of Company B, 7th Regiment, N. G., by the premature discharge of a cannon. I recommend to you the adoption of some proper means for his relief. Aside from this accident, all the circumstances of the occasion have left much cause for grateful pride and none for regret.

I take pleasure in acknowledging in this connection the respectful courtesies paid to the representatives of this State by the National authorities and the officers of the army and navy.

Considering the fact that the services rendered by the officers and members of this battalion were entirely voluntary and without any compensation whatever from the State, I suggest that the Legislature make such public recognition of those services as is deserving. I am informed that the desire of the battalion, universally expressed, is to present to the State the trophy which was awarded to them, and I trust that such arrangements will be made for its acceptance by the State as are befitting the occasion.

THE COWPENS CELEBRATION.

In accordance with the spirit of the joint resolution passed at the last session of the Legislature respecting the celebration of the centennial of the battle of Cowpens, and the desire of the authorities of South Carolina that New Jersey should be represented on that occasion, I requested the Hons. Senators William H. Francis, of Essex, and Thomas Lawrence, of Sussex; and Assemblymen David A. Lawrence, of Hudson, and James H. VanCleef, of Middlesex, the Committee appointed by the Legislature, to attend the celebration as the delegation from this State. These gentlemen performed the duty thus imposed upon them with satisfaction to the authorities of the State to which they were sent, and credit to that which they represented. The event was made the occasion of an intermingling of citizens and representative men of different sections of our country and brought out an expression of community of sentiment and interest, for which there are too few opportunities. The money appropriation made for the identification of our State with the memorial monument was paid, but a hesitancy on the part of those who were expected to take the initiative, prevented the selection of an orator to represent the Middle States. This omission was, however, well supplied by the extemporaneous effort of one of New Jersey's representatives.

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

The Report of the Attorney General presents a resume of the business conducted by him on the part of the State during the past year; and shows the pendency of several suits of great interest and importance. In the case of the State of New Jersey against the State of Delaware, relative to the jurisdiction of the latter in the Delaware river, matters remain as heretofore. The Brotherton Indian tax case, involving the question of the exemption of a large tract of land in Burlington county from taxation, having been decided in our courts in favor of the right of the State to tax, has been removed to the United States Supreme Court, and is now pending. A threatened interference with the lands of the State under water, and the grants made by the State of the same, under color of a pretended claim by persons alleging themselves to be the Continental Railway Company, was promptly met by the Attorney General by an information filed in the Court of Chancery, on which an injunction was issued by that court, and the matter is there now pending. Preparations have been made for contesting an asserted claim on the part of the Proprietors of East Jersey to certain lands under water in the county of Monmouth. The matter having been placed under the charge of a committee of the Legislature, no action has yet been taken in the courts. The suit involving the right of the Secretary of State to receive certain fees has been argued in the Supreme Court, and now awaits their decision. Other cases, all of which are of importance to the State, have been considered, argued, or disposed of; for a statement of which I refer more particularly to the report. The business of the Department, which has largely increased, has been promptly and ably conducted.

STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE.

The State Board of Agriculture which has now been in active operation since 1872, is accomplishing a very important work in the special branch of our material interests to which it is devoted. Its aim has been to maintain communication with all organizations in the State occupied with any branch of garden, field or forest culture with all their diversified relations to the other occupations and interests of our people, and to gather up and make available the best results of observation and experiment. The importance of maintaining a central organization of this kind is evident, and it is gratifying to learn that its work is becoming better understood and more highly appreciated. The Board suggest that permanent quarters be provided for its use at the State House, with proper provision for keeping them always open and accessible, and that all action which the State may find it desirable to adopt relating to this branch of public interests should be entrusted to its direction. In order to accomplish these ends additional legislation would be necessary.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

This institution is supported without expense to the State, the income from the fund (derived from the sale of lands donated by the General Government) being used in part payment of salaries, and Rutgers College providing the rest. The annual report shows that the institution is well managed; there were on the rolls last year forty-six (46) pupils; thirty-seven (37) from thirteen counties of this State and nine (9) from other States. The instruction given is thorough and practical, and forms the connecting link between our public schools and the occupations of engineer, architect, and other industries requiring a knowledge of the sciences. It is to be regretted that several of the counties do not more fully avail themselves of their proportion of the scholarships awarded to them by the law, more especially since experience proves the practical advantages which a graduation at this institution confers upon those seeking employment in the higher grades of mechanical business.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.

The second annual report of this institution is replete with information of the greatest value to the agricultural interests of the State. Organized, as it was, but two years ago, its work has been large, and so thoroughly and carefully performed as to give to its conclusions the greatest weight. It is evident that the culture of a farm can be most successfully prosecuted by a knowledge of the constituent elements of its soil, the particular crop most suitable to it, the draft which that crop will make upon the soil, and how that draft may best be met by the aid of fertilizers. The work of the station has been in this direction. Samples of over two hundred and fifty (250) different commercial fertilizers have been analyzed and their value ascertained. A series of experiments have been prosecuted in different parts of the State, tending to show the effect of eleven different fertilizers, upon seven classes of soil, in the growth of Indian corn. Numerous analyses of various foods and fodder have been made; and their effect upon the production and quality of milk has been examined into, and in a great measure ascertained. A number of trials have been made with a view of determining the best manner of cultivating the sorghum plant, involving the questions as to what varieties are most suitable to this climate, upon what character of soil it should be grown, how that soil should be fertilized, how the crop should be treated, and which variety produces the greatest yield of valuable matter. The information thus secured has been furnished to the newspapers, and directly to a large number of farmers throughout the State in the form of bulletins. These have been eagerly looked for, and in many instances utilized; and have resulted in a quickening of the interest and enterprise of our agriculturists, and the adoption of measures looking to a more productive management of the farm and farm yard. The benefit of this, in view of the present condition of this important interest, can hardly be over estimated, and the money appropriated by the State to this institution could scarcely be more wisely invested.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The report of the State Geologist shows the continuation of the work assigned to this department, and is accompanied by a topographical map; being the first of a series intended to include the entire State. The report also contains valuable suggestions, among the most important of which is that in relation to the water supply of the State. As is stated, the gathering of population in towns and cities not only increases the demand for a system of water supply, but, at the same time, by the accumulation of filth and impurities on the surface, contaminates the ordinary sources. This is especially true of that portion of the State nearest to New York City. The two largest cities of the State, and much of the thickly settled surrounding country, derive their supply of water from a stream defiled by the emptyings of manufactories and sewers for miles above the point at which it is drawn. This condition of affairs must continue to grow worse since the natural growth of the communities increases alike the demand for pure water and the contamination of that upon which they depend. Fortunately, the evil is not irremediable. The natural channels of the Passaic river bring to within fifteen (15) miles of Jersey City, and a shorter distance from Newark, each day over four hundred million (400,000,000) gallons of pure water, gathered from streams, springs and lakes of a mountainous and thinly settled district of country. This immense quantity is delivered in a pure condition at a point one hundred and fifty (150) feet above the level of the sea, from which an easy descent can be made to the places where it is to be distributed. There is urgent necessity that this should be utilized for the benefit of the three hundred thousand (300,000) people who need it, especially as it is, at all times, liable to be pre-occupied by mills, or taken by some single municipality, or, possibly, bought to satisfy the pressing want of the neighboring metropolis. The importance of this subject cannot well be over-estimated, since it includes within itself the health and prosperity of the most densely populated and thriving portion of our State.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

The past year has been memorable for the large recognition given by foreign governments and by the General Government to the interests of public health. Many of the causes of disease are beyond the control of the individual, and so must come under the control of the State.

The Board of Health of this State has been diligent in its work. Besides its inquiry into local causes of disease and the information it imparts as to existing evils, it is often consulted by local boards, and is able to give wise direction to measures for limiting or preventing epidemics and for securing a better average of health. In its care over the contagious diseases of animals, it is required to exercise continued watchfulness. Pleuro-pneumonia has much diminished, but is occasionally introduced from neighboring States. The details as to it appear in the report of the State Board of Agriculture. The report of the Council on Food Adulterations, as under the supervision of the Board of Health, will be found of much value.

The Department of Vital Statistics is in accord with the best models of other countries and states. It is satisfactory to know that the General Government in preparing the mortuary tabulations for the last census relied on the returns of Massachusetts and New Jersey as their standard for comparison as to completeness. The value of these returns for legal purposes, for questions of pension and insurance, and their necessity for the study of the causes of disease and the conditions of population in the various localities is now fully conceded. Health is the capital of the workingman, and the comfort of all. The State cannot too closely guard the vital interests of its population so far as these necessarily come within its jurisdiction and are dependent upon general enactments.

LABOR BUREAU.

To whatever criticisms this department may have been subjected heretofore, its labors have been of great benefit to the State, and have earned for it the regard of those in whose interests it was created. The report gives a history of its transactions during the past year, and presents much valuable information as to some of the more important manufacturing industries of the State, showing, more particularly, the condition of the workingmen therein. The manner in which this department has performed the duties assigned to it, proves the wisdom of its creation, and warrants its continuance. By the report it is shown that there are in the State six thousand nine hundred and fifty-nine (6,959) manufacturing establishments with a capital of one hundred and five millions eight hundred and thirty-eight thousand nine hundred and fifty-one dollars ($105,838,951); employing an average of one hundred and twenty thousand five hundred and thirty-two (120,532) persons; paying forty-three million seven hundred and fifty-seven thousand seven hundred and fifty three dollars ($43,757,753) in wages, and producing annually two hundred and forty-five million dollars ($245,000,000) worth of wares.

PILOTAGE.

The report of the Commissioners of Pilotage presents a summary of the work performed under their direction during the year, and again calls attention to the continued improper obstruction of Newark and Raritan bays, Staten Island sound and the Kill Von Kull by the dumping of refuse matter therein. This is a subject of great importance, and deserves prompt treatment, and I suggest to you the propriety of giving to the Pilot Commissioners the power to regulate and prevent the illegal obstruction of these important highways, and bring offenders to punishment. It is of the greatest necessity that this power should be in the hands of some persons who are apt to be readily informed of the violations. The Commissioners, through the pilots, would be brought in daily contact with the facts, and, therefore, be the better able to apply the proper remedies for their correction.

PENSIONS.

There was paid from the State Treasury last year, on account of pensions, the sum of seven thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven dollars and twenty-two cents ($7,837.22). The law of 1874 provided for the payment of a pension of one hundred dollars ($100) per year to soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812, until the United States government should take upon itself the burden. This was done in 1878; and the pensioners of New Jersey were all placed on the government rolls, except twenty-eight (28) who, while they had been mustered into the service of the State in the defence of the coast, had not been made a part of the national forces. To these the State continues to pay the pension of one hundred dollars ($100) per annum. It was made known to the Legislature in 1880 that there were certain persons, who, having been entitled to the pension under the act of 1874, had not presented their claims, and were, therefore, debarred from the benefits of the law of that year. By the acts of 1880 and 1881, it was provided that such persons should be entitled to receive the pension for the period between the passage of the act of 1874 and of the United States law in 1878—within a few days of four (4) years. To the Adjutant General was assigned the duty of authenticating these claims; and he has approved eleven (11) of them and rejected one (1). There was paid to these claimants the sum of four thousand two hundred and sixty-eight dollars and sixty-six cents ($4,268.66). This, with the claims of the first mentioned list, and about two hundred dollars ($200) expenses in collecting claims from the United States Government, makes up the amount paid from the Treasury. There is no probability that any more claims will be presented, and the pension list will be limited to the twenty-eight (28) regular pensioners; calling for the payment of about two thousand eight hundred dollars ($2,800) a year.

In this connection it is but proper that I should direct your attention to the important work performed by the Adjutant General's department, in the matter of collecting pensions due from the General Government to indigent and meritorious persons. The duty thus assigned by the joint resolution of 1880 has been conscientiously and thoroughly performed; many pensions have been secured solely through the department, and important assistance has been rendered in many other cases. The examination of records and correspondence have been in themselves a very large addition to the work of the office; and it has been further increased by the necessity of frequent and lengthy visits to the department at Washington for the furtherance of the objects sought. This work has been performed by the Adjutant General without any extra assistance, and in a very satisfactory manner. And I suggest to you the propriety of making provision for a proper increase of the compensation of the officer performing it.

BOUNDARY.

A vacancy having occurred in the commission on the part of this State to adjust the boundary line between this State and the State of New York, I appointed Abraham Browning, Esq., to fill such vacancy. The Legislature at its last session authorized the commissioners to ascertain and agree upon the location of the boundary line as originally established and marked with monuments. The commission has held several meetings with the commissioners on the part of New York, and with them, have taken measures to have such of the monuments as have become dilapidated replaced, and additional monuments erected. This work has not yet been concluded, and will form the subject of a future report.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In accordance with the request of the Executive Committee of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, in July last, I appointed Messrs. Charles H. O'Neill, George W. Helme, John F. Hageman and A. S. Meyrick as delegates to represent the State at the eighth annual session of that body. Mr. Meyrick was the only one who was able to attend, and his observations and deductions were so full of interest that I requested him to make a report to me in order that it might be printed and laid before you. This has been done, and I commend it to you as containing much worthy of your careful attention.

My attention has been called to the wholesale destruction of fish along our coast by the use of purse nets in the catching of menhaden or mossbunkers, for manufacturing purposes. The result of the pursuit of this business is, that food fishes are either destroyed, or are driven from our waters in search of food; and hundreds of our citizens are deprived of their natural occupations. Every means should be resorted to prevent this injury to our people in that locality, and, if advisable, the attention of the General Government should be directed to the subject, and its interposition invoked.

I would also suggest that, through our representatives in Congress, an effort be made to secure additional compensation to the men engaged in the life-saving service. The present pay is commensurate neither with the dangers and hardship of the work performed by those men nor with the great results of it. There is no class of public servants which is more deserving of encouragement and liberal support than this. They have displayed a heroism and daring worthy of the highest commendation.

The State Librarian reports the receipt of nine hundred and thirty-one (931) additional volumes during the year. The commissioners of the library directed the sending to the State Prison, for the use of that institution, of two hundred and eighty-nine volumes of miscellaneous literature, consisting of duplicates, broken sets, &c., which, while of little or no value to the library, were of considerable benefit to the prisoners. The annual appropriation to the purposes of the Library is seven hundred and fifty dollars ($750).

The alterations in the ventilation of the Senate and Assembly chambers which were directed to be made by a joint resolution of the last Legislature, have been completed under the direction of the Treasurer and myself, and it is believed will answer the purposes of the resolution. The cost of the work was much less than the amount of the appropriation.

The report of the Commissioner of Railroad Taxation gives an account of the business of the last year, and also an interesting resume of the transactions of the office since its creation.

The State Board of Pharmacy reports the proceedings of the year, and asks for further legislation to enable them to enforce the present law.

The important juncture in our financial affairs has led me to present to you at more than ordinary length, my observations as to the existing condition of our State, and my views as to what is proper to be done in regard to it, in order that you may the better appreciate that condition, and provide for it. I will gladly join you in any effort which you may make to meet it, and trust that you will give to its consideration all the care and wisdom which its importance demands.

G. C. LUDLOW.

Executive Department, Jan. 10, 1882.

A Celestial Punster.

[Washington Post.]

When the Chinese Embassy was presented to the President Saturday afternoon, they were also formally introduced to Secretary of State Frelinghuysen and his son. The Chinese officials made the usual imposing bow, first to the Secretary and then to young Mr. Frelinghuysen. The interpreter explained that the latter held no official position and was merely a spectator. The Chinese pondered the matter for a while, and then one of them, who speaks English a little, smiled as if the situation had dawned on him, and said: "I see. One old Huysen and other young Huysen."

How Comets Affect the Earth.

It is reassuring to learn from Professor Lewis Boss's prize essay on comets, just published, that no serious results are ever likely to happen to our little planet from the visits to the solar system of the celestial vagrants. The influence of comets upon the earth, he says, is in all probability quite insignificant. They may, like the sun, affect the earth's magnetic condition, and thus to some extent, possibly, its meteorology. No such effect has ever been perceived. In spite of some chance coincidences between the apparitions of great comets and remarkable public events, no well informed person now believes that there is any real connection between them. By a liberal and credulous interpretation of any frequently occurring celestial phenomenon, similar coincidences could be shown. When a comet is converted into meteoric bodies, which impinge upon the earth's atmosphere, there is some direct though probably minute effect. Some have thought that a sensible portion of the heat which the earth receives is generated in this way; but the weight of scientific opinion seems to be against that hypothesis. The impact of meteors upon our atmosphere must add some matter to it, and this is probably in the form of dust. This may be the origin of the so-called cosmic dust, which has been collected at sea in recent times. The finer particles of it may have some influence on cloud formations, and other meteorological phenomena; but all this is merely conjecture.

A more remote effect may be sought in the possible fall of meteors and comets upon the surface of the sun. Owing to his vast bulk, the sun would attract an immense number of these bodies; but it is quite certain that their effect upon the sun's heat is insignificant. It is now generally admitted that we must look for the origin of the sun's heat in a constant, though to us imperceptible, shrinkage of his vast bulk. Some connection between the frequency of sun spots and comets has been rather vaguely suspected. Were the search for comets systematically pursued with equal persistance for a long period, we might have some data for the formation of a sound opinion. Yet it would still be an open question, whether comets cause the spots, or whether greater activity of the sun tends in some way to render comets brighter, so that more will be visible—with probability in favor of the latter supposition.

Finally, it may be said, with all due respect to scientific decorum, that the appearance of a great comet does exert one most happy influence on the earth, in that it stimulates the curiosity of mankind, and directs their thought to the more particular contemplation of the glorious universe which surrounds them.

A Remarkable Gun.

In the late war between Chili and Peru a curious accident befell an 8-inch Armstrong gun on board the Chilian warship Angamos. The last time it was fired, the gun, which was on deck, slipped out of the trunnion ring, flew backward across the ship, and leaped into the sea. This was the singular end of a rather remarkable history. The gun was supplied to the Chilians before the war by Sir William Armstrong's firm, and proved a formidable terror to Peru. The Angamos was previously an Irish pig boat and was acquired by Chili for the purpose of carrying this one gun, which, standing off at long ranges of 10,000 yards or so, she could do with impunity. The Peruvians at length sent out their fleet of gunboats to destroy their waspish antagonist, when the other Chilian ships with their short ranges came into action, and drew off the gunboats all but one, which was sent to engage the Angamos at close quarters. The Armstrong gun, however, sent a shower of Shrapnel bullets into her decks, and the gunboat retreated. As she was nearing port, a pot shot from the 8-inch gun, fired at long range and high elevation, managed to hit and sink her. The gun therefore did plenty of hard work and valuable service before it finally gave way and was lost in the sea.

Life Preservers in Factories.

The compulsory provision of life preservers on steamers, and their manifest utility, suggest to a correspondent of the Scientific American the propriety of a law compelling factory owners to provide at each window a cheap and efficient fire escape, in addition to the appliances and stairways now required. One that would always be ready, easily understood, and usable by any person of ordinary intelligence, even under excitement, could be made in the following manner: To a staple firmly driven in the wall immediately over each window attach a rope or cord, say three-eighths of an inch in size, and long enough to reach nearly or quite to the ground. This cord should be well made and pliable, and might be knotted at intervals of about fifteen inches. The cord should then be rolled into a coil or ball, and tied in place by a small cord or strap, ready at a moment's notice to be untied and the end thrown out of the window. Men, and even women, could descend it with little difficulty, and the stronger and cooler-headed could tie the rope about the bodies of the weaker, and quickly lower them to the helpers below.

R. H. Dana, Jr.

News has been received of the death, by pneumonia, at Rome, Italy, of Richard H. Dana, Jr. Deceased was born in Cambridge, in 1815. He was author of the story "Two Years Before the Mast," and was well known as one of the original Free-soilers, and was a delegate to the Buffalo Convention of 1848. From 1861 to 1866 he was United States Attorney for the District of Massachusetts. In 1876 he was nominated Minister to England by President Grant in place of Mr. Schenck, but was rejected by the Senate. A few years since he left for Europe to pursue his investigations on international law with the intention of publishing a work on the subject.

The main building of the Havemeyers & Elder Sugar Refining Company, on First street, Williamsburg, was destroyed Sunday, together with upward of $1,500,000 worth of property. The burned building is the principal part of the sugar refinery, which is the largest in the United States, and annually produced, with the other sugar refineries controlled by the Havemeyer interest, five-eighths of the sugar manufactured in this country. It was nine stories high, and occupied the entire block, facing on First street and the river, between South Third and Fourth streets, with a frontage of 200 feet and a depth of 150 feet. It contained the latest improved machinery for sugar refining, valued at nearly a million of dollars, and the principal operations of sugar making were conducted there.

PERFECT TRUST.

My boat is on the open sea,
Which storm and tempest toss;
I know not of the life to come
Before I get across.

I do not know how long or short
The dark voyage may be;
But patient I'll abide his time
Who built the boat for me.

'Tis fully manned in every part,
Hope is the anchor fair;
The compass that it has is Faith,
And every oar is prayer.

Sometimes I see the breakers night,
The ocean madly roars,
But all I do is simply this—
Bend closer to the oars.

At times the waves run mountain high,
And threaten me to strand;
I fear not, for He holds them in
The hollow of His hand.

The fog at times obscures my course,
I see the way but dim;
But well I know I cannot drift
Beyond the sight of Him.

I know not where the shoals may lie,
Nor where the whirlpools lie,
It is enough, dear Lord, to feel
That they are known to Thee.

And thus, content, I glide along,
If either slow or fast,
Well knowing He will bring
Me safe to port at last.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE WIFE'S LESSON.

Charlie Varian gave his young wife the accustomed kiss as she stood waiting for him at the door; but there was a cloud upon his brow, such as she had never seen there in all the sixteen months of their married life.

"What is the matter, Charlie?" she inquired, anxiously, as she followed him into the hall.

"Business," he answered briefly, but never mind now, Ella; we will talk it over after dinner."

But after dinner, as Charlie sat leaning back in his easy chair, pretending to be absorbed in the evening paper, Mrs. Varian cut the leaves of the latest fashion-book and examined the newest styles with an air of critical satisfaction.

She noticed that the cloud still lingered on Charlie's usually sunny brow; but after he once told her that "business" brought it there, it troubled her no longer.

Careless Ella Varian! she knew no more about the real meaning of the word than did the yellow canary swinging yonder in his gilded cage. Supposing that he had merely had an extra amount of writing to do that day, or perhaps endured some kind of annoyance from one of his fellow clerks, her husband's troubled face gave her no concern; and she was soon quite absorbed in selecting the particular style for the making of an elegant silk which she had purchased that very morning.

At length she arose, smilingly, and brought from an inner room the object of her thoughts, stopping first in front of her husband, and suddenly letting it fall, in all its rich and glistening folds, upon the handsome carpet.

"Isn't this lovely, Charlie?" she asked, her smile of proud possession tinged with a very perceptible air of girlish vanity.

"You will fall in love with me over again when you see me arrayed in the elegant costume this is going to be. Come," impatiently, "why don't you give me your opinion?"

He looked up with a weary smile that was anything but a rapturous reflection of her own.

"It is very beautiful, of course, darling, but I am sorry to have to tell you that it was the cause of the trouble which you noticed this evening."

"This?" opening her dark eyes very wide. "Why, Charlie, when I mentioned it you said it was only 'business!'"

"So, it was; but, Ella, you will have to learn some time that that word is very intimately connected with money and the way in which money is used."

"I never can and there is no use trying," said Mrs. Varian, poutingly. "It was never intended for a woman to learn. Why, papa never mentioned 'business' to me in all my life."

"No, I suppose not, dear," answered Charlie absently.

He was looking back to that evening, nearly two years ago when he had asked "papa's" consent to take the spoiled darling from a home, luxurious, though not wealthy, where she had been petted and screened from every care, like a veritable princess. And he was thinking of how the honest old man had said with a little pathetic quiver in his voice:

"I shall be very glad to call you son Charlie, if you are not afraid to undertake the care of my spoiled child. But I sadly fear she will prove a terrible failure as a poor man's wife."

But Charlie had warmly pressed the kind old father's hand and gone out with shining eyes, only too happy to get the "spoiled child" upon any terms. Yes, all these thoughts were very busy in his mind as he laid down his newspaper and looked lovingly but very gravely, at his little wife."

"No, darling, I remember how petted and indulged you were at home, and were I able to afford it your life should never be otherwise. As it is, I have tried hard to keep all disagreeable cares from you. But there comes a time in every woman's life when she must cease to be a thoughtless child and become the helpmate and adviser of her husband; and I think, little one, the time has just now come to you."

"What, what in the world, Charlie—good gracious, you are preaching a regular sermon! What is it all about?"

"Just this, Ella; something has happened to-day which never occurred before in my life. When I came to settle up my accounts this afternoon I discovered that we are considerable in debt."

"Oh! is that all?" exclaimed Ella, with a look of great relief. She had expected—she knew not what terrible revelation from the serious tone her husband had taken.

"All, Ella?" echoed Charlie, gazing at her in perfect amazement. To the honest young fellow, with his strict business principles, debt seemed a specter more haunting than the ghost of Hamlet's father. "I should say that it is quite enough."

"Why, I know of lots of nice people who are in debt, and think nothing of it," pursued Mrs. Varian, lightly. "Mrs. General Roberts was telling me at Delmonico's yesterday——"

"There is another thing, Ella, that I really must speak to you about," interrupted Charlie, in much embarrassment; "those costly lunches at Delmonico's are really too expensive for us to indulge in just now, and I must ask you to drop them until we can better afford it. I have almost entirely given up smoking, which I am so fond of, in order to live within our income. And now, if you will only help me——"

But the generous, simple-hearted fellow stopped short in his earnest appeal, for his wife had dropped magazine and silk together, in her astonishment, and was gazing straight into his face with dark eyes full of rebellious tears.

What, give up her dainty lunches with her fashionable friends? Why, she had always considered them a mere trifle in her regular round of shopping expenses, and here was Charlie making a serious matter of it. What would Mrs. General Robinson say if she declined to accompany her again to Delmonico's?

"Oh, well," she said, at last, with a long sigh of martyr-like resignation, "If you want your wife to appear mean and stingy among your friends, it can't be helped, I suppose; but I never thought it of you, Charlie Varian!"

But Charlie Varian gave up in despair. What could be do with this pretty, extravagant young creature who had never earned a penny in her life, and who would inevitably look upon him as a tyrant the moment he attempted the slightest retrenchment in her style of living?

Thus matters went on for another year.

After several earnest efforts to reason Ella into something like economy, and meeting with no result but tears and sometimes indignation from the "spoiled darling," he had given them up entirely rather than risk perpetual dissension in his home.

Mrs. Varian, finding presently that Charlie had ceased mentioning her extravagant mode of life, concluded that everything had come all right again in some mysterious way which she never troubled herself to find out, and went on quite the same as of old.

It was not that she was really unreasonable at heart, or unwilling to please her husband. But she was so accustomed to having what she wished, without a thought of cost, and under the influence of a set of thoughtless, fashionable friends whose husbands were wealthier than her own, that she really did not know how to do differently.

Charlie procured extra work and strained every nerve to regain his old safe position. But for a man living on a stated salary, who once gets into debt, the chances are very strongly against his ever getting out. So two years and a half from his wedding-day, Charlie Varian, who then rode safely at anchor in the proud consciousness of being even with the world and owing no man a penny, now found himself drifting far out into the deep waters of debt.

Aye, and something far worse than that!

For weeks he had been brooding bitterly over the hopelessness of his prospects, and yielding inch by inch to a terrible temptation that has overcome thousands of young men in a like position.

Once square with the world again, he will compel his wife to live within their means, and in time he can surely save up enough to atone, undiscovered, for what he is about to do.

Once square with the world! But how? Ah! his manly cheek blanches at the very thought of the horrid crime that he contemplates. Forgery! a deed so black that it casts its awful shadow on his soul in the very moment when he is most resolved to execute it.

"Yes," he muttered, half unconsciously, as he sat writing at his desk, "if 'twere done, and well done, then 'twere best done quickly. I'll do it to-day."

"Do what, my boy?" exclaimed a kindly, genial voice, and Charlie Varian gave a tremendous start as a hearty slap came down with friendly force upon his shoulder. "What scheme is it so absorbing that you couldn't notice the presence of your father's oldest friend?"

Charlie welcomed the fine old colonel as cordially as possible under the circumstances, but oh, how black his guilty purpose seemed in the sunny presence of this noble old man who had been his dead father's life-long friend!

"You are every inch a Varian, my boy," said the old colonel, in the course of their conversation, while his pleasant blue eyes surveyed Charlie with a kind of fatherly pride, "and I am proud to learn, as I have from your employer, that you keep the fine old family name untarnished. I well remember how people used to say that to be a Varian was to be one of nature's noblemen. Keep the old name up to its highest mark, Charlie, for your father's sake."

"I will, sir," responded Charlie, huskily, for in that moment, as by a flash of lightning he saw the horrible abyss into which he had resolved to plunge, and in the same illumination he realized the proud height from which he would have had to fall. A Varian to descend to crime! A Varian, "one of nature's noblemen," to become a common felon! No, a thousand times no! Let what would come, he would live and die an honest man.

He felt during that interview that he was carried back to the age of miracles. Was this merely a chance visit from an old friend, or was it one of God's own angels sent directly to him, at the very crisis of his life, to save him from the yawning gulf of crime?

That night he laid his whole heart bare before the careless wife who had led him to the very brink of ruin.

Was he met by the usual tears and reproaches? No; for the trivial vanities of her nature were swallowed up in her terror at the deed which he had so nearly committed, through her fault. If she had no head for business, Ella Varian understood the dark meaning of crime and the fearful consequences it entailed.

White and still she sat trying to take it all in. Her Charlie a criminal! her own splendid husband almost within the shadow of a felon's cell! Why, it was for his proud name, his unquestioned honor, more than anything else, that she had married him! And now to think her reckless folly had so nearly ruined it all!

Oh, she saw it all clearly as she lay with wide-open, burning eyes, all through that troubled night, slowly coming to the first brave and womanly resolve her careless life had ever known.

"Charlie," she announced at breakfast, with a smile half bright, half tearful, "I am going to help you out of this trouble which I have been the cause of your getting into."

"You!" he exclaimed, an amused light breaking over his pale, worried countenance; "what can you do, Butterfly?"

"Well, in the first place, I can give up all my expensive habits, so that we may live within our income. Then I shall turn my accomplishments to practical account and help you to pay up our debts."

Charlie was incredulous, as well he might be. He could scarcely believe his own ears. Ella's thorough accomplishments in French and music had been a great source of pride and pleasure to him, but he had never dreamed of their every being put to any practical use.

But pretty Mrs. Varian was in deep earnest, and after the first hard struggles between pride and duty, succeeded wondrously. And now Charlie says:

"I believe Ella really loves her work for its own sake; for now, though we are clear out of debt, and squarely on our feet again, I cannot persuade her to give up her music class. Don't talk to me about a wife's being a burden to a fellow! Why, that brave little woman has just brought me right out of the 'slough of despond!'"

Loyal-hearted Charlie! he has quite forgotten one thing which his dear little wife remembers keenly—that she has simply been slowly undoing the mischief which she alone had wrought.—Clyde Raymond.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

Shirring is out of favor.

Fans are of medium size.

Veils are not worn with pokes.

Opera cloaks are of moire plush.

Brown furs are restored to favor.

The word "chudda" means shawl.

Black pearls are worn in mourning.

Pointed trains supersede square ones.

New trays for cards are made of plush.

Panier costumes are seen on 5th avenue.

Scrap-baskets are shaped like antique vases.

Bangs must not extend across the temples.

Sofa pillows of plush are labeled "Lean on me."

Mother Hubbard dolls are the favorites this year.

Feather fans have butterflies and bees upon them.

Breast feathers rival ostrich tips for small bonnets.

Polonaises much bunched up are parts of new costumes.

Antique heads, with jeweled eyes, are the clasps for bracelets.

New embroidered "splashers" are mounted on rings and rods.

Nickel chatelaine watches for shopping are chosen by ladies.

The new Oriental lace has the long stitches of India embroidery.

Ladies' rings have the stones set around the finger instead of lengthwise.

Tambourines decorated with hand painting are used for bon-bon boxes.

Diamond collar buttons are preferred brooches for ladies' linen collars.

The absence of all jewelry is considered in better taste than an abundance of it.

Plush linings for cloaks are liked because they are light and almost as warm as fur.

A bow of wide ribbon with long ends hanging behind is added to the caps of nurses.

Satin fronts of dresses are in honeycomb pattern, with a bead at each corner of the design.

Sleeves slightly gathered into the armhole are more stylish than those made with puffs.

The cat's eye, with a white streak across it, is a favorite stone for gentlemen's scarf-pins or rings.

The sleeves of ball dresses are very short, being generally nothing more than a ruffle, edged with lace.

Black velvet suits, with large white embroidered collars and black silk stockings, are worn by small boys.

Velvet, either plain or brocaded, is the favorite material for the basque and train of reception and dinner dresses.

A new lace seen on imported dresses has the flowers of white lace applied to black tulle in a most effective way.

Instead of the stiff and heavy draperies formerly used on the upper part of the corsage of ball dresses, the neck is now cut low and bordered with pleated tulle or frilled lace, surmounted by a light edging set upright. A garland of light flowers with finely-cut leaves set among the lace is charmingly effective. The low corsage is laced in the back, cut square in front, and hollowed out slightly in the middle.

AN ÆSTHETIC WIFE.

"Say, I'll tell you something if you won't blow it," was the one man saluted another, on Twelfth street the other day.

"All right—go ahead."

"You won't give it away until I say so?"

"Not a word."

"Well, my wife has got to be an æsthetic."

"No?"

"Sure's you're born. I have suspected that she was working that way for some time past, but it's only within a day or two that I became positive."

"Well, that's wonderful. Say, how does she act?"

"Languid—very languid. She lops around, drawls her words, writes sad poetry, and the sight of an old pie-tin or banged-up chromo entrances her. Congratulate me on my good luck."

"I do—I do. That is—"

"What?"

"Don't build hopes too fast. Be sure you art right, then go ahead. I labored for a whole year under the delusion that my wife was developing as an æsthetic, and when I came to talk with her father, he said she was more than half idiot by nature. Go slow—go slow. The difference between an æsthetic and a fool is so mighty small, that you can't afford to make a mistake and be placed in a box."

A NEW BRAND.

A tall, lank negro has been in the habit for a year past of calling at a Michigan avenue grocer and begging for a few potatoes, a bit of codfish, or anything else likely to be given him. The other day the grocer took a flour sack and made up a mixture of sand, and when the negro came around he was almost pulverized to hear the grocer say:

"Now Sam, if you won't come here again for three months you can shoulder that sack and take it home."

"Am you in airnest, boss?"

"Yes, I mean what I say."

"Wall, I reckon I'd better cotch on to dot chance, an' may de Lawd bress you for a hun'red y'ars to come."

He shouldered the sack and walked off, and was not seen again for three days. Then he entered the store with the remark:

"Say, boss, I didn't mean to come back, only I want to ax a queshun."

"Go ahead."

"It's about dat flour you gin me. De ole woman an' me doan' take the same view of it. I hold dat it am a new way of griedin' up wheat, an' she says it am a new process for gein' up gravel banks. Kin you frow any light on de subjick?"

"It is a new brand of my own," replied the grocer. "The wheat was raised on sandy soil. Can you recommend it?"

"N-hot 'zactly, sah; but if you could change wid me for a peck of beans raised on a side hill, an' put de ole trees an' stumps an' stones in one bag, an' de beans in anoder, it would save a heap of argyment in de family."—Detroit Free Press.

How few value or cultivate a good pair of lungs.

How the old are forgotten by the young.

How unfortunate that so many of the aged should make themselves unattractive and ever repulsive to the young.

WHAT THE PLUMBER TOOK.

A plumber went forth to plumb
To a kingly palace by the way,
And when his half day's work was done
Presented his bill without delay.

The king brought forth his bags of gold,
His diamonds and his jeweled crown,
The plumber credit gave for them—
And took a mortgage on the throne.

A young man proposed for the hand of a beautiful girl. As she hesitated about replying, he said, "I await your answer with bated breath." The girl, who is a good deal of a humorist, said, "Well, Mr. Man, you will have to bait your breath with something besides high wines and Limburger cheese to catch your humble servant. Good evening."

Something of a change: When an Austin schoolmaster entered his temple of learning a few mornings ago he read on the blackboard the touching legend: "Our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake, but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend, and opened the school as usual.

Here we have a Business Manager. He is blowing about the circulation of the paper. He is saying the paper has entered upon an era of unprecedented prosperity. In a minute he will go up stairs and chide the editor for leaving the gas burning while he went out for a drink of water, and he will dock a reporter four dollars because a subscriber has licked him, and he cannot work.

He sat down in the half of a seat, the other half of which was occupied by a pleasant-faced young lady. His first question was:

"Pardon me, miss; but is your name James. But, pardon me, is your name Zinc or Copper?"

"Zinc or Copper? No, ma'am," said the astonished man. "What led you to suppose I had such names?"

"Excuse me," was the quiet reply; "but I thought certain you must be first cousin to a brass foundry."

The man fell over two seats, and kicked a bird cage half way down the car, in his haste to get into the smoker, while the young lady smiled behind her handkerchief. It was a proof of the old adage that a witty answer turneth away bores.

Mr. Scoville has sold Guiteau's body for $1,000. This is probably more than his carcass ever honestly earned during his life.

G. S. Reed, of Englishtown, killed a pair of bronzed turkeys this year, that weighed 55 pounds, the male weighing 34 pounds.

G. De Witt Garretson of Bound Brook, reports a net profit of $146.70 from 75 hens during the year 1881. The number of eggs laid was 9,852.

Prince Leopold, son of Queen Victoria, is Vice President of the Church of England Temperance Society, and takes an active interest in its work.

Gov. Ludlow will shortly convene the Court of Pardons to consider the case of Robert Martin, under sentence of death for the murder of his wife and child in Newark.

A true bill of murder in the first degree has been returned against the Malley brothers and Blanche Douglass for the murder of Jennie Cramer, at New Haven, Conn.

Rev. George C. Mills, formerly of Plainfield, and recently the successor of Rev. R. Collyer in Chicago, has resigned his charge, and newspaper report says will become a lawyer.

Gov. Ludlow has taken a suite of rooms on State street, Trenton, nearly opposite the State House, and will remain in Trenton during the days when the Legislature is in session, from Monday till Friday.

Wm. Case, Jr., of Flanders, Morris county, was killed in Doering's saw mill, Flocktown, on Tuesday of last week, by a stick of wood being thrown against him by a circular saw. He left a wife and three children.

A bill introduced into the State Senate on the first day of the session, by Mr. Stainsby, of Essex, "declares void all tickets used at any election which contains any pictures or distinguished mark." That is suppressing the American flag.

There are two essential ingredients needed in legislation at the present day, both of which, through neglect or something worse, have become lamentably uncommon. They are common sense and common honesty. Virtues honored and observed by patriotic forefathers.

We allow foreign Banking and Insurance Corporations to come here and undermine American institutions of the kind, but refuse permission for our own citizens to purchase foreign built steamers, place them under the American flag, and augment national wealth through the profits of ocean carrying.

In the re-appointment of Hon. John P. Stockton as Attorney General of this State, Governor Ludlow has done that which will meet with the approbation and wishes of a large majority of the citizens of New Jersey. Mr. Stockton has few equals as a lawyer of ability, and is eminently fit for so exalted a position.

As a public document of dignified expression and thorough knowledge of official detail, the recent message of Governor Ludlow stands without a rival. New Jersey has had many distinguished men in the gubernatorial chair, but none superior in point of character and ability to her present Chief Magistrate, George C. Ludlow.

An order has been issued by the Central Railroad of New Jersey to remove the car record office from Phillipsburg to Elizabeth. The mileage and car record offices at New York, Mauch Chunk and Manchester are all to be removed to Elizabeth, where the general office is to be located, and which will be under the charge of general car agent Samuel Manning, of Plainfield.

A circular issued by the Central Railroad of New Jersey last week announced the appointment of William W. Stearns as Superintendent of the road and all its branches; Rufus Blodgett as Assistant General Superintendent of the New Jersey Southern Division, and W. S. Polhemus as Assistant General Superintendent of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Division, embracing all points west of Easton, Pa.

Prof. Samuel W. Rice, of Passaic, for the past eleven years superintendent and principal of the public schools, died on Saturday morning, of typhoid pneumonia. He had been an excellent school official, and had greatly endeared himself to the people. A local paper says: "Hardly a family in Passaic where tears will not fall on reflecting upon his death and the leaving of a family he loved so well. He was known by every man, woman and child in Passaic, and the grief is universal."

Fraud is a mild word to apply to the Star-route operations of Dorsey and Company. The Attorney for the United States in opening the cases, among other astounding facts, said: "On 13,110 bids made by certain contractors they gave bonds in the sum of $6,840,544, and probably there is not enough security in all of them to buy a spavined horse." Had the Democrats conducted public business on such a basis as that, how the country would have echoed with Republican partisan indignation.

Assemblyman Turkes, (Dem.,) of Essex, introduced the first Assembly bill of the present session of the Legislature, and it ought to be the first one made a law. It provides that each and every officer, director, manager or trustee of any bank, savings bank or trust company shall be personally liable to the depositors for their losses; the proportion to be ascertained by dividing the whole loss among the number of officers. It is just the thing needed in New Jersey, and the only thing which will make our monetary institutions solid.

The trial of the President's assassin, Guiteau, still drags its weary way along. For the defence, Mr. Scoville charges that Messrs. Arthur, Conkling and Grant are responsible for the murder of the President. The assassin still continues to interrupt the proceedings of the Court, and being denied the privilege of making a speech to the jury, has sent his harangue to the Associated Press for publication. Judge Porter will close for the Government in a speech, and it is to be hoped the farce will speedily come to an end, and the miserable wretch meet the just dues he so richly deserves—a hangman's knot.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

TRENTON, Jan. 17th, 1882.

The excitement attending the organization of last week has subsided. The great crowds who swarmed around the State House then, and who had interviewed their respective members from early morn until the midnight hour, insisting that unless their claims for office were duly recognized, the wheels of legislation would certainly be blocked, are not here this week, except a few who are expecting to be clerk to this or that committee. The Speaker has announced his committees which of course, as usual, is not satisfactory to all. The Speaker seems to overlook the fact that all ought to be chairmen of committees, when only one in five can obtain that honor. The only business thus far is the introduction of bills, a few of the most important you will find below, and the passage of joint resolutions:—respecting the examination of condition of the mortgages and property of the Sinking Fund, and a committee to examine into the finances of the State; also in reference to the death of President Garfield, deploring the act in the strongest terms and characterizing the assassin in proper terms. The House refused to concur in the last part of it, which declared the assassin as being sane. This was on motion stricken out, leaving that matter with the jury to decide, after which it passed unanimously. No important legislation has as yet developed. Several bills on taxes, and in reference to fishing and oyster interest. Up to this time about 28 in each House have been introduced. In executive session to-day, the Governor sent in the following nominations: Judge Knapp, of Jersey City, for Judge of Court of Errors and Appeals, and John P. Stockton for Attorney General. No action has yet been taken, as by the rules, they must lay over one day. The aspirants for Treasurer and other offices are moving around very quietly. Sheriff Toffey, of Hudson, and ex-Sheriff of Essex, Court Van Rensselaer, for Treasurer; A. M. Reynolds, of Newark, and others for Kelsey's warm seat. A host of fine looking gentlemen are endeavoring to convince the Governor that they are just the chaps to be appointed Lay Judges in their respective counties.

TRENTON, Jan. 18, 1882.

The House adjourned at 11¼ a. m., until next Monday evening. The Attorney General was confirmed to-day by a unanimous vote. No bills of importance were presented in either House to-day. X X X.

Plainfield Offenders Laid Away.

Offenders that come before Judges McCormick, Harper and Mulford at Elizabeth, have speedy and deserved justice dealt out to them without any unnecessary delay. Yesterday, Henry Wilson, who was accused of participating in the recent Lilienstern burglary, was tried, found guilty and sentenced to ten years in the State Prison. Nor was this all the Court found time to do during the day's sitting. Bernard Mullen, who it will be remembered robbed Mr. Geo. Opdyck's coachman and was also accused of the satchel snatching episodes that have been happening in our midst, was brought to the bar, tried on four different charges, found guilty of all and sentenced to fifteen years in the State Prison. Glory enough for a Jersey Court in one day.

THE DEATH ROLL.

The list of distinguished Americans who were summoned to pass death's portal during the year just closed was exceedingly large, and drew upon almost every leading profession.

At its head mournfully stands the name of President Garfield, whose cruel assassination spread such poignant sorrow over this country and throughout the world. Next to his is that of the venerable and learned Nathan Clifford, a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and then, in addition to the names of many prominent ex-Congressmen, comes those of Senators Carpenter, of Wisconsin, Burnside, of Rhode Island, and Representative Fernando Wood, of New York, known as "Father of the House." Following we note the names of Governor Wiltz, of Louisiana, and ex-Governors Bagley, of Michigan, Ligon and Bradford, of Maryland, Saulsbury, of Delaware, Anderson, of Maine, and Lane, of Indiana. From military and naval ranks the list was largely increased, and of literary celebrities it bears a sad record, including Dr. John G. Holland, James T. Field, Dr. Palfrey, John W. Forney and Sidney Lanier. The clerical profession likewise added to the lengthened roll the names of Bishop E. O. Haven, Dr. Leonard W. Bacon, and others of high repute.

Rarely has a single year furnished a death roll equal in illustrious character to that of 1881. It embraces men who have discharged life's duties well, and not only left behind them enduring personal renown, but results that will continue to benefit human-kind. Such is the acme of fame. May it inspire the youth of America to press onward and upward for the accomplishment of noble aims.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 16, 1882.

Council met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present except Mr. Kauffman. Pres. Rushmore in the Chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

At this juncture, the Pres. announced a change in the Committees. He was not aware that the Com. on Assessments and Sewers had been discontinued; he would therefore appoint Mr. Gardner as Chairman of Police Com.

By Mr. R. Simpson, petitions for saloon license of John Rafferty and Patrick Day. Ref'd to License Com.

By Mr. Gardner, petition of James H. Force, for a saloon license, and E. P. Thorn, petition for a hotel license. Ref'd. to License Com.

By Mr. Depew, claim of Jeremiah Van Winkle; one quarter's salary as City Treasurer, $75. Ref'd to Salary Com.

By Mr. Lindsley, claim of W. W. Coriell, Inspector at last Charter election, $10. Ref'd to Salary Com. Also, claim of Runyon & Leonard, printing and advertising, $92.75. Ref'd to Printing Com.

By Mr. R. Simpson, bond of Constable Amos Moffett. Ref'd to Law and Ord. Com.

By Mr. Depew, bond of City Treasurer, Jeremiah Van Winkle, with Jeremiah Van Winkle, John H. Van Winkle, John Wilson, Joseph S. Cutter and Carmon Parse, as sureties. Ref'd to Law and Ord. Com.

As to a question asked by Mr. Livingston of the Clerk in regard to the ordinances that were to be printed, the Clerk stated that a portion of the ordinances had been referred to the Corporation Counsel, and a return was expected by the Clerk in a few days. The Clerk stated that the Com. of last Council failed to make a report as the Charter directs.

Mr. Livingston then made a motion that the Com. on Printing proceed as fast as possible with the printing of the ordinances. Carried.

By Mr. Livingston, a motion that when Council adjourns, it adjourns to meet one week from to-night, 23d inst.

Mr. Depew thought the adjournment should be for two weeks, as four more licenses had been presented this evening; they would have to be advertised, and then, if adjournment was had until the 30th inst., all of the licenses could then be acted upon.

After some further discussion, the amendment of Mr. Depew was accepted by Mr. Livingston, and the motion, as amended, adopted.

Mr. Ginna asked of the Council if it was known that the late Collector had presented his books to the newly-elected Collector.

Mr. J. Simpson thought that they had not.

Mr. Ginna then offered the following:

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be instructed to employ a good accountant, and thoroughly examine the books of the late Collector back to date when said books were transferred from the Township authorities, and report to Council result of investigation.

Adopted. All aye.

On motion, the rules were suspended in order that the Law & Ord. Com. might report, the Chairman, through an oversight, failing to call the Com.

Mr. Ginna, from Law and Ord. Com., then reported favorably upon bond of Michael Conway, as Constable. Report received, and bond filed.

By Mr. Depew, the following:

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to have printed 100 cards of Standing Committees, and to procure necessary stationery for use of Common Council and City officials, not exceeding $10. Adopted. All aye.

By the same, the following:

WHEREAS, The warrant heretofore issued by J. Oakley Nodyne, Esq., Justice of the Peace, to Lewis E. Clark, late Collector of taxes, has been returned by said Clark to said Justice of the Peace, with an affidavit showing the amounts of State and County taxes still remaining unpaid.

Resolved, That said J. Oakley Nodyne, Esq., Justice of the Peace, be and he is hereby requested to issue an alias warrant for the collection of said delinquent taxes to John B. Brown, Esq., present Collector of taxes.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 16th, 1882.

Adopted. All aye.

On motion, rules were suspended, in order that Mr. Thompson, from Fire, Water and Lamp Com., might report upon several matters in his hands.

The Com. then reported favorably upon petition of Dr. Long to build stable. Report accepted. A communication was also presented from N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., offering to light all the lamps of the City for 9 cents per light per night, (they to furnish men to light the lamps and keep them in order) to burn from dark to dawn, at least 20 nights during the month. Should they receive the contract for all the lamps, the round gas lamps would have to be changed for square ones, and they would furnish them for $6.25 each, complete. Should they only light the lamps on the outskirts of the City the charge would be 10 cents per light per night. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps. A communication was also received from the Plainfield Gaslight Co., stating that the communication from Council was received too late for to-night's meeting, but would offer their proposition at next meeting of Council. Ref'd to same Com.

Mr. Thompson asked for information as regards the number of lamps in the "Boulevard District."

In reply, Mr. Depew moved that matters lying upon table of last Council pertaining to this question, be taken therefrom, and referred to the present Fire, Water and Lamp Com. Adopted.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

Personalia.

The many friends of ex Fire Commissioner Jacob Adams, of North Plainfield, will learn with regret of the sudden death of that gentleman's wife, which event occurred on Tuesday night last.

Mr. Randolph Marsh and family of this city, have the sympathy of the public in the sudden death of their daughter Carrie O., which occurred in New York on Wednesday last from diphtheria while visiting friends there. Her remains were brought to this city for interment on Thursday.

New Jersey Editorial Association.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association was held at the American House, Trenton, on Monday morning last, President Kilgore, of the Hunterdon County Democrat presiding. There was a large attendance of members and the proceedings of unusual interest. Ten new members were proposed and elected members.

The Treasurer's report showed that there was a balance of $776.61 in his hands.

The Secretary reported that as far as was then ascertained, there were 188 papers published in the State, as follows: Daily 29, weekly 148, semi-weekly 3, tri-weekly 1, monthly 6, quarterly 1. These are politically and otherwise classified as follows: Republican (daily 9, weekly 49), 58; Democratic (daily 7, weekly 42), 49; Independent 73; Greenback, 5; Literary, 5; Temperance, 3; Mechanical, 1; Legal, 1; Religious, 1; German papers included in above 13 (daily, 2, weekly 8, semi-weekly 1, tri-weekly 1.)

The following named gentlemen were elected officers of the Association for the ensuing year:

President—John F. Babcock, New Brunswick Fredonian.

Vice Presidents—First District, John Cheesman, Bridgeton Patriot.

Mr. Kilgore, on retiring from the chair, thanked the association for the honor they had conferred upon him and for the kindness and courtesy extended to him; and bespoke for his successor the same kind consideration.

President Babcock, on taking the chair, alluded to his twenty years' service as the Secretary of the Association, and after stating that he would rather the honor would have fallen upon another, declared that he would do all in his power for the best interests of the association. This was received with hearty applause.

BACHMAN advertises this week a "closing out sale" that offers decided opportunities for those desiring to purchase goods in his line.

THE celebrated Engle Clock attracted numbers to witness its marvelous performances at Laing's Hall last week. The clock is indeed a curiosity.

THE Grand Jury of Union County, having finished their labors, were discharged with the thanks of the Court, on Tuesday last, having brought in 32 bills of indictment and 2 presentments.

THE members of Gazelle Hose Co., No. 1 return thanks to those citizens who so kindly loaned them flags and other paraphernalia with which to decorate the Hall on the occasion of their late annual ball.

COMPTROLLER Anderson's office at the State House, Trenton, is a model of neatness and has a business like air about it. His many callers are received courteously and all information kindly given that is asked for.

TIER & Co. were engaged in "marking out" the ice on Tier's Lake Wednesday last, with the intention of commencing to harvest the commodity. John don't believe in waiting until the ice bug has devoured the whole crop.

MESSRS. Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, builders of North Plainfield, have erected new buildings since fire destroyed their old ones, and are now ready with new machinery and steam power to fill all orders received by them.

SOME unknown parties recently entered the Congregational Church edifice in this city, and breaking open several small earthen jugs containing contributions for the Sunday School, stole the contents. That is a new kind of "jug-breaking."

THE Board of Education acted wisely in electing Jacob Kirkner, Esq., President. Mr. Kirkner is eminently fitted for the position, being a gentleman of liberality and intelligence and practically acquainted with all the details and important needs of education.

JOHN SCUDDER, a colored man, was arrested by officer Dodd on Saturday last, charged with voting illegally in this city at the late charter election. The Grand Jury failing to find sufficient grounds for indictment, the man was discharged from custody.

PLAINFIELD is on the high road to public renown. Some time ago the legal mind of the country was agitated over knotty points concerning her City Judgeship, and now the political soup-bowl is hot and hissing because of a war dance around the question of Postmaster. Who can lift the Vail?

AT intervals during the past two or three weeks in this city, County Attorney Gillhooly and others have been engaged—and have now completed—the taking of a testimony in the matter to show cause why the city of Plainfield should not pay its deficiency of State and County taxes of 1880.

AN Illustrated Almanac, issued from the New Brunswick Fredonian office for 1882, is a valuable compendium of statistics and knowledge. The illustrations are fine and the printing excellent. Bro. Babcock is to be congratulated upon the success of his efforts to furnish his readers with a useful almanac.

LATE advices from the seat of war (over the Post Office) at Washington, report that there are only 29 candidates who aspire to be called Post Master of Plainfield. Talk about Democrats being hungry for legislative appointments, it is no circumstance to the appetite of the average Republican patriot for this small bit of patronage.

WE learn from the Daily Gazette of St. Joseph, Mo., that Mr. Eli H Bouton, formerly residing in Plainfield, engaged with Whitney, the dry goods merchant, and for some time Treasurer of the Crescent avenue church, has entered into a firm in that city which is spoken of as having "a capital running up into the millions of dollars" and "an established trade all over the Western States and Territories."

That excellent paper, the Plainfield Constitutionalist, has entered upon its fifteenth year. Its news takes a complete history of its vicinity and everything worth noting in that neighborhood is presented in its columns in the most entertaining manner.—Iron Era.

Thanks for the compliment, which we return by saying that the Iron Era, barring its politics, is the most readable journal in its section, containing as it does each week, a vast amount of local and general news.

THE promised readings of Prof. J. W. Churchill at the M. E. Church on the evening of Feb. 3d, are justly, at present, occupying a prominent place in the minds of Plainfield's entertainment seekers. As the rush for seats will undoubtedly be great, we would advise our readers to be at Reynolds' pharmacy as early on Monday next or thereafter as possible, and select available positions from which to hear the admired elocutionist.

THE Rev. N. B. Thompson of Netherwood having accepted a call to the Brooklyn pulpit formerly occupied by the Rev. "J. H." Smith, the Union Chapel will be without a permanent pastor. Although some of Mr. Thompson's congregation claim that he has been guilty of a breach of faith in accepting the new offer, there is some reason for the rumor that he came to Netherwood with the understood condition that he might receive a call to Brooklyn, which he should accept.

WHILE tolling the Methodist Church bell, on the occasion of Garfield's funeral, the cable supporting a weight regulating the striking apparatus of the clock in the tower, was broken, since when the clock has not struck the hour of the day and night. The Church authorities think the Council should appropriate funds sufficient to make the necessary repairs. The person who attends to winding the clock should also be remunerated. Let's have the town clock in striking condition once more. She keeps good time.

GOVERNOR Ludlow is the recipient of many calls at his rooms in the State House, Trenton, from citizens hailing from all parts of the State. The Governor receives them courteously, and always has time to grant a few moments converse, despite his multitudinous business engagements and cares. His private Secretary, Joseph L. Naar, is always to be found at his post, ready to attend to the duties incumbent upon his position, and has made many warm friends by his obliging manners since his appointment.

AT Mrs. Gen'l George B. McClellan's regular Thursday evening reception of last week, there were present the Misses Wotherspoon formerly of this city, and Gen'l Wm. H. Sterling. The guests were "honored" more than usual by a presentation to that S—thetic apostle, Oscar Wilde.

IN the Central Times of this week, the Rev. Thos. H. Stockton of the M. E. Church and Mr. H. P. Reynolds, in their respective communications on the "Temperance Question" and the "Relief Association," show themselves to be philanthropic citizens of clear judgment and sound wisdom.

MESSRS. G. W. Whitney & Co., having recently erected extensive quarters on Third street near Peace and placed therein the boiler, engine and machinery necessary to run one of the celebrated Ryder Steam Carpet-Cleaners, are now prepared to undertake any amount of such work they may be favored with. By this process all beating, shaking and straining are avoided and the carpets more thoroughly cleaned than in any other way.

A SUBSCRIPTION paper is being circulated among the citizens of North Plainfield that deserves the assistance of all. It is for the benefit of Mr. Wm. Ruttle who lives on the Green Brook road, and has recently suffered a loss he can ill afford. On the 5th inst., while passing Wilson's blacksmith shop at Millington, a load of hay which Ruttle was bringing to Plainfield was set on fire by friction and entirely consumed; thereby causing him a loss of about $85.

The Chess Tournament.

The score in the Plainfield contest up to to-day, is as follows:

Asa Collier, won 10 lost 3; John Jackson, won 8 lost 3; Henry Boice, won 7 lost 3; George P. Suydam, won 6 lost 2; Chas. Opdyke, won 5, lost 0; George S. Hunt, won 4 lost 8; Chas. Dewey, won 3 lost 9; Chas. R. Thiers, won 3 lost 11; Alexander Gilbert, won 2 lost 0; Geo. Long, won 2 lost 7.

The Jolly 2.

The jolliest of all Balls was assuredly that given on Wednesday evening at Laing's Hall under the management of that "Jolly 2," Messrs. Wright and Robinson. There is no doubt that all arrangements were too utterly too-too for anything, and this, "Jolly 2" are to be greatly praised for their admirable efforts. The music was led—as it always is at first-class dances—by Prof. Frazee, and in consequence a judiciously selected "order" was greatly enjoyed. After a night of much pleasure, the merry bachelors bid adieu to their friends, and the very successful ball came to an end.

K. of P.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, of this city, had their officers (elected for the ensuing term) regularly installed last Friday evening by D. D. C. C. Rhodes, of Elizabeth, and his able assistants. There was a very large attendance of the brethren, and very cheering remarks were made by the Grand Officials present, including G. K. of R. and S., Eugene Lorton of "74." One candidate for admission to the order was balloted for and elected, six applications were received from persons desirous of uniting with Perseverance Lodge, and a number of additional applications are to be handed in next week. The new hall for this Lodge—situated in the same building on the same floor facing Front street—is being rapidly put in "ship-shape order" by a corps of carpenters, painters and decorators, and the same is to be handsomely furnished and made fit for occupancy—probably some time next month. The "boom" of prosperity that has overtaken this Lodge, has called forth congratulations from Bro. Knights from various parts of the State. "Long may she wave."

Mother Goose and Kate Greenaway.

Although a "miserable day" preceded the opening evening of the entertainment that had been arranged by the ladies of the Congregational church for the benefit of its "building fund," quite a large audience assembled on Friday evening last to enjoy the infantile and charming features of the affair. The entertainment consisted of a cantata and tableaux, introducing rythmes from our old friend Mother Goose and costumes after our latter-day artist, the intensely quaint Kate Greenaway. The parts were all more or less well taken, and the "star" of the evening—Mrs. S. C. Roney (we hope we betray no secret) as Mother Goose—was particularly worthy of praise. Although the "waits" were unnecessarily long, the time was well occupied by instrumental and vocal interludes of music. The entertainment was repeated the next day and an undoubted financial success as a whole, resulted. In fact so enjoyable was the affair, that a repetition of its most delectable parts will be given on Saturday next, at 3 o'clock p. m.

Gazelle Hose Co's. Ball.

The Second Annual Ball of Gazelle Hose Co., No. 1, which took place at Van Deventer Hall on Thursday evening of last week, was, as we prophesied it would be, a grand success in every way. The evening was favorable, the music by Frazee unsurpassed, the Hall handsomely decorated, the girls awfully sweet, the boys just too jolly, and everything passed off most delightfully smooth. The fire-laddies deserve the profit they secured by their labors, and increased success after the past, is sure to result at the next. The General Director of the occasion was Foreman Chas. F. Johnson resplendent with blue and gold badge; while Mr. Frank Anoy as Floor Manager with white and gold badge, assisted by Messrs. F. Putnam and H. Kurzhals with white and silver badges, formed the sets, started the merry dancers and in other ways kept up the evening's amusements. The Reception Committee consisted of Messrs. T. Hoffman and P. Hedden, and the Committee of Arrangements was Messrs. John Casey, C. F. Johnson, G. W. Demarest and F. Clark. The Company's officers are: Foreman, Charles F. Johnson; 1st Asst. Foreman, George W. Demarest; 2d Asst. Foreman, Theo. Hoffman; Secretary, James Love, and Treasurer, Frank Putnam. A noteworthy feature of the occasion was the "fire set." While dancing this Quadrille, there was a fine display of colored lights, and a tableaux representing firemen engaged in fighting the fire fiend, with a stream of water ejected from a line of hose.

Y. M. C. A.—Mayor Randolph's Address

Mayor Randolph will give, at the lecture-room of Trinity Reformed church, next week, Thursday evening (Jan. 26) at 8 o'clock, an address on "Life in the Mountains," which will be the third in the course of Descriptive Talks given by the Y. M. C. A. Tickets to the course (admitting ladies with gentlemen) may be had of the Secretary.

The Death Roll.

Since our last issue Plainfield's public has been called upon to sustain successive shocks following the announcements of sudden and unexpected deaths that blotted out two of the foremost on its living list of those most admired and respected.

On Monday evening of last week, at the residence of Councilman Newhall, the teachers of the Crescent avenue church were most pleasantly entertained, and among the brightest and most free from care of the gathering assembled, was as always, Mr. Oliver B. Mathews. Four days later, at the same hour he lay dead in the New York Hospital. On the evening referred to, he casually mentioned to one of two of his brother-workers in the Sunday School and Church—in a manner as though he considered it but a passing ailment—that he was slightly troubled by a swelling in the fleshy part of his leg, and intended to have it operated upon the next day at the Hospital. The affection proved to be a growth of tumorous character, but the operation of removing it was so apparently successful that the few intimate friends and relations who alone knew of danger, were cheered by the receipt of a telegram from the patient's wife, on Tuesday, that all peril was passed in safety. How much greater therefore was the shock to those reposing in confidence, when on Friday the Rev. J. C. Bliss telegraphed to inform those in this city closely connected with Mr. Matthews, that he was rapidly sinking. Dr. Bliss at once proceeded to the sick man's bedside and was with him during the evening when he died. The deceased was one of the most prominent in the good work of the Crescent avenue church, and being repeatedly re-elected one of its Trustees, occupied such position at the time of his death. He was highly respected in all circles, and universally admired for his kindness of heart, generosity of disposition and uprightness of character. He occupied a business position of the greatest responsibility, and the entire confidence of his employers was reposed in him. The funeral took place at the Crescent avenue church on Tuesday and was one of the most largely attended of like occasions in the city.

Before the slightest lapse of time had soothed the sympathetic sorrow felt by the community for the loss sustained by the widow, son and daughter of the above, another as sudden a death occurred in our midst. Mr. James M. Taylor, a large-property owner in this city, one of its most prominent citizens and an active and sincere church member, died at his residence on Central avenue, of apoplexy. On Sunday morning the deceased, as was his uninterrupted custom, attended church feeling in usual health, but on returning home became so ill that his physician was called in. No treatment, however, seemed to have any effect, and at eleven o'clock of the same evening the sufferer fell forward from the chair in which he was sitting and immediately expired. The deceased leaves a large family of both grown up and younger children, including a son by a former wife, prosperously established as a minister of the gospel. The funeral services were held at the late residence of Mr. Taylor on Wednesday, at 5 o'clock p. m. His widow is a sister-in-law of the Rev. Dr. Lowry of the Park avenue church.

Serious Accident at a Fire.

About four o'clock on Saturday afternoon last, an alarm of fire was given, caused by flames issuing from the roof of a dwelling house on East Fourth street, just above the Gas House. The firemen were promptly on hand, and taking water from the supply surrounding the gas tanks, soon had powerful streams on the flames, No. 1 engine having honor of first water. The fire was a difficult one to manage, inasmuch as the flames were confined in the garret of the building, the slate roof preventing its bursting forth out of the top of the same. Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1 speedily erected a ladder against the building, and Frank Vreeland, a member of the truck, assisted by members of Gazelle Hose Co. No. 1, essayed to carry the line of hose up to the roof. They succeeded in getting the heavy hose to the top, a powerful stream meantime playing out of the nozzle, but soon found they were unable to bring the stream to bear upon the flames within the garret, as cross streams from the other engines were playing directly upon them, unknown by the firemen at the pipes. Finding they could not control the pipe they backed down the ladder with the hose. Foreman T. O. Doane, of No. 1, then started up the ladder with the pipe himself, calling upon Vreeland and others to follow him, which they did. He succeeded in reaching the extreme top of the ladder with the pipe, when by a sudden strain upon the hose, caused by the firemen below in "fighting up," the nozzle slipped from his grasp, and turning, the stream struck him full upon the right side of his face. He fortunately retained his hold upon the ladder and immediately descended to the ground. Orders were given to stop the engine, and the line of hose, was then successfully carried up the ladder, and the flames speedily extinguished, the streams from Nos. 2 and 3 Engines assisting on the other side of the building. Ex-Chief Wm. H. Voorhees saw that Foreman Doane was badly injured, as blood was issuing from his mouth, ears and eyes, and assisted him to his father's residence, which was but a short distance away, where he rendered all aid in his power by applying proper remedies until the arrival of Dr. Boone, who was called in. Dr. Probasco, who happened in the vicinity, also was consulted. Both physicians decided that the injuries were severe and grave apprehensions were held for a time that they might result fatally. The right side of his face seemed to be crushed as from the blow of a sand club, extending from the jaw to the eye, which was bulged out and closed, while an examination showed that the organs of the throat were lacerated from the blow. Subsequent examination proved that the jaw was fractured, and on Thursday, a plaster cast was made from which to construct an appliance to keep the fractured parts in place until healed together. When we state that the stream which struck Mr. Doane was being forced through a one and one-eighth inch nozzle, by sixty pounds of steam, with 160 pounds water pressure to the square inch on the hose, it seems a miracle that he was not knocked from the ladder and fatally injured. Mr. Doane was formerly Chief of the Fire Department and is an experienced fireman. His many friends, while sympathizing with him in his affliction, will be pleased to learn that he is steadily improving and is likely to recover from his injuries, although not yet out of danger.

The building in which the fire occurred, was owned by Mr. David Clark and occupied by his family and that of Lewis Marsh, and was damaged by fire and water, to the extent of about $700, although the fire was confined to the garret. The loss was covered by insurance in G. B. Leonard's agency. The firemen were very prompt in arriving upon the scene, after the alarm, No. 1 Engine being drawn there by Peter Bickert's team of horses, while No. 2 secured a hitch behind a passing wagon. No. 3 also made quick time by hand.

Grand United Ball.

The several Irish Societies of Plainfield have resolved to hold a Grand United Ball in St. Mary's Hall, on Fourth street, the evening of Jan. 25th. The Societies are the Land League, Ancient Order of Hibernians, St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, Young Men's Catholic Union and Robert Emmet Society. Music will be furnished by Cahill's String Band, of Elizabeth. Tickets of admission, 50 cents. This will undoubtedly prove an enjoyable occasion.

Plainfield Democratic Association.

Pursuant to call made by the President of the Democratic Association of Plainfield in last week's CONSTITUTIONALIST, a meeting was held at headquarters last Friday evening for the purpose of electing officers of the Association for the ensuing year.

President James E. Martine occupied the Chair and W. L. Force was appointed Secretary pro tem in the absence of the regular Secretary.

The following officers were elected to serve one year:

President—James E. Martine.
1st Vice Pres.—Nathan Harper.
2d " " —J. W. Yates.
3d " " —Karl Theo. Polak.
Treasurer—Jas. S. Vosseller.
Rec. Secretary—Louis F. Walsworth.
Cor. Secretary—W. S. Chase.

Burglary.

Some time during Saturday night or Sunday morning last, burglars effected an entrance into the office building of Mr. John H. Hall's lumber yard on Peace Street. Mr. Hall has been in the habit of leaving his safe unlocked nights, not depositing any valuables therein. Consequently the thieves had but to turn the handle of the door to open the safe. Finding nothing but books, they blew open the small inner safe door, and secured for their pains $7.25 in cash. They also took away with them four coats hanging up in the office, one of them an overcoat. An attempt was made also to force an entrance into the safe of Mr. C. S. Gulon, the coal merchant, whose office is with Mr. Hall. They must have finally given the job up and departed without any other spoils than that mentioned above.

Dr. De Haas on Egypt.

On Tuesday evening at the Park avenue Church, Dr. Frank De Haas delivered the second of his trio of lectures on classic, oriental and bible lands, to an audience unusually large and entirely interested. "Egypt and the Country beyond Jordan" was described as only an intelligent speaker telling of personal experience can; while the description was illustrated and the scenes more impressively familiarized by the exhibition of numerous articles of apparel and other curiosities collected by the lecturer during his travels and residence abroad. The last of the series will if possible, be the most enjoyable, in a general way. The speaker will take his hearers "Round the World in Less than Eighty Days," and we would advise the public to be on hand at the Park avenue Baptist church on Tuesday evening the 31st inst. and start on the voyage.

The Fifth of the Y. M. C. A. Course.

The second appearance of Miss Nellie F. Brown before a Plainfield audience, at the M. E. Church, on Thursday evening of last week, evidenced that she has lost none of her power to please our public. Continued success has not misled this elocutionist into that faulty path followed by so many, who, becoming flattered in their early career by the applause of their audiences, attempt to express dialects, delineate characters and portray scenes beyond their intelligence and capabilities. Miss Brown has much talent in a certain line, which fact she appreciates and sensibly confines herself to such line. Although, outside of tragical parts she may invest all her women with a most infantile idioms and silly actions, still the female characters she usually selects may—by a stretch of imagination—seemed to be so endowed. "Money Musk"—by Mr. Benj. F. Taylor the next "star" of the Course—was treated by Miss Brown in a manner so original with herself as to claim just commendation, while her retelling of "A Story told by a Clock" was undoubtedly never excelled. Other compositions were also favorably rendered in spite of a severe cold under which the artist suffered, although the sixth and tenth numbers were too hackneyed to excite enthusiastic approval.

Added to the more admirable features of the evening's entertainment, was the organ execution of Mr. David Lyon. That gentleman who occupies the position of organist at the First Baptist Church, displayed unquestionable talent in his performance and the most sincere appreciation was given his efforts. Miss Emma S. Howe, who sang with the Philharmonic Club at the first entertainment of the Course, and is the leading soprano of Beecher's church choir, sustained the vocal part of the programme. The selections, however, were so classical (?) as to afford no more pleasure than might be experienced by listening to the "exercises" of an advanced beginner. Her last appearance of the evening claimed a complimentary encore, to which she assented with a ballad that lost its beauty by reason of an inexcusable mouthing of the words.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS EDITORS:—

Can we encroach upon your time and the valuable space in your journal to express a few words upon the death of our late friend and companion, Mr. John H. Staats? Mr. Staats was perhaps more intimately and closely known in our city than in your own beautiful town and vicinity where he has summered for so many years, and to-day lies buried. To speak of him as a gentleman of strict integrity and uprightness of character is needless, for that is known by all. But being a close and intimate friend for many years, both in the business and social walks of life, we cannot refrain from expressing our sorrow and grief at his sudden demise, in the very prime of his life. When we stop for a moment in this ever busy and ever bustling city, and bring up before us the delightful recollections of the many pleasant hours spent in his company, the company of one so gifted, cultured and refined, and yet so reserved; and know that we shall never again feel the grasp of his warm hand, nor receive from his lips the welcome smile and cheery word, it saddens our hearts and causes us to feel that there has been taken from the chain of our friends one of the brightest and most polished links it contained. A shadow seems to be thrown about us; and the light which shone in all the brightness and power of mid-day but a few days ago—has gone out! Mr. Staats was a man of intellect, that many much better and more widely known than himself might envy, and stood high in the estimation of the best and cultured in this city to-day. He was a most diligent searcher after knowledge, and nothing but the choicest and best would do for him. He was a student in political economy, and thoroughly conversant and familiar with the best literature of the Old and the New Worlds. Though slight and delicate in build, he was a most powerful speaker and a formidable opponent in debate, and yet so courteous and gentlemanly withal, that he would invariably win the plaudits of his opponent; because of the very strength of argument, the beautiful web he would weave in his pictures, and the delightful and ever-pleasing manner he would deal with the subject. So sharply cut and unmistakable would be his language, and vivid his illustration, that no one would have need to ask the question—"What does he mean?" The Lee Literary association of New York of which he had been a member for more than 15 years, has lost one of the best and most brilliant members of over 100 names upon the roll. To say that the Association will miss him is but the weakest expression; they loved him. Officially he has held many offices, and at the time of his death was chairman of the Executive Committee, which office he had held for many years. Keenly do they feel his loss, and unanimously agree that it is irreparable; for all of their joys were his joys, and all of their sorrows were his sorrow. He was a constant and earnest worker, always in attendance, and by virtue of his office, continually catered to the edification and pleasure of the Association. Many a diffident young man and woman did he help bring forward in debate and other exercises, and they openly thank him for it to-day. He was ever reaching out a helping hand to the timid, and whispering a word of cheer and encouragement to them when they faltered. To the old as well as to the young and the gay, he was most courteous and attentive; the latter quality may explain the reason why he was so dutiful and excellent a son to his fond and loving mother and father, who to-day are so heavily burdened with grief and sorrow that has once more crossed the threshold of their mountain home. Could we have received the notice of his death before we did, (the 6th) a very large part of our Association would have been present at his funeral. As the beautiful floral tribute attested, nevertheless, 13 were in their places that day to pay a feeble tribute to his memory. At a special meeting held to take action upon the death of our dear companion, the banner of the "Lee" was clad in mourning, and appropriately draped, stood the vacant chair, speaking too truly to each silent member present of the one who had occupied it but a short time ago with so much dignity and grace. Many touching words of our companion's worth and goodness of fourteen years intimate fellowship were spoken. The utmost silence prevailed; a committee was appointed by the President to draft suitable resolutions upon the death of Mr. Staats, to be placed upon the minutes, and a copy of the same engrossed and sent to his bereaved family. The meeting then quietly adjourned.

ALFRED H. LORTON.

New York City, Jan. 17, 1882.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a special meeting of the Lee Literary Association, held at the residence of Mrs. Alfred H. Lorton, in the city of New York, on Monday evening Jan. 9th, 1882, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Death has removed from our midst our late esteemed fellow member John H. Staats, who departed this life on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1882; and

WHEREAS, For fourteen years past, John H. Staats, was an active and prominent member of this Association, cheerfully devoting his time and energy to its service; therefore be it

Resolved, That by his death this Association feel that it has suffered a severe and painful loss. We greatly acknowledge his manifold services as a member and officer, and the many obligations under which this Association is, whose success, due in great part to his personal efforts, he took so much manly pride, rests with him.

Resolved, That this Association reverently pays tribute to the many excellent qualities of heart and mind, which distinguished the late John H. Staats. He was a true friend, having a kindly word and a cheering smile for all; a perfect gentleman whose courtesy and manners endeared him to those who knew him; an upright noble man in whose heart was "Charity for all and malice toward none." The memories he has left behind him are fragrant with the beauty of his nature.

Resolved, That the members of this Association feel that they have each sustained a personal bereavement in the death of John H. Staats, and will ever remember him with affection.

In words like weeds, I'll wrap me o'er
Like coarsest clothes against the cold;
But that large grief which these unfold,
Is given in outline and no more.

Resolved, That to the aged parents whom he loved so well, and the sorrowing friends whom he has left behind, this Association tenders its earnest sympathy and its sincere condolence.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this Association, and a copy, suitably engrossed, and signed by the President, Secretary and Committee, be forwarded to the family of our late fellow member.

THEO. CROWELL, President.
MISS WILMOT RUST, Secretary.

L. C. THOMPSON,

Refugee Rarick Heard From.

From the New York Herald of yesterday, we glean the following:

"A bigamist was to-day discovered in Montreal and his victim taken from him. The story is one of domestic intrigue, duplicity and wrong, while it was but an accident that prevented it from ending in a tragedy. In the spring of 1881 Edward W. Rarick, said to represent a large wholesale firm in New York (Messrs. Iveson, Blakeman, Taylor & Co.,) visited Skowhegan, Me. He was an accomplished pianist and vocalist, with dark, curling hair and good presence. He ingratiated himself without much trouble into the family of a Mr. Tuttle, of that place, and soon won the affections of a daughter of the family. After several months of courtship the pair were united with the full consent of the young lady's parents, who believed Rarick to be all that he represented himself to be. On the day of the marriage he said that he had received an urgent business call to Boston, and the pair left Skowhegan with the good will of every one ringing in their ears. He changed his mind before reaching Boston and came to Montreal under the assumed name of Romayn. After living in a prominent hotel for a few days, he departed to the miseries of a private boarding house. The young wife soon sickened of this life, and some three weeks ago grew desperate because of Romayn's ill treatment. She purchased a phial of chloral and made a desperate effort to end her miseries in death. Dr. Cameron was called in and his skill alone succeeded in saving her. Anxious friends in Skowhegan had up till then heard nothing whatever of her whereabouts. Mr. Tuttle at length learned that his daughter was here, and arrived in Montreal yesterday, accompanied by Mr. D. V. B. Ormsby, of Farmington. The missing girl was quickly discovered, and a message was sent to her that a friend wished to see her at a hotel. She hastened thither to find her father awaiting her. The meeting was a glad one for her, but in her waste and poorly clad form, the father hardly recognized the laughing, happy girl, who but a few months ago left his homestead for what she believed was to be an honorable life. Subsequently Rarick, alias Romayn, was brought face to face with the parties. He acknowledged that he had a wife and three children living in Plainfield, N. J., and said he had been compelled by Miss Tuttle's beauty to marry her. Having heard from his own lips the story of his duplicity, his victim turned from him with loathing. To-day she accompanied her father home. Rarick is still in Montreal."

This Rarick, it will be remembered by our readers, was formerly Principal of the North Plainfield Public School.—He ought to be extradited by the authorities "over the brook" (Canada).

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Manning has contracted with one of our machinists for a steam whistle to be put on his steam laundry.

The Rev. Mr. McAllister, of Trinity church, Elizabeth, officiated at the services in the Episcopal church on Sunday evening.

Carpenter John N. Wilcox has taken the contract to build a new dwelling house near Bloodgood Mills, in Clark Township.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Wigger, of Newark, expects to pay an official visit soon to the Parish of the Roman Catholic church in our place.

Ben Parker has received the contract to take down and remove lightning rods during the winter months, they being not needed that time of year.

Prof. J. Anderson Butts, of Drew Seminary, occupied the pulpit of the M. E. church on Sunday last. Mr. Butts is a brother-in-law of the pastor, Rev. Wm. Hoagland.

The Cory patent washing machine, of which Messrs. Traynor and Beller are owners, need only to be used to be appreciated. They are manufactured in several sizes, large and small.

The suit of Joseph G. Hanson vs. Gotlieb Nick, of Cranford, in an action of debt, was tried before Justice Jacques Jan. 14th inst. Judgment for plaintiff for the sum of $52.64 and costs.

The Rev. Joseph Greaves occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday last, both morning and evening. The Rev. Wm. H. Gill is about removing to his new charge at Altoona, Penn.

Why don't the Town Committee order the guide post erected on corner of Broad street and Central avenue. Some person has run against the post with a loaded wagon and broken the old one down.

The Fisk University Jubilee singers are advertised to give a grand sacred concert on Monday evening, Jan. 23d inst., in the methodist church, proceeds for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ball on last Thursday evening at Moffett's Hall, was slimly attended. Although the number present was small, they had a very enjoyable time under the inspiring music of Messrs. Wilcox and Applegate.

The Village Improvement Committee have done a good thing in employing John Peiffer as lamp lighter again. The difference can be seen already in the cleanliness of the lamps and brightness of the same.

The pastor of the Congregation church, Rev. Henry Neill, delivered a lecture in Lyceum Hall on Sunday evening, Jan. 15th inst. Subject, on the purpose of Mark's Gospel. The subject was ably discussed and listened to by an attentive audience.

Our ice dealers are beginning to feel very blue over the prospect of gathering a supply of ice from Clark's lake. It has not at any time this winter been over four inches in thickness, which is not thick enough to make it profitable to store for summer use.

The performance of the Little Four, Amateur Minstrel Troupe, on Monday evening last at Lyceum Hall, was to a small audience, owing perhaps to the rainy evening. The different performers acted their parts well, especially those in the sketch "Sam Peterson's Intelligence Office," and the young clog dancer, Master Geo. McGee.

The store building of Mr. James T. Pierson, wends its way along Broad street very slowly, owing to the muddy condition of the roads. It is keeping the road nearly blockaded from side to side, making it impossible for loaded teams to pass it; but it cannot be helped; people must have patience with contractor Emmons. He is doing the best he can.

The suit of Andrew J. Collins vs. James McMurray, for trespass, was tried before Justice Jacques on Friday last. This is a case where Collins claims that McMurray shot and killed one of his chickens, which he (Collins) valued at $5. Several witnesses were examined and considerable contradictory testimony given. The Justice gave judgment against the defendant for the sum of five dollars and costs. Mr. McMurray has carried it up to the higher courts.

There ought to be some way to prevent the boys from ringing the school-house bell, whenever there is a meeting in the evening in that building. Last Monday evening, about 9 o'clock, there being singing school in the hall, some boys rang the bell. It is used as a fire alarm. It was heard in Lyceum Hall during the performance of the Minstrel troupe and came very near creating a rush for the door. If the boys persist in ringing the bell, it may result in some serious disaster to life and limb.

On Friday, Jan. 13th inst., Mrs. Mary Ann Clark, aged 76 years, widow of Matthias Clark, residing on the Clark homestead, Clark street, Westfield, died quite suddenly of heart disease. She had been complaining only about one week, the family thinking nothing serious until her death on Friday afternoon. The funeral services took place from her late residence on Monday, at 2:15 p. m. The Rev. James D. Wilson of the Central Presbyterian Church, 57th street, N. Y., performed the burial services. The deceased gave the lot on which the First Methodist Church was erected, in this place, it being the site on which the present church now stands.

A. K. Gale, who has so long patiently waited upon the customers at Gale's drug store, has with his brother-in-law of Elizabeth, purchased of Dr. A. S. Titsworth the entire stock of his store, at New Market, N. J. They have already taken possession of the same and intend conducting it as a dry goods and grocery store, in connection with the drug business, which the Doctor has already established there. It is a good stand for doing an extensive business. The firm name is A. K. Gale & Co. Gus has the well wishes of the whole community in his new enterprise. If he gives the same attention to business there as he has done during his long stay in Westfield, he cannot help but be successful.

On Thursday evening last, officer Marsh was called up at eleven o'clock by Charlie Wittke to look after a young man, who seemed to be nearly perished with cold, he being thinly clad. Mr. Marsh found the young man to be unable to articulate but very few words, owing to an impediment in his speech, but this much he found out—the boy's name to be Isaac Burns, and that he lived near Cranford. He took him to the Westfield depot, where Marsh was told the boy's mother at Cranford was telegraphing all over the country for him, she being almost wild with fear that some accident had befallen him. He was sent down on the 11:30 p. m. train to Cranford and his mother met and took him home.

The Town Committee met at Town rooms on Thursday evening, Jan. 12th inst.

The Annual installation of officers of Lodge No. 169 I. O. O. F. occurred on Wednesday evening Jan. 18th inst. at their Lodge room in Academy building. The installation ceremonies were conducted by J. Warren Brown, D. D. G. M. Among the number present from other Lodges were Oliver Pierce, the Grand Treasurer of Grand encampment, and J. Folton, P. G. of Franklyn Lodge, Elizabeth; Z. M. Hanfmeal, P. G., John Bedfue, P. G., James Clarkson, P. G., James Ryno, V. G. and others of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, also C. Ehulick, P. G. and John T. Durand of Essex County Lodge No. 27, of Rahway. After the business of the evening was over they adjourned to John Darsh's, where a fine collation gotten up in John's best style was spread, to which all did ample justice after which speech making was indulged in by visiting members and members of the Lodge until time was called to escort their guests to the depot to take the train for their respective homes.

On Wednesday afternoon, Jan 18th inst., at 3 p. m. the corner stone of the new Congregational Church on Elmer street, was laid. The ceremonies consisted of singing by the congregation, prayer by the pastor, Rev. Henry Neill, singing, reading of the list of articles deposited in the corner stone as follows:—records of church organization and proceedings to date, copies of letters, missives, list of members of church, minutes of building committee to date, St. James revision of the Bible, revised edition of new testament, constitution of church and articles of faith, copies of the following newspapers: The Congregationalist of Boston, THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of Plainfield and Westfield Monitor. The above articles were placed in a lead box which was soldered up by John Ingram and placed in the corner stone, which was of fine white granite. The mortar in which the stone was laid was put in place by Mr. Albert Bridge. Mr. E. Embree read the report of the financial condition of the church which was very minute and showed the church to be in a very prosperous condition.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

Unhealthy or inactive kidneys cause gravel, Bright's disease, rheumatism and a horde of other serious and fatal diseases, which can be prevented with Hop Bitters, if taken in time.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.
I have Hop Bitters with great recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

WHEN BABIES ARE FRETFUL they disturb everybody, and mothers should know how soothing Parker's Ginger Tonic is. It takes away half their anxiety, stops babies' pains, and is always safe and pleasant to use.—Home Journal.

Headache, bilious attacks, dizziness, and loss of appetite are cured by Kidney-Wort. See adv.

Mr. Dave Wambold, of the famous San Francisco Minstrels, says: "I cannot speak too highly of sweet Sozodont. It is the best and purest tooth wash I have ever used. I gladly recommend it to all."

$1500 per year can be easily made at home working for E. G. Rideout & Co., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for their catalogue and full particulars.

IN OUR FAMILY OF TEN, for over two years Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured headache, malaria, and in fact all other complaints so satisfactorily that we are in excellent health and no expense for doctors or other medicines.—Chronicle.

"ESCAPING EVERYBODY," writes a druggist, "Kidney-Wort is the most popular medicine we sell." It should be by rights, for no other medicine has such specific action on the liver, bowels and kidneys. If you have those symptoms which indicate biliousness or deranged kidneys do not fail to procure it and use it faithfully. In liquid or dry form it is sold by all druggists.—Salt Lake City Tribune.

How to Kill a Young City.

If you wish to keep a young city from thriving don't put up any more buildings than you can conveniently occupy yourself. If you should accidentally have an empty dwelling and any one should wish to rent it, ask him three times the value of it. Demand a Shylock price for every foot of ground God has given you stewartship over. Turn a cold shoulder to every mechanic and business man seeking a home among you. Look at every new-comer with a scowl. Run down the work of every new workman. Go abroad for wares rather than deal with those who seek to do business in your midst. Fail to advertise or in any way fail to support your local paper, so people abroad may not know whether any business is going on in your town or not. Wrap yourselves up within yourselves of impervious selfishness. There is no more effectual way to retard the growth of a young city than the actions exactly like these enumerated.

WHOM NOT TO MARRY.

Women who love their husbands are happy and at rest. Those who do not are disturbed and restless. They are always seeking for some means of killing time. They are ready to flirt at any moment. Their children are, according to their means, either hidden in nurseries under the care of French bonnes, or handed over to Sally, the slatternly nurse, to shake and slap and stuff with sugar, as her wisdom dictates, while society and amusements of all sorts occupy their mother's time. Home is not happy to the poor woman, because she has chosen her mate foolishly—because she trusted to that 'love after marriage' which mercenary old people promise those who make what they call a sensible match.

Sad as a neglected wife, who loves her husband well, must be, I believe she is happier than this poor restless creature, though she be worshipped. The love of one we do not love becomes simply a bore, especially in the close intercourse of home life; and she who does not give her heart to her husband is not likely to care much for his children. So, girls, if you do not love your lover, don't marry him. Remember that marriage is a serious step, and that when you give him your hand that he may encircle it with a wedding ring, you seal the happiness or misery of your natural life. Don't marry unless you are sure of your love for him, and his for you.

THE SCIENCE OF KISSING.

An American editor thus discourses on this interesting topic: "People will kiss; yet not one in a hundred knows how to extract bliss from lovely lips, any more than they know how to make diamonds from charcoal. And yet it is easy, at least for us. First know whom you are going to kiss. Don't make a mistake, although a mistake may be good. Don't jump up like a trout for a fly, and smack a woman on the neck, or the ear, or on the corner of the forehead, or on the top of her nose. The gentleman should be a little the taller. He should have a clean face, a kind eye and a mouth full of expression. Don't kiss everybody. Don't sit down to it; stand up. Need not be anxious about getting in a crowd. Two persons are plenty to corner, and catch a kiss; more would spoil the sport. Take the left hand of the lady in your right; let your hat go to—any place out of the way; throw the left hand gently over the shoulder of the lady, and let it fall down the right side. Do not be in a hurry; draw her gently, lovingly to your heart. Her head will fall gently on your shoulder, and a handsome shoulder strap it makes. Do not be in a hurry. Her left hand is in your right; let there be an impression to that, not like the grip of a vise, but a gentle clasp full of electricity, thought, and respect. Do not be in a hurry. You are heart to heart. Look down into her half closed eyes. Gently, yet manfully, press her to your bosom. Stand firm. Be brave, but don't be in a hurry. Her lips are almost open. Lean slightly forward with your head, not the body. Take good aim; the lips meet; the eyes close; the heart opens; the soul rides the storms, troubles, and sorrows of life (don't be in a hurry); heaven opens before you; the world shoots under your feet, as a meteor flashes across the evening sky (don't be afraid); the heart forgets its bitterness, and the art of kissing is learned. No fuss, no noise, no fluttering and squirming like hook-impaled worms. Kissing don't hurt; nor does it require an act of Congress to make it legal."

Beautiful are the admonitions of those whose life accords with their teachings.

WHY THEY OFTEN FAIL.

Young men often fail to get on in this world because they neglect small opportunities. Not being faithful in little things, they are not promoted to the charge of greater things. A young man who gets a subordinate situation sometimes thinks it is not necessary for him to give it much attention. He will wait till he gets a place of responsibility, and then he will show people what he can do. This is a very great mistake. Whatever his situation may be, he should master it in all its details, and perform all its duties faithfully. The habit of doing his work and conscientiously is what is most likely to enable a young man to make his way. With this habit, a person of only ordinary abilities would outstrip one of greater talents who is in the habit of slighting subordinate matters. But, after all, the mere adoption by a young man of this great essential rule of success shows him to be possessed of superior abilities.

THAT BOY OF GALLAGHER'S.

One morning last winter, Mr. Gallagher had to take a train that left at six o'clock, and so he arose before daylight to breakfast, and thought he would put on his thick boots instead of the very light shoes he had on over night. It seems that Gallagher's son had worn the old man's boots while roller skating, and left the skates on the boots; and in the darkness Gallagher did not notice this fact as he pulled the boots on, though he thought they felt heavy. He then groped his way to the head of the stairs, the skates giving no trouble on the carpet. Then he started to go down stairs. He got there. He got there dreadfully sudden. He was terribly annoyed as he picked himself up, and said very wicked things as he started for the dining room. Breakfast was laid, but only a dim light was burning. Immediately he set foot on the polished floor Mr. G's feet flew up into the air, and his head came down with terrible force. The wild yells he gave brought his wife and mother-in-law from the kitchen. He arose to his feet, but they immediately started off in opposite directions; and, after wrenching his spine and knee-joints terribly in trying to control them, they got away, and he jarred his spinal column the whole length as he went down. 'Good Heaven, this floor is oiled!' he roared, as he began to make efforts to rise. 'Have you apoplexy or have you been drinking?' asked his wife, as she strove to assist him to get up. 'You hold your tongue, you idiot!' he replied; and then she let go of him suddenly, and down he went bruising himself in six places. Most unparliamentary were the words called into requisition to relieve his mind that time, and he told his mother-in-law, who had fallen laughing into a chair, that he hoped she would meet cows every time she went out. Then he essayed to rise once more, and got upon his feet. The skates began to slip, and he struggled like a hero, and clutched the air wildly to keep his balance. No use! As he fell forward he grabbed wildly at the table cloth, and, as a result, dragged the entire breakfast upon him; the pepper got into his eyes, the mustard into his mouth and the eggs all over him. His wife and her mother hauled him from the debris and started to put him to bed, when they discovered the rollers. Mr. G. was terribly used up, but he proceeded at once to find his son; and the lad's sighing over his great grief was heard a mile away.

BLOWING THAT MADE THE EASTERN AGRICULTURISTS GAPE.

'Yes, sir,' resumed the Dakota man as the crowd of agriculturists drew back from the bar and seated themselves around a little table; 'yes, sir, we do things on rather a sizable scale. I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the Spring and plough a straight furrow until Fall. Then he turned and harvested back.'

'Carry his grub with him?' asked a Brooklyn farmer, who raises cabbage on the outskirts.

'No, sir. They follow him up with a steam hotel and have relays of men to change plows for him. We have some big farms up there, gentlemen. A friend of mine owned one on which he had to give a mortgage, and I pledge you my word, the mortgage was due on one end before they could get it recorded at the other. You see it was laid off in counties.'

There was a murmur of astonishment, and the Dakota man continued:

'I got a letter from a man who lives in my orchard, just before I left home, and it had been three weeks getting to the dwelling house, though it traveled day and night.'

'Distances are pretty wide up there, ain't they?' inquired a New Utrecht agriculturist.

'Reasonably, reasonably,' replied the Dakota man. 'And the worst of it is, it breaks up families so. Two years ago I saw a whole family prostrated with grief. Women yelling, children howling and dogs barking. One of my men had his camp truck packed on seven four-mule teams and he was around bidding everybody good-bye.'

'Where was he going?' asked a Gravesend man.

'He was going half way across the farm to feed the pigs,' replied the Dakota man.

'Did he ever get back to his family?'

'It isn't time for him yet,' returned the Dakota gentleman. 'Up there we send young married couples to milk the cows, and their children bring home the milk.'

'I understand you have fine mines up that way,' ventured a Jamaica turnip planter.

'Yes, but we only use the quartz for fencing,' said the Dakota man, testing the blade of his knife with his thumb, preparatory to whetting it on his boot. 'It wouldn't pay to crush it, because we can make more money on wheat. I put in eighty-nine hundred townships of wheat last Spring.'

'How many acres would that be?'

'We don't count by acres. We count by townships and counties. My yield was sixty-eight millions of dollars on wheat alone, and I'm thinking of breaking up from eighty to a hundred more counties next season.'

'How do you get the help for such extensive operations?' asked the New Utrecht man.

'Oh, labor is cheap,' replied the Dakota man. 'You can get all you want for from twenty-nine to forty-seven dollars a day. In fact, I never paid over thirty-eight.'

'Is land cheap?'

'No, land is high. Not that it costs anything, for it don't; but under the laws of the territory you have got to take so much or none. I was in luck. Had a friend at Yanktown who got a bill through the Legislature allowing me to take four hundred and twenty thousand square miles, which is the smallest farm there, though it is—'

'Look here,' said the bar-keeper, as the Eastern husbandmen strolled out in a bunch to consider the last statement, 'is all this thing you've been telling true?'

'Certainly,' responded the Western man; 'at least it is a modification of what I saw in a Dakota paper that was wrapped around a pair of shoes last night. I didn't dare put it as strong as the paper did, for no one would believe it. You can slate that last round of drinks and I'll pay in the morning. I live right here on Myrtle avenue.'

WHAT SHE SAW IN CHURCH.

He stayed at home and she went to church; after dinner he asked her:

'What was the text, May?'

'Oh, something somewhere in Generation; I have forgotten the chapter and verse. Miss Hight sat right before me with a Mother Hubbard bonnet on. How could I hear anything when I could not even see the minister? I wouldn't have worn such a looking thing to church if I had to have gone bare headed.'

'How did you like the new minister?'

'Oh, he's splendid! and Kate Dartin was there in a Spanish lace cap that never cost less than $50; and they can't pay their butcher's bills, and I'd wear cotton lace or go without any first.'

'Did he say anything about the new mission fund?'

'No, and the James girls were rigged out in their yellow silks made over; you would have died laughing to have seen them. Such taste as those girls have; and the minister gave out that the Dorcas Society will meet at James' residence, the old poky place.'

'It seems you didn't hear much of the sermon.'

'Well, I'm sure it's better to go to church if you don't hear the sermon, than to stay at home and read the papers, and oh, Harry! the new minister has a lovely voice; it nearly puts me to sleep, and did I tell you that the Rich's are home from Europe, and Mrs. Rich had a real camel's hair shawl on, and it didn't look like anything on her.'

A long silence, during which Harry thought of several things, and his wife was busy contemplating the sky, when she suddenly exclaimed:

'There! I knew I'd forgot to tell you something. Would you believe it Harry, the fringe on Mrs. Jones' parasol was an inch deeper than mine and twice as heavy! Oh, dear! what a world of trouble this is!'

POSITIVELY CURED
BY
Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First.

Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.

Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.

Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.

Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.

Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.

Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

POETRY.

KATIE'S ANSWER.

Och, Katie's a rogue, it is thrue,
But her eyes, like the sky, are so blue,
An' her dimples so swate,
An' her ankles so nate,
She dazed, an' she bothered me, too—

'Till one mornin' we wint for a ride,
Whin, demure as a bride, by my side,
The darlint, she sat,
Wid the wickedest hat
'Neath purty girl's chin iver tied.

An' my heart, arrah, thin how it bate!
For my Kate looked so temptin' an' swate,
Wid cheeks like the roses
An' all the red posies
That grow in her garden so nate.

But I sat just as mute as the dead,
'Till she said, with a toss of her head,
"If I'd known that to-day
Ye'd have nothin' to say,
I'd have gone wid my cousin, instead."

Thin I felt myself grow very bold;
For I knew she'd not scold if I towld
Uv the love in my heart,
That would never depart,
Though I lived to be wrinkled and ould.

An' I said: "If I dared to do so,
I'd lit go uv the baste, an' I'd throw
Both arms 'round your waist,
An' be stalin' a taste
Uv them lips that are coaxin' me so."

Thin she blushed a more illegant red,
As she said, without raisin' her head,
An' her eyes lookin' down
'Neath her lashes so brown,
"Would you like me to drive, Misther Ted?"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DOCTOR'S CHOICE.

Mable Derring stood leaning over the low white gate.

Golden butter-cups, snowy-hearted daisies, and blue-eyed violets were smiling softly in the twilight.

Mabel gazed sorrowfully into the purple gloaming with an aching pain in her heart. To-day her father had been laid in the grassy church-yard, leaving her friendless and homeless. Her father's long illness had completely exhausted their resources, and at his death Mable's slender purse was only sufficient to pay the last sad rites of the dead.

The dear little cottage—the scene of so many pleasures and pains—would pass into the hands of strangers, and on the morrow she was going to the great house on the hill to apply for a situation as governess.

The next day, with beating heart, Mable ascended the steps and rang the bell at Glenwood. A pompous servant ushered her into a pretty little morning-room where a gentleman and two ladies were sitting.

Dr. Stanley, the owner of Glenwood, was a bachelor of about thirty, tall, grave and dignified. His aunt, a widow lady had charge of his house. She was a hard, ambitious woman, whose principal object in life was to establish her daughter as the wife of Dr. Stanley and mistress of beautiful Glenwood.

The doctor rose as Mable entered, and walked to the opposite side of the room, so as not to embarrass her with his presence. Mrs. Stanley put up her eye-glasses and surveyed the orphan coldly, while Grace, a rather pretty but haughty looking girl, stared at her superciliously.

"You are too young," objected Mrs. Stanley.

Mable's lip quivered.

"But I am well educated and will try, oh, so hard, to do as you wish," she said, entreatingly.

Dr. Stanley had been watching the sad-faced, black-robed figure, over his paper, with pity and interest. He called to his aunt.

She rose and went to where he was standing. After a long conversation with him she came back with a look of annoyance on her face.

"I am very particular about a governess for my children," she said. "I wish one that understands French and German perfectly."

Mable's face brightened a trifle.

"I understand those branches very well. My father,"—in the faltering tones we always speak of those we have recently lost—"was a very fine scholar, and he taught me himself."

She took the book and correctly read and translated the passages Mrs. Stanley pointed out.

That lady frowned.

"Music?" she said briefly.

Mable seated herself at the piano and played with a skill and brilliancy that only perfect understanding and thorough practice can acquire.

Mrs. Stanley was in despair; she had nothing else to object to. But she had no inclination to have a pretty, gentle young girl in the house with Dr. Stanley until Grace became his wife—if she could only bring about that occurrence—for she was fully aware of Grace's shortcomings. Dr. Stanley had requested her, however, to employ Mable, and she always made it a point to yield to his wishes.

"Well," she said, slowly ignoring Grace's discontented, frowning face, "I suppose I will take you on a month's trial; if you prove insufficient at the end of that time, which I have no doubt you will, I can make other arrangements."

Poor Mable! The words and tones were very crushing to her, but she had no other resource, so she had to school heart to endure.

"I will send a servant for your boxes," said Mrs. Stanley, "and you will begin your duties at once. I don't wish the children to be out of school any longer."

Mable followed a servant up the stairs to a retired, plainly furnished, but very pleasant room. She threw herself into a low chair by the open window and buried her face in her hands, while burning tears streamed through her fingers.

"Oh! papa," she moaned, "why did you not take me with you? No one cares for me now. If I could only die and be at rest."

* * * * * *

Several months had passed since Mable came to Glenwood as governess. At the end of the first month Mrs. Stanley tried in vain to find some excuse to send her away, but Mable had proved faithful and efficient in every particular, so much against her will she had permitted her to remain.

At first Mable found her duties perfect torture. The children were rude and unmanageable, and completely exhausted her strength and patience. At night she would throw herself across the bed, quivering with pain, and press her hands tightly to her throbbing temples. She was becoming more accustomed to it now, but it was telling visibly on her delicate constitution. Her face was thin and pale, and her large dark eyes had grown sad and mournful with their weight of unshed tears.

Mrs. Stanley was harsh and exacting, and Grace rendered her life unpleasant by a thousand little words and innuendoes that deeply wounded her sensitive nature.

"Really, mamma," she would say, "she quite startles one at times, looking so ghostly with her white face and black dress."

Dr. Stanley was the only friend that brightened Mable's cheerless life. He always had a pleasant word and smile for her, and rendered her numberless little acts of kindness that were very grateful to her weary heart. Stern and grave to others, he was tender and gentle to her, and unconsciously to herself, her heart had gone out to the tall strong man, for whom another was so intensely striving.

It was a sultry summer evening. Mable was seated in the rose arbor, reading, when Mrs. Stanley and her two daughter, Grace and May, approached.

"I think you are just frightful in that horrid black, Miss Derring," said May, with the frankness of twelve years. "I wonder if I can't make you look better?"

She had some white and pink roses in her hand, and going to Mable's side she twined them in her dark waving hair, and fastened a spray at the slender throat.

"Oh, Miss Derring," she said, clasping her hands, "you look just lovely."

Grace looked scornfully.

"What a paragon of beauty Miss Derring is. What a pity some fairy prince don't come along. I dare say he would——"

Mrs. Stanley touched her warningly on the arm, and she checked herself just as the doctor came up.

A soft rose color suffused Mable's face. Her eyes deepened and darkened, and she looked as May expressed it, "just lovely." Dr. Stanley's eyes lingered on her face with an admiration that did not escape Grace.

"It is all May's fault," she thought with a blind rage; "its the flowers that make her look so pretty."

"What was it you were saying about a fairy prince?" asked the doctor.

"Oh, nothing," replied Grace, fanning herself violently. "How very warm it is. Don't you think so, Cousin Guy?"

"Extremely," said the doctor, seating himself by Mable and fanning her as well as himself with his broad straw hat.

Grace controlled herself with difficulty.

May, who had rushed off as the doctor approached, now appeared with her apron full of floral treasures.

"Ain't they beauties, Cousin Guy?" she said, emptying them into his lap.

The doctor selected some fragrant tube-roses, waxen lilies, and starry jasmine, and placed them in Mable's hand.

Mrs. Stanley frowned.

"I want to see you on a business matter, Guy; will you come now?"

The doctor rode reluctantly and followed her away.

As soon as they disappeared, Grace, darted forward and snatching the flowers from Mable's hand, threw them to the ground and crushed them under her foot.

"Mable Derring," she said, in a loud angry tone, "you artful designing girl! How dare you?"

Intense surprise kept Mable silent for a moment. She then rose to her feet, drew her tall form to its utmost height, and lifted her small head proudly. A crimson spot burned in each cheek, and Grace qualied before her flashing eyes.

"Miss Stanley," she began, when a heavy hand was laid on Grace's shoulder, and Dr. Stanley, white with anger, asked:

"Grace, how dare you address such words to Miss Derring?"

Grace uttered a frightened cry, and breaking from the doctor's hand fled to the house.

A sudden reaction took place with Mable. She turned deadly pale, and caught against the arbor for support.

Dr. Stanley came forward quickly, and took her hands in a warm strong clasp.

"What is the meaning of this, Miss Derring?"

A bright scarlet drifted across Mable's white face.

"It means, Dr. Stanley," she said, controlling her voice with effort, "that I leave here immediately."

"And where will you go, Mable?"

Mable's lips quivered, and the tears swelled through her dark lashes as she thought of her friendless condition.

"I do not know, Dr. Stanley," she said sadly. "God will take care of me."

The doctor was deeply touched.

"My little Maud," he whispered tenderly, "Come to me."

Mable uttered a startled cry.

"Dr. Stanley, you do not mean it—"

"Indeed I do," said the doctor earnestly. "Why Mable, my darling, I have loved you since I first saw your sweet, sad face. I have not told you of it before. I feared you might consider me presumptuous to ask for your love when you had known me so short a time. I cannot see you insulted longer. Can you love me, Mable? Will you give me the right to protect you?"

Mable raised her tearful eyes to his face. She saw the tenderest love shining in his splendid eyes, and with a sigh of rest and contempt, she laid her head on his bosom.

When they returned to the house Mrs. Stanley was standing on the gallery with a white face and angry eyes.

Dr. Stanley led Mable up the steps.

"Aunt Clara," he said, "let me present to you my betrothed wife."

Mr. Stanley laughed shrilly.

"Have you permitted that artful girl to entrap you in this manner, Guy? I thought you had more sense."

Dr. Stanley crimsoned.

"You forget yourself, Aunt Clara," he said, sternly. "Mayble is my betrothed wife and must be treated as such."

He conducted Mable into the house, and came back to where his aunt was standing.

"Aunt Clara," he said, "it pains me to say this to you, but your own actions have rendered it necessary. It is impossible for you to remain here longer. You and Grace have made Mable's life perfect torture ever since she has been here. Now, as I have the right to protect her, I cannot permit it to continue."

Several days later Mrs. Stanley and her family drove away. There were tears of rage in her eyes and Grace's as they took a last look at beautiful Glenwood, which they had striven so hard for and failed to obtain.

* * * * *

On a soft golden October day, Mable, in trailing robes of silver gray, entered the old moss grown church, and in the solemn stillness was pronounced the wife of Guy Stanley.

In his devoted love the troubles and trials that once darkened her young life were only remembered as far-away dreams of the past.—Elmer Percy.

THE MINISTER'S HORSES.

When I had arrived within a few hours' ride of the springs I stopped to dine at a house of private entertainment. A large four-horse stage loaded with passengers bound for the springs soon drove up and stopped at the same house, which was the regular place for dining for the passengers. After dinner I rode on to the springs, keeping along most of the way in company with the stage.

My Jennie attracted very marked attention from the driver and passengers. The driver was especially profuse in his expressions of admiration. As I rode up to the hotel the listless, lounging visitors, who were so deep in the brush that they had very little to attract or interest them, regarded her gait and movements with general admiration and delight. When I dismounted a black boy was soon in my saddle, and my Jennie moved off to the stable with her usual fleetness and grace.

I entered the hotel and registered my name without any prefix or suffix to indicate my employment or profession. The weather was very hot and the roads very dusty, and after the fashion of the country I was at once furnished with water and wash. As I stood wiping myself the stage-driver rushed into the room and up to me in great excitement and said, "Mr. Pierson, will you allow your horse to run? The money is up, and we'll have a race if you'll only allow him to run," at the same time holding up and shaking in my face a mass of bills that were drawn through his fingers after the fashion of gamblers in those parts.

I was startled to have my name pronounced in a strange place and by a stranger, but in a moment bethought me that he had learned it by looking on the hotel register. I was more startled by the strangeness of the proposition. As the servant stood with my saddle-bags on his arm waiting to show me to my room, I answered, perhaps a little too abruptly, "No, Sir," and followed him to my room to prepare for supper.

When the supper-bell rang, and I stepped out of my room on the piazza, a portly man of gentlemanly bearing, who had evidently taken his position there to wait for me, approached me pleasantly and said: "I hope, sir, you will reconsider your decision and allow your mare to run. As soon as you rode up I offered to bet $250 that she would outrun anything here, and am an old Virginian, and judge of horses, and if you will let her run I am sure to win."

By this time I had entirely recovered my self-possession, and, bowing politely, I looked directly into his eyes and said: "Do you think, sir, it will do for a Presbyterian clergyman to commence horse-racing so soon after reaching the springs?" He was as much startled as I had been—in fact, so startled that he could not say a word, and I left him without any reply and went in to supper.

When I returned from the dining-room, I found him at the door, and he approached me in the most respectful and subdued manner and said: "Allow me to speak to you again, sir. I wish to apologize, sir; I beg your pardon, sir; I assure you sir, that nothing would induce me knowingly to insult a clergy*man*."

I responded very pleasantly: "I am certain, sir, that no insult was intended, and therefore there is no pardon to be granted."

He thanked me very warmly for my kind construction of his motive and left me with a lighter step and brighter face. His companions were all greatly pleased with my treatment of the matter, and, as I have elsewhere said, there was a general turn-out of all the gamblers—of whom he was one of the most prominent—to hear me preach in the ball-room next Sabbath. But I need not say to any one at all familiar with life in the Southwest that he had to "stand treat" all around among his companions for being thus, in the vernacular of the country, "picked up" by a clergyman.

In passing through another part of this country the following winter I rode up to a blacksmith's shop to get a shoe tightened. As soon as the blacksmith came out he said: "Wasn't you at the springs last summer with this mare?"

I replied in the affirmative, and, on looking at him, recognized the man that kept a little shop there and had shod her in the summer.

"Well," said he leaning upon her neck; patting her affectionately, and looking into vacancy with a pleased expression, as living over some pleasant scene in the past, "they got her out, Preacher, and run her, anyway." And then, as if to make the matter all right with me, he looked up into my face and said, with the most satisfied smile and emphatic nod: "And, Preacher, she beat, she did. He won his money."—In the brush, Rev. W. H. Pierson.

THE RACE ALWAYS TO THE SWIFT.

A CHICAGO LOVE STORY.

Night in a great city. The wind surged and moaned with a mournful cadence through the leafless trees that stood like gaunt spectres of the night, ever and anon bending low their withered trunks and great black branches as if in mute appeal to the storm king to not prostrate them forever with his cold merciless breath.

Adown a street where gleamed the bright lights of wine bibbers' haunts, and the paleful glare of the oyster saloons fell upon the sidewalk, a young man strode with quick, nervous step and a wistful, haunting look in his eye. At a corner where the crowd of eager, jostling pedestrians was thickest he paused and looked anxiously around. The soft, low tingle of a bell was heard. Clasping a bruised nickle in his left hand, the young man stepped briskly forward, saying softly to himself: "My heart has not deceived me; I am in time."

Adelbert Quirk had caught the semi-weekly car on Van Buren street.

* * * * *

In the elegant furnished parlor of a handsome residence, a tall and radiantly beautiful girl sat silently in front of a grate fire, the flames from which leaped lightly up the chimney and cast a ruddy glow on all that came within the range of their lambent beams. Cleopatra McGuire was the only daughter of a father who fairly idolized the proud beauty who presided over his household, with such stately grace—his wife having fallen into a wash tub and been drowned within two years of their marriage.

"Which shall I choose?" said the girl in soft, mellow tones. "Shall it be the strong-limbed Rupert with his proud Saxon pedigree, or Adelbert who would deck his bride in jewels? My heart tells me that with Rupert ever by my side life would always seem a pleasant dream. I love him with a wild, passionate devotion that time can never change. As his wife I should shine in society. Oh, me! Which shall it be?"

Suddenly rising from the fauteuil, she said:

"I have decided. To him who gets here first this evening will I plight my troth. Fate shall decide."

* * * * *

The Van Buren street car was slowly wending its way westward. On the sidewalk came with firm tread a sunny-haired young man—Rupert Gilhooley. Suddenly there fell upon the air the clangor of a bell. Rupert broke into a run. The bridge began to open. He succeeded in getting across. The car did not. In the rear left-hand corner of that sat Adelbert Quirk.

Fate had begun work.

* * * * *

After crossing the bridge Rupert did not slacken his pace, and was soon well toward the end of his journey, when the pitiful crying of a child attracted his attention. He stopped, and finding that the little waif had lost its way, waited patiently until a policeman came up, into whose care he confided the wanderer.

By this time the bridge was closed, and the car was thundering on its way, the horses lashed into their best speed by the driver, who was anxious to make up lost time. Just as Rupert gave the child to the policeman the car caught up with him. He had but half a mile to go. Walking leisurely along, he reached the residence of Stuyvesant McGuire, and as the door opened Cleopatra fell into his arms with a glad cry.

"Fate has brought you to me, my darling," she said. "You must never leave me again."

An hour later the door bell rang, and Adelbert Quirk was informed by the hired girl that Miss McGuire was not at home.

Rupert had outwalked the horse car.—Tribune.

ABOUT LOVE.

Mr. Factandfancy has noticed:

That the boy who is most afraid of the girls is the first to be coralled into mat*rimony.*

That the little boy prefers boys to girls.

That the little girls love the girls best.

That they don't get over their preference as soon as the boys do—some of them never.

That women love the men because they love everything they have to take care of.

That men love women because they can't help it.

That the wife loves her husband so well that she has no thoughts for other men.

That the husband so loves his wife that he loves all women for her sake.

That the married man is apt to think himself all killing among the fair sex, simply because he has found one woman fool enough to marry him.

That homely husbands are the best. They never forget the compliment paid them by their wives in accepting them.

That homely wives are the truest. They know how to make the most of what they have.

That the man who marries late in life does well.

That the man who marries young does better.

That the man who never marries is to be pitied.

That the man who marries does well.

That the woman who does not marry does better nine times out of ten.

A housewife in the upper part of the city who had never been able to positively learn the hour of her husband's arrival home on the lodge nights set a trap for him on Friday night. Luckily lighting a match in the hall enabled him to see and avoid a large collection of tinware piled halfway up the stairs, and he retired without disturbing his spouse. He was rudely awakened a few minutes after by a tremendous clatter and shrieks for help, and rushing out of his room found his wife under a pile of dish-pans and wash-basins at the foot of the stairs. She wanted to get a drink of water, and, forgetfully descending the stairs, was caught in her own trap.

A JUST VERDICT.

After an eleven week's trial of President Garfield's assassin, an intelligent jury have rendered a verdict of "guilty," with but a few moment's deliberation, after hearing the charge of Judge Cox. This will meet with popular approval and commendation by all classes of people of the Nation. The plea adopted by the prisoner, that of insanity, failed to prejudice the jury in his favor. He has had a fair and impartial trial, which will go upon the records as having no precedent. No criminal has ever had the leniency shown him by the Court during trial than this base assassin. Continually interrupting and vilifying the judges and lawyers, he has tried their temper and patience during the lengthy trial. The real character of the assassin has been shown by the evidence adduced. It revealed him as a man of inordinate vanity, unbridled passion and ambitious of notoriety. Claiming that he was but an agent of the Deity in the accomplishment of his diabolical act, his own testimony and assumption of his being insane at the time of the shooting, was alone sufficient to convict him of the crime. The verdict of the jury is no more than could be expected of an intelligent body of men serving in such a capacity.

BOSSISM.

The term we thus use has in these days of innovation acquired a disreputable political meaning, and both the Democratic and Republican parties have been sadly injured and disgraced by its presence as a partisan appendage.

Bossism, or correctly speaking, the despotic action of assumed leaders, exerted for vindictive or corrupt ambition and selfish personal gain, is at war with every principle of Democracy, because it seeks to over-ride the will and imperil the welfare of the people, to respect and promote which is the very corner stone of the Democratic party.

Democrats want nothing in the shape of bosses, and whenever such creatures presume to raise their dictatorial heads within the party, it is the duty of the rank and file to strike them down, and, if necessary, inflict political decapitation.

Leaders are essential to every organization, but, when so commissioned, fidelity to reposed confidence demands that the unity and well being of those they lead shall be sacredly observed, and to the utmost of ability advanced. That applies to all political chiefs, be they national or local.

Jefferson, Madison, Crawford, Jackson, Polk, Cass, Wright, Pierce and many others were trusted leaders of the Democracy, as Hancock, Bayard, Hendricks and Pendleton are among those of the present time, yet not one of them ever tolerated for a moment the thought or wish of being a mercenary boss.

An honest political leader is worthy of honorable mention.

Meanness of the lowest grade attaches to the name of a political boss.

Bossism is a modern partisan infliction, and so far as the Democratic party is concerned, we hope and believe it will be crushed out of existence.

Morality, ability and integrity as passports for every official position, and unreserved acquiescence in the declared judgment of the majority, is to-day as ever before the creed of Democracy and test of party membership.

Place loyal leaders in command.

Send all time-serving, hate-breeding, self-rewarding bosses to the rear or beyond the party lines.

The triumph of Democracy and consequent good of the People is our aim, principles, not men, our battle cry.

DEATH OF CLARKSON N. POTTER.

Hon. Clarkson N. Potter died at 9 A. M., on Monday last, at his residence in New York city. He was born in Schenectady in 1825, and was a son of Bishop Alonzo Potter, of Pennsylvania. He graduated from Union College, became a lawyer and has been a successful practitioner. He was a Free Soil Democrat in 1848; in 1868 was elected to Congress as a Democrat, and was re-elected in 1870 and 1872. He declined a renomination in 1874, and was elected again in 1876. In 1879 he ran as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, but was defeated by Mr. Hoskins by 230 votes. He was mentioned as a candidate for the Presidential nomination at the Cincinnati Convention of 1880. In June last he was the Democratic choice to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate, made vacant by the resignation of Senator Conkling.

THE AREA OF NEW JERSEY.

The geographer of the tenth census has furnished some information in regard to the approximate areas of the United States, the several States, and their counties. The gross area of the United States amounts to 3,025,000 square miles, of which New Jersey contains 7,458. "New Jersey," says the report, "includes all bays and inlets of the Atlantic between Cape May and Sandy Hook; also Newark bay and half of the boundary of portions of the Delaware and Hudson rivers, half of New York bay, and half of Kill von Kull and Staten Island Sound. No portion of Delaware bay, Raritan, or Sandy Hook bay is included." The areas of the different counties in this State are given in round numbers as follows: Hudson, square miles, 40; Union, 110; Essex, 125; Passaic, 190; Bergen, 220; Mercer, 220; Cape May, 250; Gloucester, 250; Camden, 270; Middlesex, 300; Somerset, 300; Salem, 340; Warren, 340; Hunterdon, 420; Monmouth, 350; Morris, 480; Cumberland, 500; Sussex, 500; Atlantic, 620; Ocean, 670; Burlington, 860. Total, 7,458.

It is an old axiom that a skunk should be fought with its own weapons. When President Hobart, of the Senate, violated all the rules of fairness and decency by appointing an entire Printing Committee of Republicans, it became the political duty of Speaker Dunn to use the same kind of artillery. His failure to do so will, in effect, give the Republican newspapers of the State a share of patronage they are not entitled to. If the Speaker had complications which made it a matter of honor to give a Republican from Elizabeth a position on the Committee, such complications have resulted to the detriment of the Democratic press of the State, and should never have existed. If Democratic legislators will not advance the interests of their own party press, it is time that that press should fully comprehend the situation.—Elizabeth Herald.

GUILTY.

Judge Porter finished his great speech for the prosecution in the Guiteau case on Wednesday, and Judge Cox delivered his charge to the jury. It was brief and against the prisoner. During Mr. Porter's speech Guiteau excelled all his previous efforts in abusing Counsel. During the delivery of the Judge's charge, which was completed at 4:40 P. M., there was perfect silence in the crowded court room, even the assassin keeping absolutely quiet with one or two exceptions. The jury immediately retired and in ten minutes had agreed upon their verdict. They re-entered the court room at 5:35, and filed slowly into their seats. Foreman Hamlin, in answer to the question as to whether the jury had decided on their verdict answered in clear tones, "we have." "Guilty as indicted." Instantly there was a storm of cheers which the Court was barely able to suppress. The prisoner yelled out, as the last name of the jurors were called—"My blood will be upon the head of that jury, and don't you forget it." Judge Cox then thanked the jury in the following terms:

"Gentlemen of the jury, I cannot express too many thanks for the manner in which you have discharged your duty. You have richly merited the thanks of your countrymen, and I feel assured you will take with you to your homes the approval of your consciences. With thanks, gentlemen of the jury, I dismiss you."

The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Scoville, announced that he should make a motion for a new trial, which he expects to file on Saturday.

Under the law governing executions Guiteau's lease of life will probably be extended until June or July. He will be arraigned for sentence on Saturday. The execution could take place within thirty days if his counsel choose to drop the case without appeal, but they will appeal and the case will go to the General Term, which begins in April. The execution cannot then take place until thirty days after the close of that term. The execution must take place within the jail or in an inclosed yard adjoining it.

There is dread commotion in Paris, France. It is not the clash of arms and lurid glare of revolution, but the bursting of financial bubbles raised into air by reckless stock gambling. Panics prove the truth of that, and the people may some day learn and wisely heed the lesson.

NEARLY A QUARTER OF A MILLION STOLEN.

The accountant examining Newark's finances has discovered another important forgery by ex-Auditor Palmer, amounting to $4,232.06, making his peculations amount to $128,000, and those of Hall to $20,000.

The City Counsel has began suit against ex-Gov. Ward, ex-Congressman G. S. Halsey and Benjamin Atha, who were Palmer's first bondsmen, the law in New Jersey holding bondsmen responsible for the term of five years, even after other bondsmen have been accepted as their successors. The bondsmen of the late Treasurer Winans are threatening to begin suit against the ex-Mayor and Finance Committee for neglect of duty. Experts say that not a day passes but what additional peculations were discovered.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

TRENTON, Jan. 24th, 1882.

Legislative work proceeds very slowly; both Houses adjourned last Wednesday and met again last evening. Only such bills as have been reported by the Committees can be printed. There were 28 bills introduced in the House last evening, and 7 in the Senate; nearly all that have been introduced this week are local in their character, and only a few of interest to your readers. Senate bill, No. 4, provides that all boarding houses, hotels, school houses, or factories, being three or more stories in height, shall be provided with three iron ladders at each window, from the ground up, on the outside, under penalty of $300. Of course this bill is general and would involve an immense outlay of money; the bill was so printed originally. It is said it was a mistake of the printer. This is a very common way for people to shift responsibility of a foolish clause in a bill; at all events, it is now amended so as to read, that all such buildings shall have at least two ladders with connecting doors or windows at each story. It is said that the danger and loss of life along the sea coast at boarding houses, prevent many persons from taking board. It is laid over until Monday night; it is said to be a very popular bill and may pass. A bill was introduced in the House, providing for the erection of a whipping post for wife beaters; another, that habitual drunkenness shall be good and sufficient cause for decree for divorce by either party; also one that physician's prescriptions shall be written in plain English; also one that cities shall regulate and license the putting up of bill poster bulletins. No Jersey City bridge bill has yet been presented. Several bills providing that taxes paid by rail roads to the State, shall be returned to the town or municipality where property is located. This will deprive the State of that much revenue, and will add to the already impending necessity of State tax, a thing we have been clear of for several years past.

Judge Knapp was confirmed this week in Senate; no other nominations have been sent in by the Governor. The Attorney General has responded by letter to the Senate as to his receipts, which are about $18,000 for five years, none too much for the arduous duties performed by him.

In the Senate on Wednesday, a resolution was presented calling upon the State representatives in Congress to favor such a revision of the tariff as will promote the industrial and other interest of the State. The bill to extend the time for the completion of the Hudson River Tunnel Railroad was withdrawn, a new bill having been introduced in the House for the same purpose.

In the House the Committee on Commerce reported a bill regulating pilots and pilotage, and a supplement to the Quarantine law. A bill was introduced to prevent the laying of oil pipes within 150 feet of any railroad and to prevent the contamination of water in cities by oil pipes.

But few bills have been passed as yet, and the House seems to progress with work very slowly. Next week the members may settle down to business in earnest. Both branches adjourned to Monday evening next.

STATE ITEMS.

The Raritan river is frozen over again.

There are 87 postmasters in New Jersey, and 243 federal appointees are credited to the State.

William Quick's dwelling and hardware store at Newton, were burned Saturday. Loss about $5,000.

Michael Lennon, a bridgeman at the Central Railroad Ferry, Jersey City, fell dead Saturday morning. It is supposed from heart disease.

A son of ex-Sheriff John B. Hankinson of Bordentown, accidentally shot an old family servant at his father's house near Mount Holly last week.

James B. Graves was convicted of murder in Newark, on Monday last, although he claimed to have acted under an irresistible impulse, and testified in his own behalf.

The Ocean tide at Long Branch was lower Sunday afternoon than it has been for several years. The bar opposite the Hotel Brighton was uncovered beyond half the length of the iron pier.

The family of Peter Matson, living near Burlington, eat watermelons for dinner every day, and expect to do so all winter. Matson laid away two hundred and fifty melons during the season, preserving them by a process which he professes to have invented. He varnished each melon all over and then sealed up the stem. Not long ago he invited a number of his friends to dinner and brought out three large watermelons for dessert.

A local train on the Pennsylvania Railroad going to Perth Amboy jumped the track on the bridge over the Hackensack River on Wednesday last, but remained on the bridge structure. The cars fell over to one side, causing great consternation among the passengers. Several ladies fainted, but no one was hurt. A wrecking train cleared the track, and the passengers were forwarded to their destinations. Had the train fell to the other side it would have gone into the river.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society was held at the State House, Trenton, Thursday of last week, President Amos Clark, Jr., presiding. In his address Mr. Clark reviewed the history of the society, and urged measures to reclaim the now useless salt meadows in Union, Essex and Hudson counties. He claimed that the street garbage of New York could be utilized with value. The old board of directors were re-elected, except J. V. D. Hoagland, deceased, and E. P. Ward, declined, in whose places Dr. Wm. A. Conover, of Newark, and Mason C. Weld, of Englewood, were chosen. Treasurer Manning's report showed $21,749.96 receipts and $28,710.47 expenses, including $5,000 paid for additional land. The Society is free from debt, except $2,000 due on land, and owns large property. The receipts from the last annual fair were $21,465.12. Congressman Phineas Jones, E. G. Brown and B. Haines were appointed a Committee on State Premiums.

George Payne, well known to visitors of museums throughout the United States as "the man without arms," died on Thursday of last week at his home in Williamsburg, New York, aged 27 years. From his birth he was compelled to make his legs and toes do service for arms and hands, and he fed himself like other people. He also shaved himself and was a good penman. He leaves a wife and child.

The wreck list of 1881 was a very bad one—indeed, the most disastrous on record for this or any other country. During 1881, 2,009 vessels were wrecked throughout the world, and property of the value of $1,400,000,000 was destroyed. Of the latter, about $900,000,000 was owned in Great Britain and its colonies, and about $275,000,000 in the United States. There is even a darker side to the picture when we come to look at the number of lives sacrificed in connection with these wrecks. The total is not unprecedented, but it exceeds 4,000. The total in 1879 was 5,000; but, with that exception, the past year is the highest recorded.

The Irish-American National Executive Committee in Chicago has issued an address naming the 22d of February as a day to be appropriately celebrated by the Irish in the United States, it being not only Washington's birthday but the anniversary of the demand made by Grattan for the independence of the Irish Parliament. The committee suggests that "in lieu of unsightly processions, banquets, &c., on next St. Patrick's Day, the Irish in America assess themselves for what would be the cost of regalia, flags, music and caterers, and transmit the amount at once to redeem the pledge of $250,000 made at the Chicago Convention.

The Controller recommends a return to the system of a State tax, as he thinks the annual expenditures of the State are very small when its wealth and population and resources are considered. He thinks the Legislature ought to be in position to make such liberal and proper appropriations as might from year to year successfully appeal to the judgment of its members.

The expenses of the State are: Debt, $90,000; charitable and reformatory, $250,074 61; courts, &c., $289,000; State Government, $154,891 28; scientific, sanitary, &c., $52,514; military, $80,000; educational, $38,000; publication, $122,200; miscellaneous, $53,319 75, making a total needed for the next year of $1,130,-000. Then, $60,000 ought to be added to this for contingencies. The estimated receipts are $925,430 64 from regular sources—corporation, interests, dividends, State prison, &c. This would leave a deficiency in receipts of $264,-569 36. The only alternative from a State tax to make up this deficiency is a sale of the State securities. The sale of half the securities held by the State would produce the amount required. A State tax of three-fourths of a mill would realize $335,588 41, which would be amply sufficient to meet all contingencies and not bear heavily on the tax-paying community.

State Industrial School for Girls.

The following is a synopsis of the report of this institution for the past year, as forwarded to the Governor:

At the beginning of the fiscal year there were forty-one girls in the school. Nine have been committed since, making the number, under discipline, fifty. Of these, fifteen have been indentured, five discharged—being of age—and five have been released and sent to their relatives, leaving twenty-five in the school at this date. It speaks well for the moral condition of the girls of New Jersey, if necessity has only required that nine be sent to this reformatory institution for training. But we fear that a want of interest on the part of our citizens permits many to grow up in vice, until they become of an age that would exclude them from the school, and lives that might become valuable are sacrificed in dens of immorality. We have endeavored to make our school such a home, that any parent having a wayward daughter, may, with confidence, have her committed for reformation, with the assurance that her surroundings will be of an elevating character.

On the twentieth of December last, a fire was discovered in the basement, which is used for laundry purposes. It was occasioned, as near as can be ascertained, by the falling of a stove pipe whilst the family were at dinner, and had it not been for its timely discovery and the prompt and courageous efforts of the officers and the girls, serious results would have followed. The damage to the building and clothing burnt, was estimated at $170 85, which was promptly paid by the insurance companies.

The trustees are careful to have all the property of the State, in their care, kept in good repair.

The product of the farm in the way of early vegetables and fruit was satisfactory, but the drought since harvest has been severely felt by the growing crops. The stock is in good condition and well cared for. Our excellent spring water has not failed in yielding an abundant supply for bath and laundry purposes.

In addition to the income of School Fund (which is derived from interest on bonds, bonds and mortgages, and dividends on stocks), the Treasurer holds leases of lands under water, given by the Riparian Commission, amounting to $602,432.09, on which amount seven per cent. is due semi-annually. He has placed of the above amount, in the hands of the Attorney General, leases amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $132,-901.07, the same being one year or more in arrearage of rent.

The Agricultural College Fund, amounting to $116,000, is all invested in bonds of this State, the interest amounting to $6,960, has been received and disbursed for the maintenance of Rutgers Scientific School.

The indebtedness on war account has been decreased $100,000, being the amount of bonds due and redeemed Jan. 1, 1881, leaving the balance of war bonds outstanding $1,893,300, of which amount $100,000 fell due the first day of January, 1882.

A Warning to Guiteau.

The trial of James B. Graves for the murder of the boy Edward P. Sodon was concluded at Newark Monday. It will be remembered that his defense was similar to that of Guiteau and was that when he killed the boy he was acting under an irresistible impulse. In charging the jury Judge Depew, in referring to the plea of insanity, called their attention to the fact that the prisoner had been a competent witness in his own behalf and had himself set up a defense of insanity and had taken the burden of proof upon himself. "If on a defense of this kind," continued the Judge, "persons accused of crime could discharge themselves by their own testimony the most disastrous consequences would follow. The law regards insanity as a disease of the mind implying fixedness and continuance of mental condition.—It therefore rejects the doctrine of what is called emotional insanity, which he gives on the eve of the criminal act and ends when it is consummated." He concluded by quoting the following: "Insanity is only a manifestation of disease of the brain. The doctrine that an individual can be entirely sane immediately before and after any particular act, and yet insane at the instant the act was committed, is contrary to every principle of sound psychological science. To establish a defense on the ground of insanity it must be clearly proved that at the time of committing the act the accused was laboring under such a defect of reason, from a disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or, if he did know it, that he did not know that what he was doing was wrong. If an accused has sufficient mind to know the difference between right and wrong with respect to the act which he is doing, and to control his conduct under ordinary circumstances, he cannot discharge himself from responsibility by showing that he did the act under the influence of an irresistible impulse. If the accused had sufficient mind to distinguish between right and wrong and control his conduct under ordinary circumstances he cannot acquit himself on a plea of irresistible impulse." The Judge reviewed the testimony and concluded that the burden of proof of insanity is on the prisoner. The case was given to the jury at 2:15 p. m., and shortly after 5 they returned with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

The Government Expenditures.

The amount expended in the administration of the government at Washington is enormous. We can think of no more fitting term.

It is an enormity to spend over one hundred and ninety millions of dollars a year independent of the principal and interest and payments on the public debt, and the expenses of the Treasury Department.

But this is the amount estimated by the heads of departments for 1883 and appropriated for 1882, as shown by the following:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.

The book of estimates of appropriations required for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, has just been completed. The following is a recapitulation of its contents:

Objects.	Estimates for 1883.	Appropr'ns for 1882.
Legislative........	$3,921,604 72	$3,770,542 47
Executive proper........	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dep't of State........	1,47[illegible]	1,541,149 15
Treasury Dep't........	147,6[illegible] 79	167,140,147 48
War Department........	4[illegible]	44,794,915 71
Navy Department........	2[illegible]	[illegible]
Interior Dep't........	112,685,068 91	82,212,944 52
Post Office Dep't........	2,466,657 95	3,699,164 49
Dep't Agriculture........	392,040 00	[illegible]
Dep't of Justice........	3,316,[illegible]	3,374,437 75
Grand totals........	[illegible]	[illegible]

Is not this enormous? How does it tally with the principle of the simplicity and cheapness of Republican government? But we have got beyond that the past twenty years. Now we have the grandeur and ostentation and waste of an Empire, with a huge army of office-holders and a great host of sinecures, sucking the life-blood of the people.

President Arthur talked in his message sweetly about economy. All his Republican predecessors discoursed with equal sweetness on the same theme. But while they have been tickling the public ear with words, the departments have gone on piling up the expenditures until now, in a time of peace, we have the above figures, which ought to startle the country as an evidence of profligacy and plunder going on at their seat of government without precedent, and almost without parallel.

Think of it! One hundred and ninety million dollars a year for current expenses of the government, without counting principal or interest on the debt! Is not the public treasury in the possession of insatiate thieves?—Trenton True American.

Notice!

The "Board of Health" hereby give notice that VACCINATION throughout the community is deemed necessary, and that it is expedient that every man, woman and child in Plainfield who has not been effectually vaccinated within the past six years, should attend to this duty and precaution and without unreasonable delay. Our experience last year illustrates the importance of this, and which we have (partly owing, doubtless, to the precautions then taken) been saved thus far this Winter from any outbreak of the disease, all must recognize the wisdom of precaution. Persons unable to pay for vaccination will be vaccinated free of charge, upon applying to the City Physician.

By order of the Board,
R. H. LOWRIE, M. D., Secretary.
Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 24, 1882.

Notice!

Visitors to Muhlenberg Hospital can only be admitted on Tuesdays and Fridays, between two and four o'clock, p. m. At all other times, a special permit must be obtained from the physician, whose patient the visitor wishes to see.

ON Thursday evening, Feb. 9th, at the M. E. church, the sixth of the Y.M.C.A. Annual Course of Entertainments, will be given in the form of a lecture by that well-known speaker, Benj. F. Taylor; subject, "What made him do it?"

THE Democrat of Rahway states that considerable excitement has been created there by the report that colored children were to be admitted to the white schools. In this city the public schools have been attended by colored scholars for some time.

SYRACUSE (N. Y.) papers on hearing of the arrest of Refugee Rarick, call to mind the fact that that person formerly followed the profession of a music teacher in that city, and was quite sought after on account of his many personal attractions of form, feature, voice and eloquence.

WE have had several snow storms within the past ten days, but all ended in rain or cleared off so warm that it soon disappeared. All the elements seemed to be against the livery man this winter who are anxiously waiting for good sleighing to reap their usual harvest.

IT is now very much feared that boarding-house keepers will get the æsthetic craze and feed their unfortunate boarders upon Oscar Wilde's rations, which are said to consist of the music of the light for breakfast, two lilies of the valley tied together with a rainbow for dinner, and the smell of a shrub for supper.

OSCAR WILDE, the æsthetic, in a conversation with a reporter, while traveling toward Washington, by rail, thus alluded to our river: "I was pleased with the Raritan back there, with its brown current and brown banks; but still, those banks ought not to be bare and bleak—cover them with hardy lilies."—New Brunswick Times.

ON Monday evening of last week, Mr. Abram R. Stagg, formerly of this city, was publicly installed as A. P. G. of the Lexington Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Brooklyn. Upon the occasion of the ceremonies, Miss Kitty Stagg contributed to the entertainment a specimen of her talents as an elocutionist, which are highly spoken of by the press of the city.

ON Tuesday evening next, at the Park avenue church, Dr. Frank DeHaas will deliver the closing lecture of the series for which he has been secured. The subject will be "Around the World in less than Eighty Days," and we know of no speaker possessing more of the experience and eloquence necessary to treat the theme in an instructive and entertaining manner.

WHENEVER you see a fellow posing as a newspaper attaché set him down as a fraud. Regular reporters and editors, while proud of their profession, have too much sound sense to make fools of themselves. If they had not they could not get work for two days on a newspaper. Experienced journalists always look with pity and disgust on the silly antics of youthful fledglings, who imagine they are reporters.—True American.

THE members of Plainfield Eng. Co. No. 2 have made arrangements for holding a Benefit Ball at St. Mary's Hall, on the evening of Thursday of next week. Not only is a first-class time promised, but the cause is one that appeals to all members and friends of the Department. The proceeds are to be devoted to the assistance of a former fellow-member, now exempt, who is not only so unfortunate as to need the charity of others, but is also confined to his bed by serious illness.

OUR contemporaries in the vicinity, speak many kind words of sympathy for Foreman Doane in his trouble. That gentleman's condition is favorably and rapidly progressing towards a final recovery, under able medical treatment and careful nursing. He was able to be removed to his own house on Tuesday, without any ill effects resulting. Both the patient and his wife sincerely appreciate the kindness shown by their many friends upon the occasion of the accident, and desire to publicly thank those who are daily calling and expressing their generous sympathy and good wishes.

THE second of the Course of Health Talks (for young men exclusively) in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, under the auspices of the Association, will be given on Thursday evening, Feb. 16th. The speaker will be City Physician Henry H. Lowrie, and the subject is to be announced later.

A RUNAWAY horse dragging behind it a three-wheeled wagon from which had been emptied promiscuously along the street a number of milk cans, created quite an excitement on Park avenue, Tuesday morning. No damage, other than referred to above, resulted before the animal was caught.

NOW that the Plainfield Saengerbund has announced its intention of giving a grand concert for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital, and has already commenced rehearsals for the same, it is a question with some whether there is a church Society in this city that will offer its building for the purpose.

AS we go to press, the third of the Descriptive Talks under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., is being delivered in the Reformed Church by Mayor L. V. F. Randolph. The next of the series is set down for Tuesday evening Feb. 28th, when the Rev. T. H. Stockton will tell of "Three Months in the British Islands."

OUR City Treasurer, Mr. Jeremiah Van Winkle, was so unfortunate as to trip and fall over the curb in front of Estil's, last Monday evening. He was badly bruised about the face and slightly lamed in the wrists—in all of which he has our sympathy, as well as our congratulations upon his escape from more serious damage.

THE Jury in the case of Agnes Alcorn—whose trial on an indictment for the murder of her husband, was commenced on Tuesday at Elizabeth—brought in a verdict on Thursday, of "manslaughter." The jury was out but 30 minutes. Judge Van Syckle will deliver sentence on Monday. The extreme penalty was $1,000 fine and ten years imprisonment.

FROM the pulpits of the city an earnest and conscientious warfare is being waged against the probable granting of liquor licenses by the present Council. What the result will be it is impossible to surmise; but if able argument can prove effective, the Sunday morning sermon of the Rev. Dr. Bliss—to which five of the present Council were listeners—will bring about the policy that pastor advocates.

"JIM," another one of the Perrine family, has been secured through the efforts of Captain Dodd of Plainfield. The young man was indicted by the last Grand Jury of Somerset County as one of a number who attacked Wm. Calloway, near Blatz's Hotel on the evening of the Shepherd, Johnson & Godown fire, and relieved him of his watch. Under instructions from Captain Dodd, the Elizabeth Chief of Police arrested the accused in that city, and he was locked up in the Somerville Jail, on Monday.

THE New York papers of Wednesday contained a most terrible account of the death of Mrs. Thomas Wallace, of 262 Pearl street Brooklyn, by being suffocated with gas that escaped from a leak in a gas stove in the bed-room where she was sleeping. Her husband at the same time, from a like cause, was so prostrated that he was with difficulty aroused and it is feared that he cannot recover. The victims are the parents of the wife of Mr. Chas. Newell of Zephyr H. & L. Co., of this city, and the sympathy of their many friends is sincerely expressed for them in their affliction.

One Year Ago.

John Johnson was found guilty on the 23d inst., of the murder of Samuel Williams in West Fourth street (Battle Row) on the night of Sept. 11th, 1880, Mr. August Smith died on the 28th inst., of consumption and Mr. Pierre M. Hurlbut on the 26th of injuries received while coasting.

A United Ball.

In spite of the very uncomfortable weather of Wednesday evening and the danger of walking along the ice covered pavements, an unusually large gathering assembled at St. Mary's Hall and spent a night of uninterrupted enjoyment of social pleasures and the dance. The occasion was a grand ball under the united auspices of the Plainfield Land League, Ancient Order Hibernians, Young Men's Catholic Union, St. Mary's T. A. B., Association and the Robert Emmett Society, all of whom joined together with good-will and brotherly (and sisterly) love in having a happy and a merry time. The music was led by Cahill the celebrated, and the way the reels and jigs were rattled off, inspired with activity even the older folks present. The Floor Manager, Mr. Peter Flynn, deserves great credit for the able manner with which everything was attended to, in which he was assisted by Mr. Michael Field. Also the Floor Committee, Messrs Timothy Day, Robert Manning and John Mortly and the Reception Committee, Messrs. Alex McGuigan and James Whalen Jr., performed the duties of their office most satisfactorily. In fact, nothing was wanting to make the affair a most pleasant one, and it will be long remembered as a perfect success.

Perseverance Lodge No. 74, of this city, will dedicate their new hall this (Friday) evening. Four neighboring Lodges of the Order have received invitations to be present, together with the Grand Officers. Past Master Ward, of Newark, with other prominent brethren of the Order, will be present, and the exercises will be of the most interesting character.

Perseverance Lodge is making preparation to extend a most hearty and substantial welcome to all the visiting brethren, and a very enjoyable time is anticipated.

Personalia.

We are indebted to Hon. Miles Ross for a copy of the Congressional Directory, compiled for the use of Congress. It is a very useful document.

U. S. Senator McPherson has our thanks for public documents of interest.

Comptroller Anderson and State Treasurer Wright have favored us with copies of their Annual Reports, which contain interesting statistics.

Mr. A. J. Leader, resident of this city an attaché of the N. Y. Tribune, has issued a neat and handy Railway Guide, which every traveler should have a copy of. They are for sale at 7 cents each.

Left to Their Own Destruction.

William Richards and Lizzie Lambert, of Dover, N. J., who eloped last week, were arrested Wednesday morning last in Newark as they were about to take the Philadelphia train. They were detained until noon, when a telegram was received from their friends stating that they were not wanted. They were immediately discharged and departed arm in arm for the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, where they took the train for Philadelphia. Richards displayed a roll of bills containing $1,500, and said when that was gone he knew where to get more. He leaves a family of three small children at Dover and a young wife who will soon again be a mother.

A Cold Wave.

The sun shone bright and clear on Sunday morning and with the strong breeze that prevailed soon dried up the mud that covered the streets. The wind increased and soon was blowing a gale; squalls of snow went skurrying through the air and by noon a decidedly Wintry aspect was presented for the first time during the season. The wind increased steadily and the air grew colder as the day advanced, and by night a regular "blizzard" was blowing. At 8 o'clock, while the moon and stars were shining brightly, a snow squall came up, which in a few moments covered the ground. Monday morning the thermometer registered only 14 above zero, and on Tuesday from 3 to 7 below zero was the average record shown by the thermometers of this city and North Plainfield. Blue noses were worn by pedestrians and happy smiles by the ice dealers, while a number of camphorated outer garments were observed for the first time. We are told that the sudden change forecasts an early Spring and a cool Summer, which nobody will deny are consummations devoutly to be wished.

Hazel Kirke in Plainfield.

The pathetic drama of "Hazel Kirke" is shortly, we are gratified to announce, to be presented to a Plainfield public by the genuine Madison Square Theatre management. "Hazel Kirke" is one of the most affecting stories ever delineated on the stage, and appeals to the tenderest sympathies of our nature, melting to tears by its pathos and awakening all that is ennobling in the mind of the rapt listener. Hazel is not a woman pictured only in the fancy of the dramatist, but she is a character often met with in the well trodden paths of life. The story of her birth; the vicissitudes of her love; her estrangement from the parental roof; the unutterable agony she endures when told that she had been dishonored and was not a lawful wife; her pangs and remorse; her return to her blind father at night during a howling tempest, and the maledictions she hears from his condemning lips; her effort, when thinking all was lost, to destroy herself, are all feelingly, eloquently, vividly told in the thrilling narrative by a master pen. Hazel Kirke is undoubtedly one of the strongest plays ever set upon the stage, and such was its popularity in New York that it drew full houses at the Madison Square Theatre 486 consecutive nights—a success unparalleled in the annals of the American stage. All who have never witnessed this great play, which is more tender than "The Stranger" and more brilliant than "The Lady of Lyons," should avail themselves of the rare opportunity shortly to be afforded. It will be brought out with the rarest art, and the great original cast. It should meet with a liberal patronage from the best classes of our people.' No play ever written has won such enduring popularity.

A Splendid Year's Work.

From the Christian Intelligencer of the 18th inst, we take pleasure in republishing the following just tribute to the effective labors of the Trinity Reformed church during the past year. That paper says: "Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield, N. J., has a right to thank God and take courage. The one year of service of their gifted young pastor, Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, has solved some hard problems. With a bare organization, with no machinery in motion, the membership has grown from 79 to 156, of which 16 united on confession of faith. They have paid all running expenses, amounting to over $4,500, including $500 of arrears. They have made extensive and helpful repairs not included in the above. And, best of all, without any resort to fairs, festivals, concerts, or outside aid, they have just completed the payment of a chattel mortgage of $2,500 before it was due. They have a right to be glad and say, 'Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.'"

The above tribute, from a journal of such sound judgment as the one quoted, is most deserving. The amount of $4,500 mentioned as the expenses paid, does not, however, include the $500 of arrears. The two should be added, making a total of $5,000 which is the amount of "running expenses" paid by the church. The Ladies' Aid Society should also be mentioned for its successful efforts in the way of raising funds. Although it seems to be a popular belief that such organizations in a church are useful only to perfect the arrangements and carry out the schemes and projects of fairs, festivals and concerts, yet in this instance, without resorting to any such questionable secular devices for the raising of funds for the advancement of religion, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Trinity Reformed church has during the past year secured about $1,000 for the benefit of the church. Well may all this be termed a splendid year's work.

There were two warrants for new Lodges granted, making 152 Lodges in the State with a membership of 12,000 brethren.

The session was very largely attended, about 500 brethren being present, and it was a very harmonious one.

The venerable Tyler, Bro. Amos Howell, who for the past quarter of a century has so faithfully tyled the Grand Lodge, was retired with a pension. Bro. Hough is now the oldest Grand Secretary in the world, that is the oldest in office, he having filled the office of Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey for over forty years.

Our Coast Fishing.

Senator Vail, (occupying the President's chair) on Tuesday last laid before the Senate the following letters:

TRENTON, Jan. 23, 1882.

Hon. Garrett A. Hobart, President of the Senate.

SIR:—I am in receipt of a communication from Hon. W. J. Sewell, U. S. Senator from this State, upon the subject of menhaden fishing, and the injury which is annually inflicted upon the valuable fishing interests on our Atlantic coast by the department of fishing vessels from other States. The subject is of absorbing interest to the citizens of our seaboard counties, and in view of the great importance to them as well as to the people of the State at large, I have deemed it my duty to transmit Senator Sewell's letter to the Legislature for such action as they may see fit to take.

Very Respectfully,
E. J. ANDERSON,
Commissioner of Fisheries of N. J.

U. S. SENATE CHAMBER,
WASHINGTON, Jan. 17, 1882.

Hon. E. J. Anderson, Commissioner of Fisheries of New Jersey.

DEAR SIR:—I have had for some time under consideration the matter of our fishing interests along the Jersey coast, and had about concluded to introduce a bill in Congress, prohibiting the further destruction of our own fish product by parties from other States. In a recent conversation, however, with Prof. Baird, of the Smithsonian Institute, who is the recognized authority upon this subject, I learned a fact of which I was previously not aware, namely, that in the treaty with England on the Fishery question the citizens of this country are privileged to fish anywhere in Canadian waters. The treaty being reciprocal, grants the like courtesy to the people of Canada, to fish anywhere here along our coast. It is therefore impossible to enact a law of the character I intended. It would give the Canadians a monopoly of the fisheries along our coast, and would likewise enable the present parties engaged in the destruction and damage of our fishing interests by the capture of menhaden for oil and fertilizing purposes to take out Canadian registers.

The State of Maine, through the Legislature, considered the same question for some time and finally arrived at the conclusion to pass an act prohibiting the catching of fish along her shores, with purse nets or other contrivances, and the result has been that in driving away the different companies engaged in that business principally from Connecticut and Rhode Island, and in freeing that coast from their operations, there has been an immense increase of this class of fishing vessels along our own shores within the past few years.

I would therefore recommend the State to take action similar to that of Maine, and not await the action of the national government, which cannot be successfully worked in view of the treaty I have referred to.

The evil is a crying one and must be suppressed by the best means at hand. The growing popular interest in the shore line of our State, and the magnificent Summer resorts, has really brought the question up as one of the principal industries of New Jersey from which we receive a revenue equal to, if not in excess, of that from our manufacturing interests. The production of fish for the use and amusement of a population of 250,000, during the Summer months, and still increasing, is of so much importance, that it behooves the State to give it the consideration it deserves. Yours Truly,

W. J. SEWELL.

The communication was referred to a special committee, consisting of the Senators from the sea shore counties.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The Bridgeton Chronicle says that "application will be made to the coming session of the legislature for the passage of a supplement to the act incorporating the West Jersey Game Protective Society, said supplement to prohibit the use of breech-loading guns in hunting for game." The South Jerseyman suggests in connection with this, that "if some one will make application to the Legislature for a law declaring the W. J. Game Society a nuisance, then they will be even. More game may possibly be killed with breech-loaders, but not so many men are wounded or maimed for life."

We agree with the South Jerseyman. This Philadelphia monopoly, under the name of "West Jersey Game Protective Society" is getting altogether too "fresh."

Application will be made at this session of the Legislature to change the laws governing fishing in the fresh waters of this State so that the time for fishing shall begin on the first of June instead of the first of July, so as to correspond with the law of New York State.—Exchange.

It would be much in the interest of fish protection if the New York and Pensylvania laws were altered to conform with that of New Jersey. It is the opinion of eminent fish culturists that black bass spawn during the month of June and therefore should not be taken.

Assemblyman Rose has introduced a bill before the Legislature of this State to prohibit the killing of woodcock in New Jersey before July 4, 1887, under a penalty of $25. When it is considered that the woodcock is a migratory bird, and would not multiply any faster after the passage of such a law, it is a wonder that the astute framer of that bill did not include wild duck, geese, and other migratory birds.

It is said that vaccination protects not only from small-pox but diphtheria as well.

TWENTY-three Students of Princeton College have been indicted for smashing windows and lamps.

Churchill's Readings.

Lovers of good elocution and seekers after an evening's amusement, will have a fine opportunity to indulge themselves on February 3d, when Prof. J. W. Churchill will give his promised Readings in the M. E. church, under the auspices of the Delibes Society. A full and varied programme has been made out for that occasion. Seats may be selected at Reynold's pharmacy.

Obituary.

As we briefly mentioned at the time, James Lyman Spencer (generally known by the more familiar title of "Uncle Lyman") passed to that "bourne from which no traveler ever returns," Jan. 9th, 1882, aged 77 years, 5 months and 3 days, after an illness of about three weeks from gangrene. He was born at Chatham, Morris County, N. J., on August 6th, 1804, and was descended from good Revolutionary stock, being a grandson of Colonel —— Spencer, who was killed at the Battle of Elizabeth Town in 1780. His father was Captain William (afterwards Squire) Spencer, who was a large real estate owner and proprietor of the Chatham Flouring Mills, and who also kept a general country store at that place for upwards of sixty years. James L. Spencer learned the business and carried on the manufacture of hats at Chatham prior to and after his marriage, which event took place on December 5, 1827. His choice of a life companion was Miss Caroline, daughter of John and Sallie Lines Wilcox, also of Revolutionary lineage. By this union he became the father of seven children, four sons and three daughters. At or about the year 1835, Mr. Spencer determined to turn his attention to farming, and with that purpose in view took possession of a farm in Washington Valley, now known as the Duyckinck farm. In 1848, he resigned this farm to his eldest son, John, and having purchased the Noah Drake homestead, at what is now known as Washingtonville, and for thirteen years he made that place his home, engaged in farming, cider making and distilling. In 1861 he disposed of his farm and business to his son William, and removed to North Plainfield, where for five years he devoted himself to trade, carrying on the grocery business on Somerset street. At the end of that time he concluded to enjoy the fruits of his labor and gave the business to the care of other sons. Mr. Spencer was a man of sterling character, of pleasant face and manner and wherever he went made many friends. He was of strong constitution and of robust physique and scarcely knew a week's illness until the coming of that which ended his life.

"Uncle Lyman" was widely known as a sportsman of the old school, and when in his prime was considered one of the best wing shots in this section of the State; the pursuit of his favorite recreation sometimes took him far from home, he having fifteen different times carried his rifle to the States of Illinois and Iowa in search of game worthy of his skill.

His wife, four sons and two daughters survive him. His body was consigned to the family burial plot in the Presbyterian Cemetery in North Plainfield, on Wednesday, the 11th inst. The mourning relatives in following him to the grave were accompanied by a large number of sympathizing friends and neighbors.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

It is rumored that we are going to have a new proprietor of the Westfield Hotel.

A special communication of Atlas Lodge, No. 125, Westfield, was held at their Lodge rooms on Monday evening.

Rev. William C. Roberts, formerly of Cranford Presbyterian church, now Librarian of Princeton College, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday last.

George S. Peck, residing on First street, is suffering from a large carbuncle boil on the back of his neck, which is so painful as to prevent him from going to the city to attend to his business.

Jerome McNeil, who had the contract for painting Mr. Ed. Hart, Jr's, new house on Quimby street, has completed the same. It has been done in a neat and artistic manner, both inside and out.

On Sunday evening last after the sermon delivered by the pastor of the Baptist church, the Rev. E. H. Brouson, the ordinance of baptism by immersion was administered by the pastor to William H. Edgar and his wife.

On Monday evening last, J. Warren Brown, D. D. G. M. of Westfield Lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F. with several members of his Lodge, went to Bergen Point, to officiate at the installation of officers of the Bergen Point Lodge of Odd Fellows.

On Sunday evening as the horse and carriage of Mr. Louis Budell of Oakland was being driven to the depot by a boy who works for Mr. Budell, he left the animal standing without being tied, and went into the depot to warm himself; the horse started off on his own hook, but was caught in front of the Presbyterian church on Broad street, before doing much damage to wagon or harness!

The Dramatic entertainment held in Lyceum Hall on Thursday evening, 19th inst., was well attended, every seat being filled. The three act comedy—"Still Water Runs Deep," was performed with the following cast by ladies and gentlemen of New York and Brooklyn, and our town): Mr. Potter, a retired merchant, Mr. J. Percival; Captain Hawksley, an adventurer, Mr. J. W. Falvey; John Mildmay, Mr. Alfred Westbrook; Gimlet, a detective, Mr. John Hodges; Mrs. Sternhold, Miss Marian Talbot, Mrs. Mildmay, Miss Hattie Anderson, and others as promoter of companies, pages, &c. All acted their parts well and were loudly applauded. Especial mention should be made of the parts taken by Mr. Westbrook, Mr. Falvey and the Misses Talbot and Anderson, who acted more like professionals than amateurs. The play lasted two hours and a half; everybody was well pleased and highly gratified, and financially it was a grand success.

The Fisk University Jubilee Singers gave one of their grand concerts in the audience room of the Methodist Episcopal church on Monday evening last, to a large and appreciative audience, every seat in the church being filled. The programme was made up from the "Slave Songs, or Spirituals," sung by the negro slaves of the South. The company consisted of the Misses Jennie Jackson, Mattie L. Lawrence, Laura Wells, sopranos; Miss R. G. Heathcote and Miss Mabel R. Lewis, contraltos; Mr. F. J. Loudin and B. W. Thomas, bass; Mr. Geo. E. Barrett, and G. W. Payne, tenor. The bass song by Mr. Loudin was well rendered, he having a very deep voice, as also was the song by Miss Jennie Jackson, soprano. Among some of the songs sung were the following: "Go down, Moses;" "Tell old Pharaoh to let my people go;" "The Gospel train is coming;" "Nobody knows the trouble I see;" "Swing low, sweet chariot;" "Oh, make me holy," and many other old slave songs. The proceeds, after paying the singers, are to go for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church; the net proceeds, after paying all expenses, was very close to one hundred dollars.

Meeting of the Board of Health, Jan. 25, 1882.

Present—H. P. Alpers, Jas. Moffett, R. R. Sinclair.

Minutes of last meeting omitted.

The following communication was received from the Board of Trustees.

WESTFIELD, N. J., Jan. 23d, 1882.

GENTLEMEN: We would respectfully report that several cases of scarlet fever having occurred within the past two months among children attending our Public School, it seemed to us to be our duty as the guardians, in an especial sense, of the health of the pupils under our care, to seek to discover the origin of the disease and if possible to prevent it from spreading any further. We accordingly had the school building thoroughly fumigated on Saturday and Sunday last, in order to destroy any germs that might possibly have been brought upon the premises in the clothing of some one who had recovered from the disease and returned to school. The fumigation was done under the direct supervision of a physician, and was, as we are advised, more than sufficient to accomplish the object. There need therefore be no further anxiety on this score. In addition to this, we have to-day temporarily dismissed from the school all in attendance who have had the fever during the past two months. Each of these cases will be investigated at once by the physician who attended it, in order to ascertain whether all necessary precautions in regard to clothing, &c., have been taken, and until the doctor's certificate to this effect is shown to the Trustees, none of the children referred to will be allowed to come to school again. Furthermore the standing rule of the school to send children home immediately who complain of the slightest illness, or who are in the least suspected of being ill, and also to exclude all the children of families wherein contagious diseases exist, shall be rigidly enforced as heretofore. Trusting that our action may meet with your approval, and promising you our prompt and cordial co-operation in any further measures that you may deem necessary. We have the honor to remain

Your obedient servants,
STEPHEN S. MAPES,
WM. T. PEEK,
R. R. SINCLAIR,
Trustees of School Dist. 10.

Report of the Board of Trustees of School District No. 10, relative to the action taken by them to prevent the further spreading of scarlet fever among the pupils of the school, was read and placed on file, and on motion the action taken by said Trustees was approved.

Dr. Harrison reported a mild case of scarlet fever at residence of John J. Marsh, near Lambert's Mills.

On motion received and placed on file.

Mr. Sinclair on behalf of Trustees reported verbally this evening that no new cases had been reported since Sunday, and that with one exception all were very light cases, and that they had taken every precaution, thoroughly fumigating and disinfecting school house and out buildings.

No epidemic exists in Westfield.

On motion adjourned to meet Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

"Too much absorbed in his business," was the comment of a Western newspaper on the death of a brewer who was drowned in a tank of his own beer.

Unhealthy or inactive kidneys cause gravel, Bright's disease, rheumatism and a horde of other serious and fatal diseases, which can be prevented with Hop Bitters, if taken in time.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.
I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.
J. J. BABCOCK, M. D.

The comity existing between Jeff. Davis and Johnston is no longer a mystery. Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Johnston always hated each other.

ONLY TWO BOTTLES.

Messrs. Johnson, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of Gen. John C. Fremont, Gov. of Arizona, had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.: For the past three winters I have been afflicted with Catarrh and cold in the head. I applied several remedies without good results. Last winter I used your Cream Balm and found it to accomplish all you represented. T. F. McCORMICK (Judge Common Pleas), Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 28, 1880. See adv't.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria, all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGER'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

"No, I shall leave my wife nothing," said old Gribbs, "she's always had her will and now I'll have mine."

WHEN BABIES ARE FRETFUL they disturb everybody, and mothers should know how soothing Parker's Ginger Tonic is. It takes away half their anxiety, stops babies' pains, and is always safe and pleasant to use.—Home Journal.

EDUCATED WOMEN.

Refined and educated women will sometimes suffer in silence for years from kidney diseases, or constipation and piles, which could easily be cured by a package of Kidney-Wort. It is put up in liquid and dry forms, equally efficient.—Springfield Union.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Have you found the key to perfect health and strength? It is Kidney-Wort, the only remedy that overcomes at once the inaction of the kidneys and bowels. It purifies the blood, and gives strength to the liver, kidneys and bowels to perform their regular functions. See displayed advertisement.

THE CITY GENT IN THE COUNTRY.

Philip Erastus Browne was city born and bred, with an ample fortune, a handsome person of which he was exceedingly vain, an aristocratic drawl, and an invariably immaculate shirt bosom, was Mr. Philip, our redoubtable hero.

He had never been further from the city of New York than to Saratoga, Newport and the Virginia Springs, and those places he had "done" to death.

The country in all its glory of freedom from crowds, eclat and notoriety, he had never beheld—and if it had been to have saved his soap locks from the devastating shears of the barber, he could not have distinguished a calf from a goat.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea now to strike out boldly into a new territory where there was latitude enough to spread himself.

"Weally," said Philip to himself, stroking his moustache and slipping a lozenger into the receptable supposed to exist beneath, "the country must be delightful! Such fine air, and such a fine chance for astonishing the natives."

For once he displayed uncommon energy, and rose the following morning in season for the 11 A. M. train—which was to take him to Richland—the locality which he had decided to honor with his presence.

At sunset he was set down at the dingy little station along with his four trunks and his rosewood dressing case. There was no vehicle in waiting for passengers, and Philip gazed around in surprised dismay. He addressed the station master—

"Do you know, sir, of any place where I could engage board for a few weeks?"

"Yes," returned the man—folding up the sheet on which he had been engaged and placing it under lock and key, as though a little suspicious of his new acquaintance.

"Yes, there's Sally Carter's."

"Is she a respectable person?"

"Go and ask her that question, and if she don,t upset your understanding quicker'n yer can say Jack Robinson, then my name isn't Higgins! She's respectable enough, but she takes snuff and that will get into the vittles."

"Oh, my gracious goodness! Don't mention it!" cried Philip, laying his hand on his stomach in sudden distress.

"Is there no other place? I'm very delicate naturally, and am anxious to secure a respectable place, you know."

"Sarting! Wall, let me think! There's Farmer Howe. He takes city dandies to board occasionally, I believe. The yaller house out yonder on the hill! Perhaps if you carry your dish pretty upright you can manage to get in there."

"I guess I will walk over. You're sure there ain't any wild animals, bugs and such on the road?"

"Nothing wild in these parts."

After an indefinite deal of toil, Philip reached the house.

Our hero felt the whole front of the mansion over in search of a door bell, but nothing of the kind presented itself, so he rapped with his rattan. The sound brought a small black cur to the spot, and at sight of the stranger, he commenced testifying his dissatisfaction by a series of barks and somersets in the direction of Phil's coat tail.

Philip screamed—beat a hasty retreat to the back yard, followed so closely by his canine friend that to escape collision he was forced to hop upon a barrel which offered a temporary relief. The barrel was covered with a board—the board tilted—slipped in, and in went Philip neck deep in the dirty soap suds that Farmer Howe had saved to water the garden when there should be a spell of dry weather.

The poor fellow's frantic yells alarmed the family, and brought Susy, the farmer's daughter, to the rescue. Susy was an athlete, and without hesitation drew Philip to the ground, wrung him out—shook and carried him into the house—where, after a few minutes, he was able to make known his business.

Mrs. Howe was the very quintessence of benevolence—she commiserated Phil, gave him a suit of Farmer Howe's blue jean for a temporary wardrobe, and cheered his empty stomach with a good supper.

The next day our delicate hero went out for a stroll and was greatly mystified with much that he saw. The striped snakes were dreadfully terrifying, though; and he nearly dislocated his spine jumping over a fence to avoid contact with a splendid heifer that was quietly grazing on a hillside.

By and by he espied a fine, little grayish cone on a bush in the hedge, and after regarding the mysterious curiosity for some time, he concluded to secure it to present to his friend Wilkins, who was something of a philosopher. He was not sure whether it was a green pumpkin or an incipient cocoanut, but as soon as he severed it from its parent stem, he received ocular proof that it was by no means a defunct substance. Philip had never before mistrusted that darning needles were a vegetable production, but he was satisfied now that they were, for more than a little million of buzzing demons pitched into him at every point. They punctured him through and through—they lodged in his hair, and his nose, in his ears—he was swarming with them! Dropping the dangerous curiosity, he streaked it for his boarding house, where, more dead than alive, he fell exhausted at the feet of Mrs. Howe. She deluged him with a pail of cold water, thus benumbing the hornets and restoring Phil to consciousness.

Mrs. Howe said he was a "sight to be seen," and no doubt she was correct. But at length, through her careful nursing, the fine old lady had Phil on his feet once more, and one afternoon he ventured to repeat his stroll down the pasture lane.

It would seem that the locality was a fatal one for Mr. Browne, for he had not proceeded far before he encountered a cow with a small calf at her side. Cows, he had always heard, were all gentleness and love, and so he made boldly up to her to pat her neck.

The cow did not relish the stranger's proximity to her offspring—she backed, reared, bellowed, and catching poor Phil on her horns, tossed him skyward, from which he came down again directly, minus his highly valued coat-tails, and sadly scratched and torn by the rough stones.

He took refuge in a tree, where he had the pleasure of viewing the surrounding landscape until sunset, when the owner of the animal came and drove her away.

A day or two afterwards, Phil again ventured out, but this time he took a new direction, and perambulated a swamp at the back of the Howe mansion.

By and by he espied a little black and white animal which he took to be a kitten; and remembering that Miss Hinckley—the village dressmaker who was then at the house sewing for Mrs. Howe—had expressed a particular liking for kittens, he thought he would secure this one for her. He did so with some little difficulty, and carrying it to the sitting room, he laid it in the prim maiden's lap, with the remark:

"A little pwesent I bwought to you. Pwetty little innocent cweature, just like yourself, Miss Hinckley."

The spinster cast one look at him, flung the "innocent cweature" to the further corner of the room, seized the fire shovel and drove poor Phil from the house.

Mrs. Howe explained matters satisfactorily—the animal was not a kitten, but in polite language she said an "essence peddler."

The next day Phil packed up his effects and bade adieu to Richland. He prefers the city to the country; he says it agrees with him better.

Lee (present incumbent), J. B. Cleveland, of Hudson, and Judge John Hopper, of Paterson. For Attorney General, John P. Stockton, (present incumbent), has been re-nominated. By the returns made to the Superintendent of Vital Statistics it is shown that for the year ending June 30th last, there were in the State 8,109 marriages, 23,470 births, and 20,964 deaths. The above is the sum total of each in the State. In twenty-five cities and towns in the State there were 4,095 marriages 12,665 births, and 12,346 deaths, during the same period. It will be seen that in the State the births exceed the deaths by 2,506, and that in the cities the births only exceeded the deaths by 319.

At a meeting of the freighters of Asbury Park and Ocean Grove recently held, a committee was appointed to present to the officials of the New Jersey Central Railroad the necessity for increased facilities and better protection for local freight. Among the wants are: additional sidings for the storage of loaded cars; widening and extension of depot platform; that the grounds around the depot be graveled and clayed.

The silk manufacturing business, which has been dull of late in Paterson, has started up again. The manufacture of plush, equal, it is said, to the foreign article, has been inaugurated. Artificial seal skin sacques made of it are very deceptive. There are now over 100 distinct silk mills in Paterson, giving employment to between 16,000 and 17,000 operatives.

A Handsome Watch.

Mr. James Mix, the South Pearl street jeweler, has on exhibition an exceedingly interesting specimen of the deft handiwork of the Swiss watchmaker, A. Saltzman. At an industrial and art fair held at Chaux de Fonds, Switzerland, about a year ago, there was great competition among the Swiss watchmakers, the leading men of that industry putting forth their best efforts and exhibiting wonders in the way of skillful fashioning and artistic ornamentation. M. Saltzman exhibited thirteen specimen watches of his manufacture, ranging in size from a twenty-five cent piece to the watch on exhibition at Mix's, which measures, in the technical term of the watchmaker, twenty-six "lines." A watch of the ordinary size measures nineteen "lines," and thus it will be seen that the one on exhibition is a giant. It was awarded the first prize at Chaux de Fonds, not because of its heroic pattern, but for its beautiful ornamentation and the skill displayed in its manufacture. Its works are of the best material, and at the first glance have the appearance of being viewed through a magnifying glass, because of their extraordinary size. Its case, however, is its main attraction, representing as it does the skillful and artistic accomplishment of the finest work known to the modern manipulator of the precious metals. The case is of silver, having an open face. Upon the back is a combination of black, or oxidized enamel work and gold inlaying, or incrustation, in dainty designs of ornamentation, with a center piece at once historical and artistic. Surrounded by a wreath of oak and laurel, at the bottom of which is a handsome Geneva cross on a scroll-seal, is a group of three figures, representing the convention entered into in 1307 by the three cantons of Schwytz, Uri and Unterwalden, which resulted in the expulsion of the Austrians the following year, and the foundation of the Swiss confederation. The scene is beautifully worked out, and has a more realistic appearance than many a highly-wrought painting. Three men—an Italian, a German and a Frenchman—each in his characteristic garb, stand bareheaded and hand to hand in the act of taking an oath. Rocks rise majestically in the back ground to the right, while on the left the moon, peeping from beautifully-fashioned clouds, casts gleams of light upon a little lake and shows the shadows of the confederates upon the ground beneath their feet. Inside the wreath is a circling scroll, bearing the legend "Un pour tous, tous pour un," while the date of the compact is handsomely worked above the picture. Taken altogether, the watch is a triumph of artistic handiwork.—Albany Argus.

This is the same watch that attracted so much attention and admiration among others displayed by Mr. Saltzman at the late Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Association, and which awarded a special premium. It is now on exhibition in the show-window of Clare, the jeweler, at No. 9 Park avenue.

[From the Trenton True American, of Jan. 19, 1882]

Untruthful and Sensational Journalism.

The Gazette, New York Sun, Tribune and other papers in their issue of yesterday did Hon. Joseph H. Shinn, the member from Atlantic county, a gross injustice when they alleged that he left the Democratic caucus "with Messrs. Clarke and McLaughlin, but he afterward reconsidered his decision and returned." Mr. Shinn did not leave the caucus with the gentlemen named. When he did so he obtained permission to leave, and was absent five minutes, when he returned, as was his intention when he left the room. Whoever sent to the Sun and other New York papers the report as to Mr. Shinn, and also the statement that Clerk Cooper called upon the Sergeant-at-Arms for assistance during the excitement in the House on Tuesday evening, and further that "in the contest between McDermott and Cooper, the former stepped behind the latter and endeavored to seize the gavel," either did not know what he was writing about, or wrote what he knew to be a malicious and deliberate lie. Mr. Cooper did not call for assistance from the Sergeant-at-Arms or from anyone else. There was no conflict between Messrs. McDermott and Cooper, and Mr. McDermott did not endeavor to seize the gavel. "The Sergeant-at-Arms did not hesitate to seize Mr. McDermott," because he was not near him and because he was not called upon to do so, and because there was no necessity for it.

It would be well for New York and other journals to have reliable correspondents, or, at least, when they have correspondents who do send reliable news, to use it in preference to the wildcat scribblings of mendacious sensation mongers.

We perfectly agree with the True American in the above, being an eye-witness of the whole occurrence. What E(x)rnest correspondents there are at Trenton.

New Jersey's Education.

From the Report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, presented to the State Board of Education, and which will be forwarded to the present session of the Legislature, we glean the following important statistics which shows the condition of the Public Schools, the number of teachers and pupils, the number and value of school buildings, the number of libraries in the State, and the receipts and the disbursements made for school purposes:

The amount of school tax available the school, year ending August 31, 1882, was $1,322,740; the township school tax was $24,329; interest of surplus revenue, $29,980.43; district and city tax for teacher's salaries, $275,770.41; district and city tax for building and repairing school houses $411,099 08. Total revenue for all school, purposes $2,164,218.92. There is an increase shown in the revenue over that of the past year of $290,454.02.

The value of school property in the State is $6,275,067, showing an increased value over last year of $30,928.

The report shows the following statistics for the past year, which closed Aug. 31st, 1881:

The average cost per pupil, estimated from total school census, was $5.22; on average attendance, $15.92.

There were 3,485 teachers in the State—males, 926; females, 2,560. The salary of male teachers per month averaged $51 07; females, $32.38.

There are 1,370 school districts in the State, as follows: Atlantic, 46; Bergen 66; Burlington, 110; Camden, 42; Cape May, 29; Cumberland, 59; Essex, 38; Gloucester, 67; Hudson, 16; Hunterdon, 104; Mercer, 55; Middlesex, 74; Monmouth, 116; Morris, 107; Ocean, 48; Passaic, 37; Salem 67; Somerset, 71; Sussex, 106; Union, 34; Warren, 88.

The number of school buildings in the State was 1,585, as follows: Atlantic, 57; Bergen, 70; Burlington, 121; Camden, 63; Cape May, 28; Cumberland, 83; Essex, 75; Gloucester, 71; Hudson, 46; Hunterdon, 108; Mercer, 70; Middlesex, 78; Monmouth, 125; Morris, 111; Ocean, 48; Passaic, 50; Salem, 74; Somerset 74; Sussex, 107; Union, 35; Warren, 94. Of the total number of school buildings in the State 61 are rented, and the remainder are owned by the districts.

There are 197 unsectarian private schools and 100 sectarian schools.

Number of visits made to the schools by the County Superintendents, 4,082.

The number of new buildings erected during the year was 36; the number repaired or refurnished was 67.

The number of buildings at the following values were: $100, 35; between $100 and $500, 351; between $500 and $1000, 419; between $1,000 and $5,000, 513; between $5,000 and $10,000, 71; between $10,000 and $20,000, 50; between $20,000 and $40,000, 50; over $40,000, 35. The average value per school building was $4,779.

The total school census is 335,681; total number enrolled in the public schools is 203,542; the average attendance in public schools is 110,952; estimated number of children in private schools is 43,656. The public schools will seat 187,136 children. The average time the schools have been kept open was nine months and ten days.

The average number of children in each school district, including the cities, 245; excluding the cities, 153.

The following shows the cost of schools in cities and the different items of expenditures: Teacher's salaries, $671,554.66; Superintendents' salaries $13,793.40; Janitors' $53,170 84; Clerks' and Treasurers' fees, $8,132.25; fuel and light, $94,345.29. Total current expenses, $780,996.44. Building, $59,843.51; repairs, $11,637; furniture, $7,756.23; apparatus, $434.53; books and stationery, $36,303 43; printing and advertising, $5,753.65; taking school census, $6,130.10. Total permanent expenses, $157,838.45. Grand total, $938,834.89.

The total number of payments made on school libraries during the past year was 157, of these 57 were first payments. The first payment on library account is $20, and the subsequent ones are $10 each, thus the total amount expended by the State was $2,140.

The following are the number of libraries maintained in each county: Atlantic, 20; Bergen, 27; Burlington, 35; Camden, 22; Cape May, 18; Cumberland, 29; Essex, 46; Gloucester, 31; Hudson, 18; Hunterdon, 36; Mercer, 15; Middlesex, 32; Monmouth, 42; Morris, 43; Ocean, 14; Passaic, 16; Salem, 9; Somerset, 17; Sussex, 22; Union, 18; Warren, 24. Total number of libraries in the State, 533.

The school law was changed by the last legislature, so that instead of the tax of two mills upon the ratables being levied a tax equal to four dollars for each child within the school age is imposed. Under the old law the rate was fixed, and the amount received per capita raised. Under the new law (act of March 16th, 1881), the amount levied is arbitrary and unchangeable, but the rate of taxation will vary, the rate being fixed by dividing the total amount of tax to be raised by the total ratables of the State which gives uniform rates for all the counties, the rate last year being about two and a half mills on the dollar. Hence, as the total valuation of the State increases the rate for school tax will decrease. Under the present law each county receives at least 90 per cent. of the total school tax raised by it, so that no county will be taxed more than ten per cent. out of the actual amount raised for State school tax. The ten per cent. surplus constitutes a "reserve fund," which is apportioned by the State Board of Education among the counties as they deem equitable and just. Essex county was the only county last year which did not receive back a part of the ten per cent. On the previous year Essex county raised twenty-five per cent. more than it received back, or in other words it paid one-quarter of its total school tax for the benefit of other counties. Mercer, Hunterdon and Somerset, fared even worse than Essex, one of them paying out 32 per cent. of the amount of its school tax for the benefit of other counties.

Under the present law no school district in the State receives less than $200, and no district with 45 children or over receives less than $350. Whereas under the old law the very small districts received a per capita tax, in some cases amounting to not over $100, and the districts now receiving $350 only received $300.

The information received from the county and city Superintendents shows that operations of the new law have given a new impetus to school work, and with the increase of salaries to teachers a better teaching force is likely to be secured as well as a large number of teachers and more school accommodation.—True American.

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.
Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:
First,
Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination, which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.
Second,
Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.
Third,
Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.
Fourth,
Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.
Fifth,
Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.
Sixth,
Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

NIGHT BEFORE MARRIAGE.

REFLECTION OF AN ADORER OF MISS DASSIE SOCKETTE.

Yes, I'm going to burn it. Her picture,
 Which held in a dainty gilt frame
Has been on my mantle a fixture,
 Goes under it, into the flame.
And one last farewell look I am taking,
 If ever I loved her, 'tis o'er,
And yet, at my heart, is an aching
 To think I shall see this no more.
In this picture, how well I behold her,
 Her taught eyes and pretty sweet face,
Her white bust and the dimpled shoulder
 Half lost in a soft cloud of lace,
The other plump shoulder just glancing
 Through rich chestnut tresses is seen.
By Jove, 'tis a vision entrancing!
 No wonder they call her "the queen,"
And all the young fellows adore her—
 And some not so young, too, maybe—
And he has knelt before her,
 Is thought an eccentric. Ah, me!
It really seems wicked and cruel,
 To make of this rare gem of art,
That once I so prized, merely fuel,
 I turn the card o'er and my heart
Is steeled. There is written: "Thine ever.
 With love, your own Dassie." That line
Seals the doom of the picture. It never
 Must see any eye, now, but mine,
So here goes the picture with sorrow,
 So ends one sweet dream of my life,
For I'm going to be married to-morrow,
 And that picture, if kept, might make strife.

THE FALSE GUARDIAN.

Just after the close of the American Revolution, James Tudor, a young ship carpenter, of Boston, sailed on board the Orient, a new and staunch built ship, bound for Smyrna, at that time the largest and wealthiest city of Levant. After the usual tedium and want of variety incident to so long a voyage, the Orient, arrived safely at that port and unshipped her anchor.

The next morning, just as the captain's gig was being lowered for the accommodation of that officer and the supercargo, who were then preparing to go on shore to report to the British consul and pay their respects to Mr. Tracey, the American merchant, to whom they bore letters of introduction and credit from Gray, Tolibitts & Co., the great importing house at home, they perceived a small row-boat rapidly approaching the ship, and containing two persons—a man who was vigorously rowing, and one solitary female figure.

When the boat came alongside, the boatman promptly assisted the lady on board. Somewhat wildly, but hesitatingly, she inquired for the Captain, who in company with the supercargo, was pointed out to her.

She was young and pretty, in fact, almost childlike, and seemed, from her wild, scared look, to be laboring under some deep anxiety or fear. She was dressed in garments of the richest material, though seemingly thrown on in haste and with the greatest negligence.

She approached the captain in a hurried nervous way and inquired if she might speak with him a moment alone.

He answered in the affirmative, and drawing her aside out of hearing of his companion, patiently prepared to listen; for the appearance of the strange young woman on board his ship at so early an hour in the morning had greatly excited his curiosity.

"Will you excuse me," she began timidly, "but are you a single or married man?"

Captain Ward glanced at the questioner curiously. Indeed it was a peculiar question for a young woman to ask of him, a perfect stranger. But he answered her with a perfect good breeding of politeness. Yes, he was a married man.

The young lady looked disappointed but presently recovered.

"Is there any gentleman on board your ship who is not married, and whom you think would like to marry a rich young girl within the hour, and ask no questions? I will say that she has been deeply wronged and persecuted, but is nevertheless highly respectable and virtuous, though she can only claim her property by clearly establishing the fact of a legal marriage."

"Both my mates are married," said the captain, "and the supercargo is engaged to a young lady in Boston, to whom I understand he will be married on our return. But hold, there is our carpenter, James Tudor, a fine looking gentlemanly young fellow as one might wish to see, and is unmarried. In fact he is much more of a gentleman in his ways and manners than any of us, if we except Mr. Owley, yonder, the supercargo."

"Can I see him?" inquired the strange young lady, eagerly.

"Oh, certainly, Miss, I will summon him directly."

And James Tudor, the sprightly and handsome young carpenter, was sent for, and came promptly aft where Captain Ward and his mysterious visitor were standing.

It was evident at a glance that Tudor had made at first sight a favorable impression upon the young lady.

Captain Ward therefore excused himself to the lady, and after leaving her alone with Tudor, rejoined Owley, when the two shortly after took their seats in the gig, and were pulled ashore by four seamen in waiting.

At the awkward introduction of the captain the carpenter touched his tarpaulin politely, and making a low and graceful bow, which went far toward captivating the heart of this young lady.

"Dear sir," she said, blushing and trembling visibly; "I have what may appear a very unmaidenly proposal to make. There is a wealthy young lady in whose service and interest I am employed, who cannot obtain possession of her rights excepting by marriage, as a proviso to that effect was unfortunately embodied in her father's will.

"Her uncle was appointed her guardian, and, taking advantage of the situation, has since attempted to make a traffic of her hand by marrying her to a wretch who she loathes, in consideration of his yielding up to him one-half of the property, which amounts, I am told, to over fifty thousand pounds sterling. It is now the earnest wish of this young lady to marry some one else, and thus defeat her unprincipled guardian, who has been to her, since her father's death, a most unmerciful tyrant. She is pretty and amiable, and I have every reason to believe, would devotedly love her husband. And now I come to the most difficult part of my mission. Will you, a stranger from a foreign shore, take pity on her hopeless condition and marry her? The moment you are married she will make over to you her entire fortune."

"I will marry her," said James Tudor, "if for nothing more than to spite her tyrant, but I will not be so mercenary as to exact her fortune for so slight a service."

"Come, then, my boat awaits you; let there be no delay," said the young lady, greatly overjoyed by his ready answer.

"You need make no alteration in your toilet, as I am supplied with ample means and have been authorized to procure for you the most costly garments to be found in the market."

Hardly knowing how the adventure was likely to end, Tudor followed the strange young lady into her boat, and they were speedily landed at the market wharf.

She hailed a cab and the two entered it. They were driven to a locality mentioned by the young lady, where our young American enjoyed the delightful luxury of a Turkish bath, which left his natural clear skin as pure and white as an infant's.

Their next step was to visit one of the most fashionable English clothiers in the city, where Tudor, at the urgent solicitation of the young lady, secured the richest and most expensive outfit in the establishment.

The proprietor himself assisted young Tudor in the arrangement of his toilet, and when once attired in the elegant and costly habiliments, a finer-looking gentleman could not have been met in the city of Smyrna.

He was tolerably well educated, too; well read, with a great flow of language at his command, picked up from the works of Steele, Addison and others, with whom in his leisure hours he had made himself thoroughly conversant, added to which he was naturally possessed of easy, graceful and winning manners.

When his toilet was complete he glanced admiringly into the full-length mirror before him, and was then ushered into the presence of the young lady by the gratified proprietor.

She looked at him in a half-bewildered way, as though she were in some doubt of his identity, and then her eager face was suddenly over-spread with a genuine blush of pleasure; and taking his arm they re-entered the cab which was still in waiting, and were driven directly to the residence of an Episcopal clergyman, the address of whom had been previously given by the young lady.

On alighting from the close cab they were ushered into the parlor where they were presently joined by the clergyman.

"You must speak to him," whispered the young lady, blushing crimson, "for as you may have guessed, I am to be the bride if you do not object to me."

"Nay, on the contrary," whispered Tudor, his face glowing with manly pleasure, "I am overjoyed to hear that it is you. But please tell me by what name I am introduce you?"

"Susan Faber," whispered his fiancee, smiling through her blushes.

The young American promptly accepted his cue, and proceeded with a graceful introduction of the young lady, as well as the purpose for which he had called.

The clergyman bowed and withdrew, but presently reappeared with his wife and two daughters as witnesses.

When the interesting ceremony was over they entered the cab, and were driven to the residence of the British Consul, before whom the new-made bride made a clear statement of the facts.

As good fortune would have it, Captain Ward and Supercargo Owley arrived just as she had concluded, and both readily vouched for the responsible and gentlemanly character of James Tudor, the bridegroom, as a messenger was immediately dispatched for the false guardian.

When he arrived and seen how matters stood he ground his teeth in suppressed rage, but wisely declined to test the validity of the marriage.

He relinquished on the spot all further claims as guardian of his niece, and at the request of the counsel, made out a hurried schedule of the property then under his control belonging to the aforesaid niece, Mrs. Tudor.

A fortnight later, and the happy bride came into lawful possession of the £50,000 left by her father, and on the subsequent return of her husband to Boston, where with the money thus received, was purchased the wharf which bears their family name to this day.

INTENSELY UTTER.

EFFECT OF CULTURE ON A ROCKLAND GIRL—AN ÆSTHETIC DAUGHTER AND A SUPERLATIVELY PRACTICAL PA.

A few months ago the daughter of a Rockland man, who has grown comfortably well off in the small grocery line, was sent away to a "female college," and last week she arrived home for the holiday. The old man was in attendance at the depot when the train arrived, with the old horse in the delivery wagon to convey his daughter and her trunk to the house. When the train had stopped, a bewitching array of dry goods and a wide brim hat dashed from the car and flung itself into the elderly party's arms.

"Why you superlatively pa!" she exclaimed. "I'm ever so utterly glad to see you."

The old man was somewhat unnerved by the greeting, but he recognized the seal-skin cloak in his grip as the identical piece of property he had paid for with the bay mare, and he sort of squat it up in his arms, and planted a kiss where it would do the most good with a report that sounded above the noise of the depot. In a brief space of time the trunk and its attendant baggage were loaded into the wagon, which was soon bumping over the bubbles toward home.

"Pa, dear," said the young miss, surveying the team with a critical eye, "do you consider this quite excessively beyond?"

"Hey?" returned the old man with a puzzled air; "quite excessive beyond what? Beyond Warren I consider it somewhat ten miles beyond Warren, countin' from the Bath way, if that's what you mean."

"Oh, no, pa, you don't understand me," the daughter explained; "I mean this wagon and horse. Do you think they are soulful?—do you think they could be studied apart in the light of a symphony, or even a simple poem, and appears as intensely utter to one on returning home as one could express?"

The old man twisted uneasily in his seat, and uttered something about he "believed it used to be used for an express before he bought it to deliver pork in, but the conversation seemed to be traveling in such a lonesome direction that he fetched the horse a resounding crack on the rotunda, and the severe jolting over the frozen ground prevented further remarks.

"Oh, there is that lovely and consummate ma!" screamed the returned collegiatess, as they drew up at the door, and presently she was lost in the embrace of a motherly woman in spectacles.

"Well, Maria," said the old man at the supper table, as he nipped a piece of butter off the lump with his own knife, "an' how d'you like your school?"

"Well, there pa, now you're shoo—I mean I consider it far too beyond," replied the daughter. "It is unquenchably ineffecting—I mean grand—so exquisite—so intense. And then the parties, the balls, the rides—oh, the past weeks have been one of sublime harmony."

"I s'pose so—I s'pose so," nervously assented the old man, as he reached for his third cup. "Half full. But how about your books—readin', writin', grammar, rule o' three—how about them?"

"Pa, don't!" exclaimed the daughter, reproachfully! "The rule of three? Grammah? It is French and music and painting and the divine in art that have made my school life the boss—I mean that have rendered it one unbroken flow of rhythmic bliss—incomparably and exquisitely all but."

The grocery man and his wife looked helplessly at each other across the table.

"How do you like the biscuits, Maria?"

"They are too utter for anything," gushed the accomplished young lady, "and this plumb preserve is simply a poem in itself."

The old man rose abruptly from the table, and went out of the room, rubbing his head in a dazed and benumbed manner, and the mass convention was dissolved. That night he and his wife sat alone by the stove until a late hour, and at the breakfast table the next morning he rapped smartly on his plate with the handle of his knife, and remarked:

"Maria—me an' your mother have been talkin' the thing over, an' we've come to the conclusion that this boarding school business is too utterly all but too much nonsense. Me an' her consider that we haven't lived sixty odd consummate years for the purpose of raisin' a curiosity, an' there's going to be a stop put to this unquenchable foolishness. Now, after you've finished eatin' that poem of fried sausage an' that sympathy of twisted doughnut you take an' dust up stairs in less'n two seconds, an' peel off that fancy gown an' put on a caliker, an' then come down an' help your mother wash dishes. I want it distinctly understood that there ain't goin' to be any more rythmic foolishness in this house so long's your superlative pa an' your lovely an' consummate ma's running the ranch. You hear me, Maria?"

Maria was listening.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Heaven trims our lamps while we sleep.

To know how to serve is to have learned one of the lessons of divine wisdom.

The worth of a state, in the long run, is the worth of the individual composing it.

The stars are preachers of beauty, which light the world with their admonishing smile.

The feeble tremble before opinion, the foolish defy it, the wise judge it, the skillful direct it.

Fortunes made in no time are like shirts made in no time; it's ten to one if they hang long together.

We should often be ashamed of our best actions if the world saw the motives which inspire us.

It is ruinous misjudgment too contemptible to be acted upon, that the end of poetry is publication.

Let men laugh when you sacrifice desire to duty, if they will. You have time and eternity to rejoice in.

It is a great misfortune not to have wit enough to speak well, or not enough judgment to keep silent.

Conduct is the great profession. Behavior is the revealing of us. What a man does, tells us what he is.

It always seemed a sort of clever stupidity only to have one sort of talent—almost like a carrier-pigeon.

Women like money for what it will bring them: men honor and worship money for its mere possession.

Good work, like the spring buds, needs only to be seen; no praise of it can approach the privileged vision.

The level we strike in the soul that touches most nearly, is almost sure to be the high water mark of our own.

The proper way to check slander is to despise it; attempt to overtake and refute it, and it will outrun you.

The best portion of a man's life is that devoted to little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and love.

Faith and persistency are life's architects; while doubt and despair bury everything under the ruins of endeavor.

There are in the world circumstances which give us for masters men of whom we would not make our servants.

It is strange that men will talk of miracles, revelations, inspirations, and the like, as things past, while love remains.

We cannot conquer fate and necessity; but we can yield to them in such a manner as to be greater than if we could.

Riches are often thorns that pierce the head with cares in getting them, and the heart with grief in parting with them.

Pain, like a trusty sentinel, guards every avenue leading to the citidel of life, and we are by it forewarned of danger.

The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity; as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame.

To be effectively honest a man must be honest at heart. Honesty that comes through a bell punch is full of holes.

All men must admire a frank and open honesty of purpose, though few are ready to seek to possess it themselves.

A man who cannot command his temper, his attention, and his countenance, should not think of being a man of business.

Let those who would affect singularity with success, first determine to be very virtuous, and they will be sure to be very singular.

There never were in the world two opinions alike, no more than two hairs or two grains. The most universal quality is diversity.

There is nothing that has so much authority, and is entitled to so little, as custom. It rules all the fools with a rod of iron, and threatens even the wise.

There is nothing that strengthens a man's honesty so much as to trust him; suspect him, and you weaken his faith in himself and everybody else.

Dr. Holland observes: "I have never seen a man who was really remarkable for acquiring muscular power, and at the same time remarkable for mental power."

If you hate your enemies, you will contract such a vicious habit of mind as by degrees will break out upon those who are friends, or those who are indifferent to you.

The man who does not make new acquaintances as he advances through life will soon find himself left alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repair.

Don't hurry to meet worry.

The man who minds his own business has a good steady employment.

"I did," was the reply, as that busy officer proceeded with his minutes, "didn't you smoke?"

Gracefully dropping on one knee he busied himself fastening a skate to the pedal phenomenon which she exhibited to his astonished gaze. All at once he stopped in the very middle of his task and appeared to be reflecting very profoundly.

"George, darling," she asked, "what are you thinking about?"

"I'm thinking," he answered abstractedly, which a look that indicated how abstractedly he was affected by the idea that possessed his mind, "I'm thinking, dear, whether, if Noah had had one of your shoes, he would have found it necessary to build the ark."

"What's the matter with you?" asked Pingrey.

"Why you are going away forever, aren't you? You said you would do anything you could to make me happy. Farewell, old boy, farewell."

"How much did he get for it?"

"He received no compensation," remarked the teacher, in tones that made clear her great horror.

"A free show?" inquired the boy, excitedly.

"It was no show at all," replied the teacher, who thought he was skeptical, and continued: "Don't you believe Daniel went among the lions without being hurt?"

"Yes," said the boy, "for I saw that snap worked at a circus, but it was no free graft; the man gets seventy-five dollars a week and expenses!"

The same teacher asked, the smallest boy in the class: "Who was it that said 'It is not good for man to be alone?'"

The lad answered: "Daniel, sir; when he was in the lions' den!"

CONSTITUTIONAL DEMOCRACY.

It has always been a prominent and commendable trait of Democracy to value principles above every other consideration, and in that important particular the Democratic has differed from all political parties that ever existed in this country, and because of such fidelity to principles, it has survived the fiercest of opposition and stands to-day a strong-armed and vigorous organization.

The Constitution of the United States is the grand exemplar of Freedom, both civil and religious, and the creed of Democracy is the wording of that matchless instrument.

The Constitution and Democracy are and ever have been allied for the attainment of a common result—the welfare of all the people and the honor of free representative institutions.

Throughout the entire period of our National Government, all warmly contested public questions, and their name is legion, have found the Democratic an interested party, animated by positive obedience to the Constitution and alike zealous for its allowances and its restrictions.

That is the glorious record of Democracy, affirmed to be practical truth by the political history of nearly one hundred years.

In the early days of the Republic, when Puritanical Federalism sought to shackle the freedom of the people and establish aristocratic systems, the Democratic party boldly battled against it and conquered in the name of the Constitution.

And subsequently, when a similar spirit of intolerance aimed to ostracize citizens because of religious faith, the Democratic party, ever loyal to the Constitution, rallied in its defense and nobly vindicated the right of conscience.

During the long and bitter agitation concerning Slavery, now happily abolished by the Constitution, the Democratic party, regardless of calumny and threats, claimed strict compliance with the letter of organic law and that only as statesman duty.

And so with every other question which has from time to time engaged public attention and evoked political controversy, the finances, taxation, tariffs, currency, corporations, internal improvements, citizenship, the national domain, and rights of States and people, the Democratic party never hesitated to consult the Constitution and never deviated from making it the rule of action.

The safeguard of the Republic is the Constitution, observed and enforced as it reads, not as innovators would stretch it for sinister ends, and we are not passing the confines of fact when declaring, that to the party of Democracy belongs the high credit of guarding it from fatal injury.

Democrats! Cling to the Constitution and confidently follow its pointings, even as the mariner does the compass when howling storms assail or smiling sunbeams gild his billowy pathway.

It is the only chart of national safety.

The alone source of political wisdom and strength.

THE NEW JERSEY FLATS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President to-day transmitted to the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, inclosing the reports of the Government engineers on the examination of the New Jersey flats in New York Harbor, made with the view of determining the feasibility and cost of constructing a ship canal, extending from a point between Ellis Island and the docks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey to a point between Constable Hook and Robbin's Reef. Assistant Engineer Doerflinger, who was specially detailed to make the examination, reports on the main question as follows: "To obtain access to the deep waters of New York Harbor it is the desire of the owners of the land bordering on the flats and of others interested in the utilization of the flats for the purposes of trade and commerce that a ship canal be constructed about 500 feet outside of the pier line as at present established from the docks of the Central Railroad to Craven's Point, the channel to continue in a straight line to the deep water of Kill von Kull. The Riparian Commissioners of the State of New Jersey propose, should the construction of the channel be undertaken by the United States, to establish a new pier line to coincide with the westerly limits of this channel, so that the future pier-heads will thus be accessible from the navigable waters of the Bay. In addition to affording a means of deep-water communication between future piers that may be built on the flats and the navigable waters of the harbor, the channel would somewhat shorten the distance from points on the Hudson river to points on the Kill von Kull, and would afford a more sheltered water-way to the numerous tows now plying between these points, and one more free from strong head currents than the main ship channel." Accompanying Assistant Engineer Doerflinger's report is a detailed estimate of the cost of the proposed channel—21 feet deep at mean low water and 300 feet wide at the bottom—which places the total cost at $7,134,960.

The Census Committee of the House of Representatives have agreed upon a Congressional Apportionment bill which will probably become a law. It makes the total number of Representatives 320, apportioned among the States as follows: Alabama, 8; Arkansas, 5; California, 5; Colorado, 1; Connecticut, 4; Del., 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 10; Ill., 21; Indiana, 13; Iowa, 11; Kansas, 6; Kentucky, 11; Louisiana, 6; Maine, 4; Maryland, 6; Massachusetts, 12; Michigan, 11; Minnesota, 5; Mississippi, 7; Missouri, 14; Nebraska, 3; Nevada, 1; New Hampshire, 2; New Jersey, 7; New York, 34; North Carolina, 9; Ohio, 21; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 29; Rhode Island, 1; South Carolina, 6; Tennessee, 10; Texas, 10; Vermont, 2; Virginia, 10; West Virginia, 4; Wisconsin, 8. The third section provides that the States which have not provided for the reapportionment by the next election, if the new number is in excess of the old, the additional members shall be elected at large, and if the number is less than the present the whole delegation shall be elected at large, without regard to districts.

A Democratic member of Congress from Tennessee brings up the old question of reducing the salaries of our officials in the chief departments of the Government. Under this proposed arrangement the President is to receive $30,000 a year, Congressmen $4,000, heads of departments $7,000, Chief Justice $8,000 and his associates $6,000.

CENTRAL RAILROAD.

LONG BRANCH, Jan. [illegible], 1882.

Joseph S. Harris, the general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, issued a general order to-day by which the line of the road extending from Elizabethport to Bayhead Junction is detached from the Central Division and will be known as the Long Branch Division, with headquarters at Long Branch. James E. Randolph has been appointed superintendent of the Long Branch Division. Mr. Randolph is the eldest son of United States Senator Randolph.

NEW LEGISLATION FOR PLAINFIELD

Senate Bill, No. 48, now before the Legislature at Trenton, is known as applying to Plainfield city, it being the creation and work of the Citizens' Com*mittee of nine, appointed at a public* meeting held last fall in VanDeventer Hall, this city, to draft such a bill providing for a method for issuing tax warrants, and to supply various defects in existing charter provisions. The bill is now in charge of Senator Vail at Trenton, and has been approved section by section by able counsel.

DIASTROUS FIRE IN NEW YORK.

A disastrous fire broke out about 10 o'clock Tuesday morning last, in the large brown-stone building (formerly occupied by the World newspaper) corner Beekman street and Park row, New York. The building extended to Nassau street, and was so constructed as to give the quickest possible sweep to the flames and to obstruct the efforts of occupants to escape. The number of tenants was large. There was a wild rush for safety. Two persons, whose escape was cut off, jumped to the sidewalk and received fatal injuries. Others were suffocated or overtaken by the flames. The loss of life is at least six, and may prove to be larger. The loss of property was nearly a million dollars. Among those who are losers are the New York Observer and several other weekly publications; also S. M. Pettingill & Co. There were some miraculous escapes and heroic acts witnessed. Several of the large buildings close by were damaged. The burned building was owned by Orlando B. Potter.

Some light is thrown upon the origin of the fire by the statement of the engineer employed in the burned structure. He says that a ventilating flue, built in a partition wall, was used for a furnace flue. He also knew that at least one of the tenants had been obliged to move his goods away from the wall on account of the intense heat from this remarkable make-shift. Precisely what immediate connection this ventilating shaft, used as a furnace flue, had with the destruction of the building cannot now be determined. But the chances are that this was the cause of the great disaster, and that the small fire that was discovered and extinguished on Monday broke out afresh and destroyed the building on Tuesday.

Oscar L. Baldwin, the defaulting cashier of the Newark Mechanics' Bank, was on Tuesday last sentenced to five years hard labor in State Prison, on three separate counts, the term to run consecutive, thus making his whole term fifteen years.

The President has signed the Census Deficiency bill. He was governed in so doing by an opinion from Attorney General Brewster. The Attorney General says that he does not desire that the case in question be considered hereafter as a precedent.

There is a proper way of doing all things, but when a Cameronian Speaker of the House of Congress appoints a Committee on Commerce without giving the great commercial State of New York a representative thereon, the term proper fades from view, though not from memory.

The assassin Guiteau, in his trashy talk before the Court, claimed himself to be on trial by the American people. No doubt he was, and about ninety-nine per cent. of them sustain the verdict consigning him to the hangman's rope. The country has had a surfeit of Guiteauism.

The death of Mr. Clarkson N. Potter was a surprise to all his friends. A contemporary says of him: "Mr. Potter was only 58 years old, and seemed in the prime of a busy and useful life and in the perfection of health when stricken down with the fatal disease. He had a remarkably robust constitution. In the coldest weather he never wore an overcoat, and it was his custom to sleep in a fireless room, with a window open, no matter how low the temperature might be. His death was no doubt caused by an imprudent reliance on his strength and endurance."

STATE ITEMS.

Sussex county farmers living along the pipe line say their milk is flavored with kerosene oil. They think there is a leakage from the pipe into the ponds from which the cows drink.

An exchange says that the temperance people are getting a bill ready for introduction in the State Legislature which will prohibit the sale of any but pure liquors, inspectors to be appointed with power to empty into the street all impure liquors, the bill being framed on the milk law.

Drum Major Nathaniel P. Morris, a well-known citizen of Newark, fell on the ice Sunday night near his residence and broke his neck. He served during the war in several New Jersey regiments, was then a keeper in the Essex county jail and janitor of the city armory of Newark. He was 60 years old.

After taking the thirtieth ballot for a policeman, to fill a vacancy, the Phillipsburg Common Council, on Tuesday evening of last week, adjourned until Feb. 6th. Mrs. S. was the mother of the Hon. Josephus Shann, of Middlesex. She died as she lived, a devout Christian.

As a street car from Totowa was running down the steep grade to West street at Paterson, at about 8 o'clock Saturday morning, the driver put on the brakes and instantly the brake chain snapped. The car immediately began to run down the grade at a terrible rate. The driver, John Smith, ran to put on the rear brake, but could not open the door. Then he unhitched his horse and jumped off, falling on his shoulder and receiving severe injuries. The car jumped the track, tore down all the awning posts for a quarter of a mile along Hamburgh avenue, smashed John Moore's milk wagon, pitched him and his sister out, severely injuring them, and finally stopped at the foot of the hill. Three passengers inside were not hurt.

LOCAL ANNEX.

Gypsy Encampment and Sale.

Under the auspices of Grace Church Guild, a gypsy encampment will erect its tents in VanDeventer Hall; and, during the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday, the 15th and 16th inst's, the dusky maidens will foretell bright futures and coming happiness and wealth to those who place themselves within reach of their artifices of flattery and bewildering charms. Besides this attraction, a sale of fancy articles will continue during the two evenings—the whole combining in an entertainment pleasing by its originality and novelty.

The Mahlenberg Hospital.

This building was opened for the reception of patients, Nov. 24th, 1881, and the Board of Governors respectfully appeal to the public for annual subscriptions to enable them to receive and care for the sick now applying for admittance, and to meet current expenses. It will require about $1,500 per annum besides the amounts received from paying patients, to meet the expenses of the Hospital, and for this amount the Board is entirely dependent upon the generosity of our citizens. All desiring to contribute may do so by stating such desire or forwarding the amount, to Mr. Wm. R. Cock, Treasurer, Plainfield, N. J.

A New Year Festival.

The Congregationalists on Thursday evening of last week at their place of worship, held a New Year Festival—with all that the word implies—in lieu of omitted Christmas exercises. The programme followed an interesting address by the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, and consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues etc., ably rendered by the scholars and under the efficient management of Mr. Geo. W. Rockfellow acting as Superintendent in place of Mr. Jno. S. Tilney who was ill. One of the most enjoyable features of the many pleasing ones of the evening, was the solo singing of Mrs. A. C. Baldwin—that lady displaying enviable vocal talent which was favored with flattering appreciation. The affair which closed with the distribution of "sweets to the sweet," was an undoubted success throughout.

Marriage Bells.

Miss Emily Horton, youngest daughter of Stephen O. Horton, Esq., of North Plainfield, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Cory, of Tombstone, Arizona Territory, at the residence of the bride's parents at 5:30 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon last. The wedding was private, none but the immediate relatives of the family being present. The knot was tied by Rev. J. C. Bliss. After receiving the congratulations of those present, and enjoying a marriage feast, the happy couple departed on an evening train for New York city. It is their intention to make an extended trip to Saratoga and points of interest in New York State. Mr. Cory was born in Plainfield, and is now engaged in business at Tombstone where he will probably take the bride he has captured from our midst. We wish "Will" and "Em" a life of uninterrupted happiness in their new relations.

Miss Maggie Warnock was on Wednesday evening last united in the holy bonds of wedlock at the residence of her parents, to Mr. J. Howard Wilson. Mrs. Wilson nee Warnock, is a daughter of the well-known Front street confectioner and baker, Alex. Warnock, Esq. The wedding was private, only the family and immediate relatives being present at the ceremony, a wedding feast following.

Important Postal Order.

Postmasters will not allow non-subscribers to take from the boxes, nor will they hand to them, newspapers addressed to subscribers refolded and returned to them into the general delivery, without verbal or written permit from such subscriber. A violation of this regulation will be considered as sufficient ground for the removal of the offending postmaster.

The above order from the Post Office Department at Washington should have been issued long ago, but for some reason it has been delayed until last week. We hope it will not escape due attention from all concerned. It is the ordinary practice of the mailing clerks employed by newspaper establishments to roll up the papers designed for small towns and send them in only one wrapper. When they reach their destination loungers about country post-offices have been in the habit of opening them and enjoying the contents, often forgetting to replace them when any special interesting news was discovered. We have heard complaints from our subscribers for years on account of this practice. It is gratifying to know that hereafter no such liberties can be permitted.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting at the Council room on Wednesday evening. Present—President Van Winkle and Messrs. Gillies, Flaig and Jones. Absent—Messrs. Depew and Morris. The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting were dispensed with. Secretary Gillies reported that Messrs. Flaig and John B. Brown, he had, the day before, visited the works where was building the new truck for Zephyr H. & L. Co. They found the works in the neighborhood of Greenwood Cemetery but saw no signs of the truck they were looking for. On asking where it was, they were shown an axle, two swivel-trees, a fifth-wheel, one ladder, supports, bars and side pieces for others, tongue, tiller, some springs and the wheels. Mr. Brown thought the axle was made of poor stuff and the boxes of very common material. The wheels were badly put together and the painting reflected no credit on the workman. Should judge the wheels were No. 2 or 3 instead of No. 1. They were told that the apparatus could be put together by the last of the present month or the first of the next. He would advise that Messrs. John B. Brown and Solomon F. Dunn be engaged to inspect the truck when completed and before being painted, and report to the Board their opinion of the work. Mr. Flaig stated that he had asked if Mr. Preston was interested or connected with the firm, and was told that he was not in anyway. Consequently, as the Board had ordered the truck of Mr. Preston, he thought that nothing could be done with the parties to whom he had given the contract, except through him. On motion the Board adjourned to meet again on Wednesday evening of next week at 7:30 o'clock.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 31, 1882.

The Council met in adjourned meeting at 8 o'clock. Present—President Rushmore and Councilmen Depew, Gardner, Ginna, Kaufman, Lindsley, Livingston, Newhall, J. Simpson, R. Simpson and Thompson. Absent—none.

The minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Mr. Livingston presented the following communications:

FROM MR. W. H. SAMPSON.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 30, 1882.
To the License Committee, Common Council, Plainfield, N. J.

GENTLEMEN: As a citizen and taxpayer, I request that you decline all applications for licenses to sell spirituous or fermented liquors, and I herein record my objection to all the applications for such now published by the City Clerk. I take the ground that the use of such liquors as a beverage is hurtful both to the body and soul, and is the cause of most of the poverty and misery in this and other places. As a christian, I cannot withhold my protest against legalizing the traffic in that which will surely injure a brother. How can we pray—"Lead us not into Temptation," if we allow temptation to be put in the way of others?

Yours Respectfully,
WM. H. SAMPSON.

FROM A. VANDERBEEK AND OTHERS.

To the Hon. Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.:

We, the undersigned citizens and property owners on Park avenue and vicinity, do most earnestly protest against granting license for a saloon to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, applied for by James Connealy at No. 32 Park avenue, believing it to be injurious to the good of society and detrimental to the business interests of the locality.

FROM REV. J. C. BLISS AND OTHERS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J. Jan. 25, 1882.
To the License Committee of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN: We the undersigned, for ourselves and other inhabitants of this city, do hereby most respectfully object to the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating beverages to certain parties whose names have been advertised in our weekly papers for the last two weeks as making application for such license; and we object for the following reasons, which we ask you to lay before the Council: 1st, because to license this traffic is to encourage that which puts temptation in the way of our young men and others, and induces our workingmen to spend, for their own selfish gratification, and in "treating" their friends, the hard earned wages which should be used for the better support and comfort of their families, and for laying up something "for a rainy day."

2d. The effect of this traffic is to more or less directly promote idleness, disease, poverty and crime, and so it is hurtful to the general welfare of the community.

3d. It directly promotes the dire evil of drunkenness, which results in personal degradation, in domestic misery and in social and spiritual wretchedness.

4th. To license such a business is virtually to endorse and protect it, and to put under the aegis of the law that which is most fruitful of all that is contrary to law, both moral and civil.

In making these objections, and in thus asking you not to license this traffic, we wish it to be distinctly understood that we have no personal enmity towards those engaged in it, but on the contrary, we will be glad to encourage them in any worthy and useful occupation in which they may engage.

By Mr. Kaufman, the following:

FROM REV. A. H. LEWIS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 23, 1882.
Hon. Mr. Rushmore and Gentlemen of the Common Council, Plainfield, N. J.:

DEAR SIRS: Since our last consultation I have carefully reviewed the situation as to the temperance work in Plainfield. I feel certain that there is an immediate possibility of awakening a public sentiment that will support the City government in assuming a more radical position in the matter of liquor licenses. Latent public opinion waits for a definite signal from the City Fathers. Such opinion always crystalizes rapidly around a given point. It is not easy to create public opinion in the abstract. Give a definite issue, with imperative demands, and it is comparatively easy to induce action. For years the City government has said, "There is no public opinion to sustain a no-license policy." Latent public opinion has answered, "Nothing can be done until the powers that be, lead with a policy we can support." Thus the government and the people have in some sense antagonized each other, and rum has flourished. I grant that law is inoperative in the absence of public opinion to back it. But it is equally true that the dead-lock which often occurs between an indolent public opinion and bad legislation cannot be broken without a bold movement and an immediate issue. We who are charged with creating public opinion want such an issue now. It is in the power of the Council to make such an issue now. Something must be ventured on faith in men. Let the Council express a justifiable faith in temperance sentiment of Plainfield by a bold stroke, and I feel confident that the people will not betray that faith. I know that you and your associates shrink from doing officially what your better manhood condemns, voting for license. From one stand point it may seem to be an official necessity. But since the man is always above the "Councilman," and since the higher interests of the City are all injured by its official complicity with the rum traffic through the granting of licenses, I feel assured that your fellow citizens of the better class would stand by you, were you to refuse to grant any license this year. If it be answered that liquor would still be sold, I reply it would be without the sanction and protection and stimulation of legal authority. It is an acknowledged fact, that in the past the licenses are violated with impunity. The legalized shops sell to minors and drunkards, and unlicensed shops sell continually, under the present attempt to regulate. So that in fact the present law protects the legalized houses and the business regulates itself. This state of things could not easily be made worse. If then the present Council would refuse all applicants and repeal all its ordinances under which they have been granted, thus doing away with the revenue question, which is at once a power in the hands of the liquor interests, and a bribe to stingy souled taxpayers, your hands would be officially clean. If the community did not then come to your support it would deserve the suffering which would at last teach it wisdom and bravery.

On the other hand if the present Council shall license according to former example it will be very difficult to create a vigorous public sentiment without antagonizing the people and the Council, and continuing the old game of "Cross purposes." The laws of evidence as now applied are largely in favor of the whisky interest; and the possibility of making any practical headway by detecting violations of the permissive code is very slight, too slight to awaken enthusiasm or enliven the indifferent.

If legislation at Trenton does not soon relieve the city from its embarrassing limitations with reference to the money needed for expenses, and the Council will ask the people for the money which might otherwise be gained by license, I pledge you that the Temperance Alliance will leave no stone unturned to gain that end. If money to execute laws is needed, I believe it can be raised. I do not plead for rashness, but for that amount of faith in the power of Plainfield to cleanse itself, which will make friends for the cause of reform through the appeal which an immediate and just issue always makes.

Pardon me if I seem over earnest, but I am sure that the Council can do good to help or hinder the public opinion which it desires for its support in right doing, by its course in the immediate future.

If my absence from home during this week should prevent any further consultation before the matter comes up in the Council for final decision, please present this to the Council in my behalf.

Yours truly,
A. H. LEWIS,
Pres't. Plainfield Temp. Alliance.

By the Clerk the following:

FROM THE TEMPERANCE UNION.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 30, 1882.
O. B. LEONARD,
Clerk of the Common Council,
Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Plainfield Temperance Union, held on the evening of January 28, 1882, the following preamble and resolution were adopted and the undersigned was instructed to forward the same to you for presentation to the Council at its meeting this evening.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

WHEREAS, It has been currently reported that the Executive Committee of the Temperance Union at one of its recent sessions favored the granting of liquor licenses for the present year, which report is not a correct statement of the case, therefore,

Resolved, That it is the unanimous opinion of the Executive Committee that the Common Council ought to refuse all applications for license to sell liquor in the City of Plainfield.

In behalf of the Executive Committee.
A. H. LEWIS,
President Plainfield Temperance Union.

On motion of Mr. Livingston all of the above were received and laid on the table.

By Mr. Kaufman, petitions from Wm. M. Jennings for permission to erect a frame shed on his premises; and from Mrs. M. J. Thickston for permission to tear down the carpenter shop and put up another frame building on the same lot on Central avenue. Ref'd to Lamps Com.

By Mr. J. Simpson, a petition from Mr. H. Strauss for permission to move the shop on his premises at No. 14 E. Second street, by turning it around to a different position. Ref'd to Lamps Com., with power.

By the same, the claim of Street Com'r. Wm. Hand for repairs done on the streets during the month of January, $7.50. Ref'd.

By Mr. Newhall, the following claims for rent of rooms, &c to City paupers: Lyon & Vail, $20; Carl Peterson, $2; Chris Thorp, 6; P. Langenbahn, 6; Spencer Conway, 5; and Mrs. A. Flynn, 5; Ref'd.

By Mr. Gardner, the salary bills of City Judge Runyon, $75; and St. Com'r. W. Hand, 50; also claim of Jas. O'Neil as inspecter of election, 10. Ref'd.

By Mr. J. Simpson, January bill of Plainfield Gas Light Co., $242.60. Ref'd.

Mr. Livingston, Chairman of the special committee appointed to confer with the Union Co., Board of Freeholders, reported as a result of such meeting, the basis of compromise agreed upon.

Report accepted.

Mr. Ginna, from the Laws Com., returned the bond of Amos Moffett as Constable, reporting it correct and approved. On motion accepted and placed on file.

Mr. Livingston, from the License Com., reported that the applicants for hotel and saloon licenses had conformed with all the requirements of the Charter governing the matter, and recommended that the applications be granted. This report Mr. Livingston stated was only signed by two of the Committee. Mr. Newhall declined to approve of the recommendation.

Mr. Depew moved that the report be accepted and the recommendation adopted.

Carried by the following vote:

Affirmative:—President Rushmore and Messrs. Depew, Gardner, Livingston, J. Simpson, R. Simpson and Thompson.

Negative—Messrs. Ginna, Kaufman, Lindsley and Newhall.

In answer to a question of the President, Mr. Thompson stated that he desired that the Council should vote on each application, seperately.

Mr. Depew thereupon requested the Clerk to read the motion just carried. As he understood the effect of adopting the recommendation of the Committee, it was to grant the applications as a whole.

Mr. Livingston also considered that by the vote just recorded the matter was settled and the licenses granted.

The president, however, ruled that each must be taken up seperately, if so desired, and voted upon.

Licenses to keep hotels and sell spirituous and fermented liquors, were then granted to Messrs. E. P. Thorn, Joseph B. Miller and W. Heidelolf by the following vote:

Affirmative—President Rushmore and Messrs. Depew, Gardner, Livingston, R. Simpson, J. Simpson and Thompson.

Negative—Messrs. Ginna, Kaufman, Lindsley and Newhall.

Saloon licenses were granted Messrs. Wm. Sullivan, J. Connealy, P. Day, F. Caspar, C. Zimmer, C. Smith, J. Rafferty and J. H. Force, by the same vote excepting that Mr. Thompson changed his vote to the negative on the above.

When the application of Mr. P. Day was brought up, Mr. Thompson stated that he had been told by the petitioner's neighbors that he kept his bar open and sold liquor on Sunday.

Mr. Livingston called the speaker's attention to the fact that if any holder of a license violated the provisions of the ordinances governing the same, he would forfeit it.

Mr. Lindsley thought that the gentlemen voting to give a monopoly of the terrible traffic to certain men, should be careful in granting licenses to those knowingly violating the terms of such.

Mr. Livingston replied that there was no authoritative knowledge of that sort. He was informed by the Chief of Police that every holder of a license kept a regular and orderly house.

When the last application was brought up, President Rushmore took the opportunity of explaining his position and vote on the matter. He said that it was with a great deal of chagrin and mortification that he cast his vote for the granting of a liquor license to any one. He had had much experience as to the evil effects of the traffic and had once felt that he could never vote to license the sale of liquor. But having conscientiously thought the subject over and read of the result of the many policies relating to the subject adopted in other places, he came to the conclusion that to endeavor to carry out the principles of prohibition was impossible without a strong public sentiment of the majority, in the same direction, to support such a movement. To try such a scheme in Plainfield at present was to invite failure. He would, however, insist that all parties receiving licenses should be held strictly within the boundaries of the laws governing their privileges.

Mr. Livingston stated that he had neglected to say, that he had been instructed to take the names of Messrs. John Chandler, Wm. Pearson and A. M. France from those who had signed certain petitions. He had done so and there still remained a sufficient number of signers to fulfil the requirements.

Mr. Kaufman, from Printing Com., reported as correct the claims of W. L. Force & Bro., $160.35, and Runyon & Leonard, 62.75. Ref'd. to Aud. Com.

Mr. Lindsley, from Salaries Com., reported as correct the claims of W. W. Coriell, $10, and J. VanWinkle, 75. Ref'd. to Aud. Com.

Mr. Ginna presented ordinances for consideration, amending and revising the following ordinances now in force:

"Providing for the erection of barriers to prevent accidents."

"Relating to the duties of the Street Commissioner."

"To create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a police force."

Read by the Clerk the first time.

Moved by Mr. Ginna, seconded by Mr. Newhall, that they be read the second time, section by section. Carried.

Messrs. Depew and Lindsley objected to any sudden approval of important ordinances that were fresh to their ears, without opportunity for examination.

Motion reconsidered and a motion to dispense, at that time, with a second reading, carried. The ordinances were then referred to the Laws Com.

Mr. Lindsley called from the table the Ordinance to license and regulate pedlars, hackmen &c., and moved its reference to the Com. on Laws and Ord's. Carried.

Mr. Livingston called from the table the report of the Special Committee appointed to confer with the Board of Freeholders, and offered in connection a resolution to the effect that the City agree to pay the County Collector the entire amount of deficiency in the State and County quota of 1880 (about $2,800) and 30 per cent of the amount still due for 1881, with interest added. The Board of Freeholders thereupon to agree to stay further proceedings in the matter for at least one term of Court, and each side to pay its share of the costs already incurred. The City also to assume the responsibility of the State and County taxes as under the law of 1866.

Mr. Depew thought that before the Council commit itself to any final line of policy in the matter, it should receive the opinion of its Counsel.

After divers other motions, it was moved by Mr. Kaufman, seconded by Mr. Depew, that the report and resolution be referred to the Com. on Laws for it to report thereon at the next meeting, after consultation with the Corporation Counsel.

Mr. R. Simpson moved as an amendment, seconded by Mr. Ginna, that they be referred to the Committee on Laws "with power."

Messrs. Kaufman, Newhall and Depew strongly opposed the passage of such an amendment. They thought that the privilege of the members of the Council outside of the Committee on Laws, to vote upon the settlement of so important a question, should not be destroyed. The power to adopt and carry out the line of policy that the resolution would commit the Council to, should not be vested in the hands of three men.

Messrs. Thompson and Depew urged the Council to refer the resolution only until the views of the Corporation Counsel upon its legality of its many provisions, could be received. Mr. Thompson thought that such a course should be pursued if for no other reason than out of courtesy to the Attorney of the Council. Mr. Depew felt that such a course was the duty of the Council, and stated he would be compelled to vote against the reference of the resolution to a Committee with power, although he might be ever so much in favor of its provisions.

Mr. Lindsley said that the special committee of which he was a member had been met by the Board of Freeholders with every courtesy and like gentlemen. The Board had expressed itself as ready to compromise in an equitable way, and do all in its power to stop the vexed agitation upon the matter that had arisen. Therefore, as, although the County authorities had the law on their side, yet they were so willing to make concessions so desirable for the city's best interests, and have acted towards the Council like friends, it should take prompt action in meeting them as such.

Mr. Kaufman thought there were two points to be considered: whether the Council should acknowledge the indebtedness and finally bind the citizens to the payment of the claims, or whether the legal status of the matter should be obtained before any action. He would first desire to understand if the payment of the claim was obligatory.

Mr. Ginna agreed with Mr. Lindsley as to the power of the Board, the legality of its claims and its willingness to concede certain privileges for the relief of the city. He advocated an acknowledgement of the indebtedness.

Mr. R. Simpson's amendment, and subsequently the original motion as amended, was carried by the following vote.

Affirmative—President Rushmore and Messrs. Gardner, Ginna, Lindsley, Livingston, J. Simpson and R. Simpson.

Negative—Messrs. Depew, Kaufman, Newhall and Thompson.

Mr. Depew moved the adoption of a resolution to the effect that ex-Collector Clark be requested to make a return of the warrant books of delinquent taxes &c. to the Justice of the Peace who had issued the same. Carried, all aye.

Also, by the same, that Justice of the Peace, J. C. Nodyne be directed, upon the receipt of the warrant books of the ex-Collector, to issue to Collector John B. Brown warrants for the collection of present, past and future taxes. Carried, all aye.

Mr. Kaufman called from the table, where they had been placed by the late Council, the claims of H. H. Baker and Plainfield Gas Light Co., which were, on motion, referred to the proper Com's.

Mr. Ginna moved the adoption of the following:

Whereas, A large percentage of our State, County and City taxes remain unpaid; and that opportunity may be given delinquents to pay the same before legal proceedings are taken for their collection, be it

Resolved, That the Collector be, and hereby is, directed to notify delinquent taxpayers, by notice published in the official papers, and also mailed to each party, that upon all taxes paid prior to March 1, 1882, only interest at the rate of 7 per cent and accumulated costs will be exacted; and for all taxes remaining unpaid March 1, 1882, he shall issue his warrants, adding all legal penalties, and vigorously prosecute collection of same.

Adopted, all aye.
The Council then adjourned.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

HOLIDAY, two weeks from Wednesday next.

LOTS of wicked people went sleighing on Sunday.

AFTER all, our ice merchants have been able to harvest quite a crop.

THE last month of Winter—or, at least, that which they call Winter.

ASH Wednesday and Washington's Birthday fall, this year, on the same date.

Don't fail to hear Churchill, the elocutionist, at the M. E. church, this evening.

AND now they say that the present mild winter has destroyed the peach crop.

NEXT Sunday is Septuagesima Sunday and three weeks from that is the first Sunday in Lent.

AN afternoon reception was held at her residence by Mrs. George A. Chapman, on Tuesday.

CLEAN your sidewalks; or if you're too mean to do that, at least sprinkle a few ashes on the slippery surface.

YOUNG man! Valentine Day approacheth and the eyes of your lady friends are upon you. Society expects every man to do his duty.

PLAINFIELD has any quantity of glorious sleighing, pretty girls and a full moon. No wonder our young "bloods" are happy.

Prof. J. W. Churchill, one of America's greatest elocutionists, will carry out a most interesting programme at the M. E. church this evening.

ATTENTION is directed to the new advertisement of Bachman & Co. in this issue. Ladies desiring a neat fitting corset should call a Bachman's.

"HAZEL KIRKE," with the great original New York Madison Square Theatre cast, is promised at Van Deventer Hall on some evening in the early part of March.

THE Bric-a-Brac Social Club held a whist-party and an informal dance at the residence of Miss Eleanor Demarest, on Central avenue, during Thursday evening of last week.

SUNDAY-services are held regularly at the Netherwood Union Chapel at 11 o'clock A. M., and Sunday-school exercises at 2:30 P. M., of which Mr. Belknap is the Superintendent.

IN our report of the proceedings of the Common Council at its adjourned meeting of Monday evening, will be found in full the protests against the granting of licenses to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, sent in to that body.

THE granting of eleven licenses, in one evening, to sell liquor—in spite of the many protests of our best citizens and the exertions of the Temperance Alliance—is quite an astonishing piece of work for a body of Councilmen.

THE fourth of the Y. M. C. A.'s descriptive lectures will be given on Tuesday evening, the 28th inst., by the Rev. T. H. Stockton. The subject will be "Three Months in the British Islands," and the place will be announced later.

AGNES ALCORN, the enterprising Elizabeth woman who placed rat poison in her husband's food from the effects of which he died, was sentenced to State Prison for three years, by Judge Van Syckel, on Monday.

AT the regular monthly meeting of the Common Council on Monday evening next, the Mayor will hand in his nominations for the several city offices in his gift. The past satisfactory service of the present incumbents, insure their reappointment.

ELSEWHERE will be found a more extended notice of a lecture to be given in the Netherwood Chapel by the Hon. Ephraim Muggins (Mr. Barrett) the æsthetic humorist of New York. This gentleman will probably repeat the lecture in this city, in a few weeks.

COLLECTOR Brown has had printed a form that comprises a very comprehensive statement in detail of the moneys received from the various sources, and by means of which he can render a monthly account to the Council that will be intelligible and complete.

AT his stables in New Brunswick, N. J., Mr. John W. Morris is offering for sale or exchange, twenty extra good mules broken or unbroken, and sixteen fine horses. This stock will remain until the 12th inst. Old mules are wanted in exchange.

THE Netherwood Hotel has once again changed hands, but the identity of the purchaser and present owner we have been unable to establish. Let us trust that its management during the coming season will again devolve on so efficient a superintendent as was Mr. Charles King.

THE gas burned poorly throughout the city, on Monday evening. Especially was this noticeable in the Council room, and the Committee on Lamps postponed its report on the proposition of the Plainfield Gas Light Co., to illuminate the city, until a more auspicious time.

As we go to press, the members of Plainfield Eng. Co., No. 2, are holding a Ball in St. Mary's Hall, for the benefit of an exempt member, Mr. John Shay, who lies seriously ill and greatly in need of financial assistance. We are compelled to postpone until our next issue an account of what is assured of being a very successful affair.

As many of us subscribed towards a fund for the purchasing of the powder necessary for a Fourth of July salute, and as owing to the assassination of President Garfield the celebration intended was postponed, why not have the powder burnt and the report sounded upon the occasion of Guiteau's sentence of death being pronounced.

FOREMAN Doane is slowly but surely recovering from the terrible injuries received by him at the late Fourth street fire. Although the fractured jaw is so swollen that it is impossible to hold it in place by the appliance prepared, yet the surgeon in charge is confident that the broken parts are knitting properly of their own accord.

ON Thursday evening the 16th inst City Physician Henry H. Lowrie, M. D., will deliver the second of the Health Talks under the management of the Y. M. C. A., the subject of which is not yet announced. These "talks" are given in the Association's Hall in the Chautauqua Building, and are exclusively for young men who may find much profit by their attendance.

IN a case between landlord and tenant, that was tried before Justice Clark and a jury last Saturday, Mr. Craig A. Marsh won another victory against surroundings and circumstances that were decidedly adverse. The opposing counsel was Mr. C. D. Ward of Rahway, who was unable to establish the privileges he claimed for his client, the landlord, to the satisfaction of the jury.

AN "incipient conflagration" occurred in the cigar store of Mr. C. M. Fina, on Park avenue, on Monday morning. From some cause a metal lamp-lighter became ignited and breaking through the glass on which it was standing fell amid the articles inside of the show case and set the same on fire. A supply of water, thrown where it would do the most good, extinguished the flames before much damage resulted.

THOSE who have been so fortunate as to hear that admired elocutionist, Prof. Churchill, will all attend his readings, under the auspices of the Delibel Society, in the M. E. Church, this evening. We take this last opportunity of urging upon others the wisdom of securing the chance of hearing one of the most talented in his profession.

THE final lecture of the three which Dr. Frank DeHass has been delivering in the Central Avenue Church, was given at that place on Tuesday evening. In spite of the terrible weather, quite a large attendance assembled and was well repaid. The Course throughout has been an unexampled success, due entirely to the wonderful talents of the lecturer.

THE invitations for the Second Annual Masquerade of the Plainfield Saengerbund will shortly be issued, and already many of the members' friends are praying that they will not be forgotten. As usual the affair—which will take place on the night of Tuesday, the 21st inst.—will be very select and no one admitted unless introduced by a member. Dancing without a mask will not be allowed before 12 o'clock.

THE members of Warren Hose Co. No. 3, are making arrangements for their Ball of the 16th inst., at St. Mary's Hall. The occasion is to be unusually enjoyable and a "fire-set" is promised that will eclipse all previous attempts in that direction. Voss' celebrated band of Newark will furnish the music. Tickets can be purchased of members of the company or of the following Committee of Arrangements: Messrs. G. R. Schlereth, J. Loughlin, G. Whitely, P. Maig and M. T. Flynn.

Unlicensed Liquor Selling.

Mr. James Muldowney who has in the past few years been convicted many times of selling liquor without a license, was recently arrested by Chief Dodd upon the same charge. The case came up before City Judge Runyon on Thursday morning, and the Court room was crowded with spectators, more or less interested. Corporation Counsel Kimball had charge of the prosecution, which opened ably and strongly. Mr. Craig A. Marsh appeared in defence of the accused. The jury sworn consisted of Mr. Daniel J. Marshall, A. B. Dunlap, Geo. Belcher, Thos. Clarkson, Henry S. Barnes, Geo. M. Angleman, J. B. Jenkins, Peter Dock, J. Louis Laing, Cory Pyatt, James House and Evan Jones. The sale of liquor by the defendant, was sworn to by a witness who had himself drank and paid the defendant for the same in his house. There was also brought out the fact of a delivery of barrels of ale upon several occasions at the defendant's house, by the testimony of the truckman. At noon the prosecution rested its case and the Court adjourned until 1:30. The defence is being continued this afternoon as we go to press, with seeming confidence of a disagreement of the jury, if not acquittal.

A Bad Break.

During the severe storm of Tuesday morning, a firm of contractors of Orange, N. J., sent a number of men with their trucks to this city, for the purpose of carting away the old steam engine at the "Plainfield Gold Mines," which they had purchased. On arriving in this city, however, it was agreed that to attempt bringing the heavy machinery from the valley in such a storm, would meet with failure, and a stop at the Laing's Hotel was made. In getting off his truck one of the men slipped and fell, and in spite of his sturdy frame and seeming strength was found to have so severely hurt himself that it was necessary to carry him into the adjacent bar-room. Dr. Monroe B. Long was summoned, and upon arriving and making and examination, discovered that the left leg was broken short off. Both bones were completely snapped in two, and as bad a state of physical disability as possible, was the result. Dr. Long set the limb in temporary splints and bound it together firmly, so that the unfortunate man might return to his home without danger of additional trouble before more special treatment was secured. The victim was thereby made so comfortable that his friends were able to transport him to Orange soon after the accident.

A Rare Treat.

The Ladies Benevolent Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, have arranged to place before the public on Saturday evening the 4th inst, one of the most interesting, original and enjoyable entertainments of music and sketch ever given in this city. It will take place in the Seventh-Day Church on Central avenue, and the artists of the occasion are to be that reigning novelty the celebrated famous and successful McGibeny Family, now on its Seventh Annual Tour through the country. Mr. and Mrs. McGibeny, aged respectively 45 and 37 years, are the parents of twelve children, eleven of whom are living and eight of whom are possessors of such wonderful natural musical ability that they are able to appear on the stage in a concert which is a novelty and a thoroughly pleasing one. Father and mother are highly educated christian people, and the children appear like little gentlemen and ladies, cultured and well-mannered, as only children can be who have had enough contact with the world to become familiar with its usages.

The programme will include brilliant music and laughable sketches, and a full band, full chorus and full orchestra, composed of the members of the family will take part. Tickets are placed at 50 cts. each, for adults; children under twelve years of age, half price. Another such opportunity may never again be given, and we would urge all to attend.

Netherwood Union Chapel.

An entertainment will be given in the Chapel, under the auspices of the Young Peoples' Association, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 7th 1882, at 8 o'clock, on which occasion the Hon. Ephraim Muggins, the Æsthetic Humorist, of New York, will deliver an address on the "Hibernian Question," embellished with lightning slashes, drawn in presence of the audience and enlivened by music, and original and selected songs, assisted by Wm. A. Beadle, of Brooklyn, organist.

PROGRAMME.

PART I.

1. Opening Overture, (weather permitting) W. A. Beadle.

2. Lecture. Showing how, by a skillful engineering feat, it is proposed to sever Ireland from its foundations, and float it over, mainly by its own inherent levity to "Americky," the "Home of the land, and brave of the Free."

3. Appropriate music. W. A. Beadle.

Intermission—during which the ladies may rave about Oscar Wilde, and Æstheticism; and the gentlemen may discuss the probable action of the Plainfield Common Council, on the License question, N. B.—As the Hotel Netherwood is closed for the season, no one need go out during intermission to procure a "sandwich."

PART II.

1. More music, W. A. Beadle.

2. Another installment of lecture,—giving an account of interviews with the High Functionaries of Washington, of the application for funds to carry out the enterprise—how the applicant gets abused and kicked out, as usual in such meritorious cases, and returns home, "wasted," "busted," and "disgusted."

3. Music, (Home Sweet Home.) W. A. Beadle.

Admission, 25 cents. Front seats reserved for the blind and deaf. Trains leave Plainfield for Netherwood, at 7 p. m. Return leave at 10:45. No extra charge for excursion tickets.

Personals.

Mr. Wm. S. Potter, of Somerville, has been appointed Clerk to the Municipal Corporation Committee of the House of Assembly.

Mr. Daniel Thickstun, of this city, has recently returned from a three week's trip through Florida. He expresses himself as delighted with the country.

A copy of Gov. Ludlow's Annual Message in pamphlet form, has been received, for which thanks are returned.

WE received a call on Tuesday from Mr. Walter W. Wilson, representing the Home News of New Brunswick, and were glad to hear his glowing accounts of the prosperity of that journal.

IT is with regret that we announce that Mr. J. Smith Garretson, well known in this city by a host of friends, lies seriously ill at his home. We tender sincere wishes for his speedy recovery and future health.

Chess by Telegraph.

Messrs. Collier, Suydam and Jackson of the Plainfield Chess Club, on Wednesday evening started to play a match game by telegraph with opponents at Fanwood. Operator Schermerhorn handled the ticker at this end of the wire, and during the first ten moves (which occupied two hours and a half) the game gave every appearance of its being an unusually strong one on both sides. The loss of a knight, taken by the Plainfielders as their tenth move, so weakened the Fanwooders, however, that they began to dispute as to the position of the pieces and would listen to no reasonable method of settling the difficulty. In consequence of which our home players courteously wished their opponents "good-knight" and retired.

The Death Roll.

From the pulpits of our churches, on Sunday morning last, was announced the death, which had occurred during the services, of Miss Carrie M. Rhees of Central avenue. The deceased's many lovely qualities of character and disposition, had drawn around her during life a host of sincere friends and admiring acquaintances, all of whom mourned her loss. The funeral services were held at the residence of her grandfather, Wm. M. McCutchen, Esq., on Tuesday afternoon. The death was a sudden one from hasty consumption, and unexpected by many to whom the shock was all the more severe.

On Tuesday morning, after a short illness, the wife of Mr. David M. Demarest died at her residence at the corner of Crescent avenue and Seventh street. The funeral took place on Thursday at 2:30 p. m., and the remains are to be taken to Passaic for interment, to-day.

Sunday Laws.

We have received from the American Sabbath Tract Society of Alfred Centre, N. Y., a copy of an interesting and instructive lecture on the "Sunday Laws, Past and Present," delivered in the Hall of Philosophy at Chautauqua, August 8, 1881, by the Rev. A. H. Lewis, A. M., Prof. of Church History in the Theological Department of Alfred University, and pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city. The lecture is another evidence of the fact that articles of great value are often done up in small parcels. Although dealing with a subject that it seems should demand a wide section of space to spread itself over, and thousands of words to form the necessary sentences to at all fully comprehend the theme—yet the pamphlet before us treats of the matter exhaustively and thoroughly, and withal in a most intelligible manner that reflects great credit on the author's complete and careful study, as well as his talents of composition and eloquence.

An Animal Anthropophagite.

Mr. James Moore a coachman in the employ of Mr. A. D. Shepherd of Scotch Plains, on Thursday evening of last week had his nose bitten off by one of his employer's horses. The animal had not previously been considered a vicious one, although somewhat given to laying its ears back and exhibiting other signs of spitefulness. It is believed by some that during Moore's recent absence from attendance on the horse, others may have habitually teased it to the extent of arousing the equine devil lying dormant heretofore. The horse had always seemed to be especially friendly towards Moore, whom he would follow around like a faithful dog, and the attack was unusually unexpected in consequence. The unfortunate man had entered the stall and after setting a pail of water before the animal was raising his head, when suddenly the ears were thrown back and a savage nip was made at the man's face. As the sharp teeth and strong jaws of the horse came together, the nose of Moore was between them and the entire end taken off as clean as though severed with a razor. The victim bled terribly but was able to reach the office of Dr. E. W. South of this city, where he received the medical and surgical treatment necessary. Under that doctor's care he is rapidly recovering from the effects of the casualty, and will probably be only slightly scarred as a result.

Among The Mountains.

Quite a large gathering of the City's best people, assembled in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed Church on Thursday evening of last week, to hear Mayor Randolph's personal experience and observations "Among the Mountains"—the entertainment being the third of the Y. M. C. A's course of free lectures by local speakers. The talk was an unprepared one that held the interest, favored the spirit of romance, appealed to the sympathy, amused the fancy and excited the poetical nature and finer feelings of all present. After a brief flight amidst the Catskill and White Mountains, the Rockies and Sierras, and a glance at the majestic Mount Blanc, the hills of the Rhine and other European sections, the lecturer plunged into the heart of the Adirondack range. Many Summer sojourns in that region had nurtured an assortment of reminiscences, anecdotes, experiences and witnessed scenes that offered a rich store-house of interesting lore from which to select material for the evening's talk, and an hour and a half quickly passed away for the attentive and interested listener. Few others that have lectured in this city, can boast of less moments of dulness during their respective discourses. From the most beautiful and romantic flights of original poetry, the speaker would pass to some humorous anecdote repeated in the uncouth dialect of the guide who related it, and then again to a thrilling description of nature's beauty and magnificence. The lecture closed with an ode to one of the wondrous and awe-inspiring mountain peaks of the section described—probably as elegant a composition as is numbered among the unpublished verses of the World's unknown poets.

Hall Dedication.

Last Friday evening the new Hall of Perseverance Lodge No. 74, K. of P., of this city, was "dedicated." This Hall is situated in White and Stelle's building, corner of Front street and Park avenue, and fronts on Front street. In addition to the Hall proper, which runs the entire depth of the building, there are two other rooms adjoining, one of which serves as an ante room and the other as a reception room, the entire suite being handsomely fitted up with every necessary convenience, and the taste displayed in the matter of kalsomining, painting, graining and decorating by various members of the lodge—being largely a voluntary action on their part—must be regarded as prominent features of the new undertaking. The occupation of a larger and more convenient Hall is what the members of this Lodge had long wished for, but for months and years scarcely hoped for as being hardly within the range of probability or possibility, but the rapid strides made of late in the accession of "good working material" and a healthy financial standing, gave them hope, and with hope, faith and a general desire to "push things" has resulted finally in placing in their hands their greatly desired object.

Invitations had been sent to Somerset Lodge of Somerville, Olive Branch Lodge of Bound Brook, and Good Will Lodge of Scotch Plains, and also to the officers of the Grand Lodge of the State, to be present at the dedication, and they all responded, and as a consequence the Hall was filled with as happy a company of knights as ever met together. The regular order of business was performed in an expeditious manner in order to give an opportunity for the social phase of the occasion. The exercises commenced at eight o'clock and half an hour later the Grand officers of the State were announced and admitted in due form while the "Grand March" was being played on the organ by the organist of the Lodge, Bro. P. Symons. They were assigned to their seats of honor in the Lodge and were soon called upon for remarks. The first on the list being the Grand Keeper of Records and Seals, Bro. Eugene Lorton, who responded, by welcoming on behalf of his Lodge, (74) all the visiting brethren. He then gave a brief history of the Lodge, its institution in '73 under unfavorable circumstances, and handicapped as it were, almost at the very beginning by members who seemed to take little or no interest in the Lodge or Order. It struggled on in the face of many difficulties and at times seemed as if destined to be short-lived. Four years ago there were but seventeen members in the Lodge and everything seemed dark and discouraging, but the faithful few held on, and soon a turn came in the tide of its affairs, and now we have more than trebled our number and everything is bright and encouraging. Bro. Lorton's very interesting and graphic account of the "ups and downs" through which his Lodge had passed, was listened to with wrapt attention by all present, and all were evidently encouraged by what he said with reference to his own Lodge as well as his remarks of the most encouraging nature concerning the order throughout the State.

Bro. Lorton was followed by Bro. Rutan, Grand Chancellor Commander, who delivered a few well-timed remarks, expressing his great pleasure at meeting with the Lodge under such favorable circumstances, and encouraged them to go on in the grand work of cultivating the great principles of the Order. His official connection in the order gave him an opportunity of seeing what is being done in the Order throughout the State, and the news from all the Lodges were cheering and encouraging in the highest degree. After giving all present some good sound advice. Bro. John Haskard favored the brethren with a beautiful solo, when Supreme Grand Representative Ward—Newark's worthy post-master—was introduced. As he arose his manly form, dignified bearing, and empty sleeve commanded the most respectful attention from every brother present. He first made some biting, sarcastic remarks or jokes at the expense of some of his associates who sat behind him, in reference to his experiences of travel from Newark to Plainfield, the same being heartily relished by all present. He then spoke of the great importance of unity among men engaged in any good work, and urged the brethren present to cultivate the three great principles of the Order, in order to become useful in the Order as well as out of the Order.

At this juncture the proceedings were ruthlessly interrupted by some one who clamored for admission. It was some German, with an unpronounceable name who represented himself as hailing from Schiller Lodge. He could not give the pass, and it was some time before it was finally decided to admit him. The door was opened and the man walked in, a sight to behold. The Grand officers looked at one another in blank astonishment at such an intrusion. He had long grey hair, wore a cap and sported a long claw-hammer coat and a very long waist-coat with brass buttons, and "pants" several sizes too short for him; he also wore a huge pair of wooden shoes or "gun boats," evidently built for some Chicago girl, and after making out to salute the presiding officer, was asked by the latter what he wanted in the Lodge. He looked around with a kind of an air of disappointment and finally blurted out with—"I oxbected dot I vould been da ·hbecker here by to-nighdt." Upon being informed that speakers had already been secured, he turned to go out, but being given to understand that if he had any statement to make he was at liberty to do so, he turned around and harangued the assembly in the dutchest kind of English, starting off with an attempt at a mathematical demonstration, (very much complicated) to the effect that it was finally settled that Adam ate 27 apples and then spoke of his own popularity as a public speaker in Boston and other villages. He then recited a Dutch poem and subsided. He proved to be Past Chancellor Carney of "74." After an address by Past Grand Chancellor Long, which was full of interest and instruction, the assembly adjourned to the old Lodge room, where a bountiful collation awaited the brethren, the same being served up by a number of ladies—wives and relatives of some of the members of "74"—and after an invocation by Grand Rep. Ward, ample justice was done in the way of getting away with the good things provided, after which the Grand officers were escorted to the depot by the rest of the brethren, who afterward returned to the Lodge room, and the ladies being invited into the same, pronounced it just too elegant for anything. Singing, promenading and speech-making was indulged in until the wee sma' hours, when everybody went home with the pleasantest recollections of the evening's enjoyment.

It is proposed to have a grand social entertainment in three or four weeks for the benefit of the wives and lady friends of the brethren of "74."

One Year Ago.

The Morris vs. Finch contest, for Mr. Tweedy's vacant seat in the Council, was occupying the attention of those gentlemen at least. Mr. Isaac Oldman, in the employ of Messrs. A. D. Cook & Bro., was buried beneath a mass of coal and so terribly bruised as to necessitate the amputation of his arm. Thermometer on February 2d, seven degrees below zero; and the sixth week of uninterrupted sleighing.

PERSEVERANCE Lodge No. 74, K. of P., will initiate eight or ten candidates into the mysteries of the Order to-night.

Y. M. C. A.—Postponement.

Mr. Benj. F. Taylor, of Chicago, who has been advertised to lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Course Feb. 9, is quite ill and has been so for some time. The committee is obliged to announce, therefore, that the lecture's postponed.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

John Hetfield, one of our old residents, still continues seriously ill from pneumonia.

The white mule "Jennie," which use to be frequently seen on Broad street attached to a coal wagon, is dead. A great curiosi[illegible]o see a dead mule, as they are hard[illegible]r known to die.

C[illegible]rdware merchant and plumber has purchased the house and lot corner of Elm and Picton streets, belonging to James W. Cox, and intends occupying the same on and after April 1st.

Dr. F. A. Kinch has purchased the two hous[illegible] and lots on Central Avenue of the Lee Bros. of Fanwood Township. It is the same premises that formerly belonged to the Roll estate.

The large brick store of C. F. W. Whittke, corner of Broad and Elm street, is rapidly approaching completion and will soon be ready for occupancy. It is an ornament to the corner.

The Rev. Wm. H. [Gill] preached his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church on Sunday last; his pastorial relation having been dissolved by the Presbytery which met at Elizabeth on Thursday last.

The indictment found by the last grand jury against Andrew McMurray, for assault and battery on Wm. Long, was tried at Elizabeth on Tuesday last and resulted in a verdict of acquital. Frank Bergen, Esq., defended Mr. McMurray.

It was a wise action of the Board of Health at their last meeting in notifying the washer-women of our town who have in their families any cases of infectious diseases, to cease receiving any clothing to be washed until all danger of contagion is passed.

John Darsh, proprietor of the bakery on Broad street, has the sympathies of the community in the loss of his youngest son John, aged 7 years, who died on Wednesday last from scarlet fever. The burial occurred on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock a. m.

An alarm of fire was raised in the village about 6:30 a. m. yesterday (Thursday) morning, caused by the roof of Mr. H. Coaney's dwelling, on Central avenue, taking fire from a defective flue. Mr. Coaney had just started for the depot to take the train for New York, when he discovered the flames, which were extinguished by himself and neighbors before much damage was done.

The trial of Moffett vs Gale, which is an appeal from the case that was tried some two months ago before Justice Godfrey, is expected to come off at Elizabeth before his honor, Judge McCormack, next week. Both parties are preparing for the legal fight and have engaged good counsel to represent them. The decision will be looked for with much interest as it has created considerable discussion in our town.

On Thursday evening Jan. 26th inst. at about 6:30 p. m., the jewelry store window of Chas. E. Vail on the corner of Broad and Elm street, was broken by sneak thieves while Mr. Vail was at supper. He heard the crash of broken glass and ran out to the street but could not see, nor hear any body. The thieves evidently understood their business as they did not tarry only long enough to snatch what jewelry they could through the broken pane and get away. They got away with about $25 worth of goods consisting of bracelets, lockets and rings.

An Association called the Young People's Association for Christian Endeavor, connected with the Congregational church of Christ, of this place, was organized on Thursday evening, Jan. 26th. The ballot for the election of officers resulted as follows: Mr. H. F. Alpers, President; Mr. Henry Doonis, Vice President; Miss A. Louisa Evans, Treasurer; Mr. Wm. McQuoid, Secretary. An entertainment committee of five was elected as follows: The Misses A. Louisa Evans, Belle Pierson and Hattie Harris, and Messrs. J. H. Worth and G. H. Embree. The object of the Society is to cultivate Christian life and usefulness by means of social prayers, study of God's word and Christian endeavor. The Society is open to every young person who shall assent by his or her signature to the following covenant: "Being desirous to know more of the Christian life, its duties and privileges, I do cordially pledge myself to support this Association by my presence at its meetings and by co-operation in the various plans of Christian work which shall be decided upon."

The store building of James T. Pierson, which was started on its journey along Broad street on New Year's Day, has at last reached its foundation where it is to be fitted up into a first-class dwelling house.

Samuel Gershol has rented the Westfield Hotel for a term of five years. He is to occupy it on April 1st next. Mr. Gershol has kept a Hotel at Pluckamin, Somerset County for a number of years and is a man well recommended to keep such an institution.

The Board of Health have met every evening during this week. No child who has attended the public school since the school building was fumigated has taken the scarlet fever. There have been two deaths during the past week, Bertha Cruise and John Darsh, aged 7 years, from scarlet fever. The physicians are to be commended for their promptness in reporting all cases of sickness to the Board.

It would be wise for those people who grumble about the number of meetings of the Board of Health of our town, and insinuate that it will add to our Township expenses if they would read Section 1, Page 160 of the Laws of 1881 in relation to Local Boards of Health. They would find it contrary to law for any member of the Board to receive any remuneration for their services for the different meetings they may have during the year.

Town Committee met at Town Rooms Wednesday evening, Feb. 1st, 1882, at 7:30 p. m.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGERS'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the secretions which cause them.

THE BEAUTY'S CHOICE.

Mrs. Hawley's prettiest boarder was the bit of a blonde girl named Florence Castleton. It was a romantic name and she had a romantic history. Her parents were dead, she was the heiress of their property, and had a guardian. He had been in love with her mother, and was very jealous of the daughter's guardianship, treating her with arbitrary power and teasing her quite as much as pleasing her with his affection.

Yet it was quite exasperating to the young men to see her hanging on his arm, and he a handsome bachelor of only 40. He boarded at a hotel; she had Mrs. Hawley's prettiest set of rooms. They were furnished by herself, and most charmingly, in rosewood and blue damask. She had canaries and a parroquet, and a King Charles spaniel, and a maid under her authority, and it was but a short time after her arrival before every young man in the house was markedly subservient to her.

There were four young men in the house—Charley Childs, Frederick Grove, Leonard Martin and Dick Manchester—all bright, agreeable, marriageable fellows, and all admirers of Florence Castleton. Finally, there was another; but he was too plain and bashful to be admitted to the elegant ranks of Miss Castleton's galaxy of beaux, and no one thought of his being any one's lover.

His name was David Atwood. He was a book-keeper, was plain in dress, and evidently straightened in means. He had one of the smallest of Mrs. Hawley's side rooms, spent all of his days and most of his evenings in the office where he was employed; never went to theatres or the opera, and possessed not the slightest style of manner.

The others laughed at him—he was so shy and awkward and bashful. And Florence Castleton often joined in the laugh, yet no one offered him any disrespect. Indeed, they all acknowledged him to be 'a good young man, but so homely and awkward.'

Florence Castleton had a very pretty voice for singing, and used to play on a guitar, a beautiful one, inlaid with pearl, which her guardian had given her.

One evening, after David Atwood had resided in the house about six weeks, she brought it down to the parlor and sat down to play.

The young men gathered around to sing with her. Young Martin sang very well, and Charley Childs sang better. While they were singing David Atwood came in.

He slipped into a corner, and sat down in his shy way, and was unnoticed until Dick Manchester, who was restless for mischief, called out: 'Mr. Atwood, won't you come and sing with us?'

'I do not sing,' he said quietly.

'Nor play?' asked Dick.

'Only upon the violin,' he answered.

Florence was strumming her guitar carelessly.

'Won't Mr. Atwood let us hear him play upon the violin?' asked Dick, glancing shyly at Martin, as if he was starting game. All awaited Atwood's answer with a certain degree of interest.

'I have not used it since I came here. I will unpack it, and if none of the strings are broken I will play,' said Atwood, and he rose and left the room.

'How could you say that, Dick? He probably plays execrably,' said Miss Jeanette Manchester, Dick's sister.

'I never knew a country bumpkin who hadn't a fantasy for a fiddle,' said Martin. 'There, he's coming back! Now, if any one has fastidious musical sensibilities I would advise him to decamp.'

'I'll stay,' answered Dick.

'We'll all stay and see the fun,' said Grove, sitting down by Miss Castleton.

David came in. I began to understand what was coming as he bent his head over the violin and drew the bow lightly across the strings. In a moment he glided into an air of Verdi's, so light and graceful that it was like the sea spray. Every ear and eye was given in rapt attention; some in delight, some in troubled doubt; as if they could not believe their own senses; some in envy and all in amazement. Astonishment was the prevailing emotion.

When he had finished the opera air, he asked: 'Is there any tune you particularly like?' And he glanced toward the side of the room where Florence Castleton sat, rather than at Dick and Martin.

'Will you play the 'Phantom Chorus,' from Faust?' asked Florence. And the mild, sweet tones came forth obediently in beautiful perfection. Air followed air. The company sat spell-bound until the suddenly revealed musician laid down his bow. A chorus of eulogistic phrases and expressions of gratitude followed, but David Atwood smiled only at Florence Castleton's simple remark, 'We thank you!'

He left the room. A little while after I went through the hall and met him.

'You have surprised and delighted us all with your performance Mr. Atwood,' I said.

He smiled.

'I learned to play to please a little sick sister I had once,' he answered. 'Since she died I do not care to play much, although I love music.'

Just then Florence Castleton flitted by and went up stairs. I thought she heard what he said.

'Do you think she liked it?' he said with amusing simplicity and directness.

'Yes I am sure she did,' I answered.

It soon became perceptible to all observing people how much David Atwood was in love with Miss Castleton. He would turn pale every time she spoke to him, and once, when he brought her a chair in an awkward hurry, I saw him trembling like a leaf under her beautiful eyes. They were together that evening, with three or four others, in the parlor.

'Miss Castleton,' said a pretty little school-girl, who idolized Florence for her beauty, after the manner of school-girls, 'your eyes are just the color of the water off Coney Beach, where I saw it last Summer.'

Miss Castleton laughed.

'They are like summer skies,' said Charley Childs.

'I swear that they are just like the binding of Owen Meredith—in blue and gold,' said Dick Manchester.

'And what is your comparison, Mr. Atwood?' said Florence, looking archly at David.

His answer was involuntary. 'They are like the blue larkspur which used to grow in my mother's garden,' he said.

Florence Castleton blushed; it was the only time I had seen her blush. Looking up, she suddenly met the eyes of her guardian, Mr. Gray, who was present. Rising quickly, she went to the piano, and seating herself, played a light air.

That night a cry of fire awoke me. I lay unaffected for a moment until I suddenly perceived the odor of smoke. Rising quickly, I opened my door; the hall was filled with smoke and there was great confusion in the house. The cry of 'Fire, fire!' arose.

I flung on a wrapper, drew on slippers, and commenced putting my most valuable papers into my writing-desk.

While I was doing this there came a quick step on the stairs, and a voice crying the names of all who slept on the landing. I opened the door and saw for the first time that the doors of all the other chambers were open, and the occupants had fled. It was a servant.

'Oh, come down, for heaven's sake!' she cried. 'The back part of the house is afire from cellar to roof, inside!'

There were doors in the hall shutting all the back part of the house off from the front.

'Are all out?' I asked, flinging a coat around me, and taking up my precious writing-desk. 'Miss Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Blake, Miss Holston and Miss Castleton?' said I, as we went through the smoky hall.

'Heaven have mercy!' cried the servant girl, 'but I don't think Miss Castleton is out! I haven't seen her! Oh, what will I do?'

Just then a figure came leaping upstairs.

'Go down!' he cried to me, as he sprang past.

He flung open the door between the two halls. A volume of smoke poured out, and I retreated. It was David Atwood. I knew instinctively that he had gone for Florence Castleton, and that she would immediately be safe.

Down stairs the people were carrying out furniture, and the greatest confusion and consternation, mingled with much active energy, prevailed.

Mr. Gray caught the arm of Mrs. Hawley, as she fled down the stairs with a pile of valuable clothing.

'Miss Castleton, Mrs. Hawley—where is she?' he cried.

'I don't know! I don't know!' she exclaimed despairingly. 'Some one went for her. I have not seen her—'

Mr. Gray interrupted her with an oath, and sprang to the stairs; but at that instant the figure of David Atwood emerged from the smoke on the stairs, with the senseless form of Florence Castleton in his arms. She had apparently fainted with fright, or been overwhelmed with smoke. She was half dressed; her beautiful hair swept over David's arm, her white, unconscious face was clasped to his breast.

They carried her into the air, and she soon revived and was carried to the hotel where Mr. Gray resided.

The fire was finally extinguished, but the house was very much injured, and rendered untenantable until repaired. It was spring and I went out of town; but that summer I received the following letter from Jeanette Manchester:

'MY DEAREST ESTHER: I've such news to tell you! Florence Castleton has married that horrid, awkward David Atwood, who is a fright, even if he does play beautifully on the violin. It seems that he saved her from the fire, and she went into a passion of gratitude, and he told her that he loved her; and that was a pretty state of affairs for that aristocratic Gray, who is more than half in love with her himself, I believe. But they say that Florence said to him: 'Dear guardian, remember my mother,' and he gave right up and let her marry Atwood. I wasn't at the wedding; it took place at the Gray's country seat, and they say the bride wore blue larkspur in her hair. Horrid taste! and so forth." JEANETTE MANCHESTER.

I smiled. I was very glad.

OUTWITTING A DETECTIVE.

A talk with a detective is generally interesting, and often instructive. Some years ago an extensive forgery was reported to the police; and on the evening of the same day a serious burglary was carried out in a jeweler's premises in the city. There was not the slightest trace of the daring criminals. The detective department was in despair; and the usual outcry as to the inefficiency of the police began to make itself heard and the detective told off of the burglary in chance to obtain a slight trace of some of the missing property, suspicion having attached itself to the inmates of a certain house, owing to their lavish expenditure of money. Further inquiries only strengthened the suspicion, but although there was the strongest proof that the police were on the right trail, none of the jewelry or silver-plate ware could be discovered. This was exasperating, more especially as the detective had been assured that the property was actually taken into that house.

The officer went to the station very despondent, and sought to beguile his thoughts by reading a volume of Edgar Allan Poe's Stories. He had got the length of 'The Missing Letter,' when he started up, blamed his own folly, and proceeded again to the suspected house.

Acting on the suggestion of the tale, he determined this time not to look under carpets and into mysterious cavities, or to tear up hollow sounding portions of the floor. Knowing now that the safest place to hide anything was where people would never think of looking—as in the case of the letter staring the searchers in the face from the mantel-piece—the detective, accompanied by another officer, went into the house, and there, outside one of the windows looking to the back green, and attached by a strong cord to the lintel, they found a bag containing all the silver plate.

But there was no trace of the jewels, some of which were of great value. The officers had another look around, a little encouraged by their partial success. The main room was elegantly furnished, an oriel window being gay with a rich parterre of flowers in handsome Satsuma ware vases. My informant went forward to the window, took hold of one of the plants, when it came away in his hand, revealing the fact that the earth in the pot did not reach to the bottom of the vase. In a few minutes the whole of the property was recovered from the several vases. An arrest and conviction followed, with a sentence of ten years penal servitude to each of the ingenious thieves.

While the prisoners were awaiting their trial, one of them dropped a hint that enlightened a turnkey on the subject of the forgery, which, as above stated, had also happened on the same day as the theft. The detective was once more made aware of the information, which at first appeared insignificant. But this trifle, light as air, proved important enough. The slight clue was followed up with relentless perseverance, with the result of bringing to light the fact that the forger had spent large sums of money in the house where the burglars had been arrested. It was easy to get information from the inmates who had not been taken into custody. The detective at last became aware that the man he was in search of was betrothed to a young lady, the daughter of a very prominent citizen. Curiously enough, the crime had not got into the newspapers; while, on the other hand, the authorities had been heavily handicapped through the absence of any photograph of the criminal. The detective called upon the young lady when he had assured himself of the absence of her parents, and asked her quietly to show him her album. With great self possession, the girl brought the book, and looked steadily at her visitor's face; nor did she exhibit the slightest feeling when the detective, with a half smile, congratulated her on the fact that she was a clever woman, although he thought that she might have been even more so, if she had filled up the page from which she had taken the photograph which had faced her own. He left the house with the conviction that while the girl knew of the whereabouts of her lover, she was a match for the cleverest of criminal officers. Let me tell the story in the detective's own words:

"As I went about considerably annoyed by the way we had been checkmated, I saw the girl come out of a shop. Strolling in, I purchased a small article, and learned from the garrulous shopkeeper that he had just sold a large trunk. Here was a new phase. The young lady, it was generally admitted, had a great regard for the young man, and would very probably do all in her power to save him. Did she intend to leave the city? That was the point to be determined. I also learned, through proceedings which I am not called upon to explain, that the young lady had a private account at a bank in the city—not the one where the forgery had been committed—and took steps to ascertain her money transactions; when, to my infinite surprise, I was told that on the previous day she had drawn a sum of fifteen hundred pounds, explaining that she wished to place it in an investment of a private nature. But imagine my astonishment when I learned that on a certain day about the time the forgery was committed, she had lodged nine hundred pounds—a hundred less than the sum obtained by the forger. I now resolved to set my knowledge and authority against a woman's wits, not at all hopeful of the result.

"I met her in the street, where she affected not to recognize me. I followed; and when we came to a quieter thoroughfare, she turned, and at once addressed me by name. After some expressions of regret at the nature of my duties, I let her understand all I knew of the case, at the close giving a threat to the effect that I might be called upon to arrest her as an abettor to forgery. Even this did not affect her. Another thought struck me when I saw something white peeping from her hand basket, and I bluntly asked her for the letter she had just received at the general post office. Without a pause, she handed me a letter bearing the postmark New York.

"We had suspected that the forger was in America; but inquiries at the post office had satisfied me that no letters had been received addressed to the young lady, and I also knew that fear of her parents would prevent any communication between the parties. So, when I received this letter, my labors seemed almost ended; for this being the first epistle, and contemplated flight being taken into account, there was every reason to believe that the letter now in my possession simply meant the speedy capture of the forger. The girl bowed and passed on; but there was something approaching a smile on her face as she parted from me. The letter was bulky, and the envelope had a somewhat frayed appearance, as if it had fallen into water. 'With breathless speed, like a soul in chase' I tore the envelope open, only to find every sheet of paper perfectly blank! I looked them over again, went to the office, and tried sympathetic inks, obtained a microscope—in short, made every effort to satisfy myself that I had not been duped. At last I confessed that the girl had been too much for me.

"Fortunately for my peace of mind, I had not acquainted any of my colleagues with the slightest idea of my partial success, so that they had no occasion to rejoice at my discomfiture—a discomfiture bitter; for when I made inquiries the next day I found that my bird had flown.

"I instantly hurried to Greenock—this was before the days of the Atlantic cable—only to see the larger steamer sailing to the west. A few months afterward I received a letter in a woman's hand, bearing the postmark of a little town in the Rocky Mountains. This was all it contained:

"'You're a smart fellow, but no match for a loving woman. An old envelope full of blank paper is quite good enough for such as you. Had you been more civil I might have taught you the art of re-gumming old love letters. Farewell. I am quite happy.'"

AFRAID SHE'D BE KISSED.

A man was walking along one road and a woman another. The roads finally united, and the man and woman reaching the juncture at the same time, walked on together. The man was carrying a large iron kettle on his back, in one hand he held by the legs a live chicken, in the other a cane, and he was leading a goat. Just as they were coming to a dark, deep ravine, the woman said to the man: "I'm afraid to go through that ravine with you; it is a lonely place and you might overpower me and kiss me by force."

"If you were afraid of that," said the man, "you shouldn't have walked with me at all. How can I possibly overpower you and kiss you by force when I have this great iron kettle on my back, a cane in one hand and a live chicken in the other, and am leading this goat? I might as well be tied hand and foot."

"Yes," replied the woman, "but if you should stick your cane into the ground and tie the goat to it, and turn the kettle bottom side up and put the chicken into it, then you might wickedly kiss me, in spite of my resistance."

"Success to thy ingenuity, O woman," said the rejoicing man to himself; "I should never have thought of such an expedient."

And when they came to the ravine he stuck his cane into the ground and tied the goat to it, gave the chicken to the woman, saying: "Hold it while I cut some grass for the goat;" and then lowering his kettle from his shoulders, imprisoned the chicken, and wickedly kissed the woman as she was afraid he would.

New Jersey Fisheries.

The New Jersey Senate on Wednesday confirmed the following nominations: Manning M. Knapp, to be Judge of the Supreme Court; John Clement, Judge of the Court of Errors, and Charles F. Scott, Law Judge of Middlesex County. A letter from United States Senator Sewell was read in which he said that Congress was prevented by treaty from interfering with the fisheries of the State, but that the State had a right to make regulations for the fisheries within its own border. The subject was referred to members of the Senate from the counties bordering on the sea.

An Irish brewer named Francis Wise died lately in Dublin, intestate, leaving a fortune of over £3,000,000 sterling. He had an investment of over £800,000 in the Government funds, and a sum to his credit in the bank, of £100,000. The interest of his English funded property would be £24,000 a year. Then his income from land and securities in land so far back as 1870 was estimated at £80,000 a year. His holding in American securities, into which he bought in depressed times, were at least £200,000. Mr. Wise lived in an inexpensive manner, and while he was most generous during his lifetime to his relatives and friends, and also gave freely to religion and charity, the accumulation of his savings must have been enormous.

POETRY.

OTHER FELLOWS THINK SO TOO.

There's just one thing a man can have
  In all this world of woe and strife,
That makes the business not too bad,
  And that one thing's an easy wife.
Don't fancy that I love my girl
  For rosy cheeks and raven hair?
She holds my heart because she laughs—
  Because she laughs and doesn't care.

I put my boots just where it suits,
  And find them where I put them too;
That is a thing, you must allow,
  A chap can very seldom do.
I leave my papers on my desk;
  She never dusts them in a heap,
Or takes to light the kitchen stove
  The very one I want to keep.

On winter nights my cozy dame
  Will warm her toes before the fire;
She never scolds about the lamp,
  Or wants the wick a trifle higher.
On Sundays she is not so fine
  But what her ruffles I can hug;
I light my pipe just where I please,
  And spill the ashes on the rug.

The bed is never filled with "shams"—
  A thing some women vilely plan
To worry servants half to death,
  And spoil the temper of a man.
She lets me sleep to any hour,
  Nor raises any horrid din
If it just happens, now and then,
  To be quite late when I come in.

I tell you, Jack, if you would wed,
  Just get a girl who lets things run;
She'll keep her temper like a lamb,
  And help you on to lots of fun.
Don't look for money, style or show,
  Or tenderest beauty, ripe and rare;
Just take the one who laughs at fate—
  Who laughs, and shows she doesn't care.

You think, perhaps, our household wares
  Are just precisely a little mixed;
Oh, when they get too horrid bad,
  We stir about and get things fixed.
What compensation has a man
  Who earns his bread by sweat of brow,
If home is made a battle-ground,
  And life one long, eternal row?

THE FIRST MISUNDERSTANDING.

"How did you enjoy yourself at the Christmas party, Jennie? Come, sit here at aunty's feet and tell me all about it."

Evidently something had gone wrong with pretty Jennie Asir, and the old lady noticed the signs of trouble in the young face.

"Jennie," she said softly, "what is the matter? I know something is wrong. Tell aunty; perhaps she can help you."

And little by little it all came out, how at the party the evening before, carried away by the (to her) unusual excitement of the gay scene, Jennie had accepted too many attentions from others to please her betrothed lover, Ernest Golding; and when on their way home he had ventured on a quiet remonstrance, she had answered:

"Very well; if you think you have made a mistake I am sure it is well you have found it out before it would be too late."

Thus they had parted, and that was why Jennie's bright face was clouded.

"I have deeply offended and disappointed Ernest," she said, sadly; "and I know his proud self-control too well to think he will forgive and forget unless I make the first advances; and that I can never do!"

As the girl spoke, into the old lady's eyes came a far away look, which changed into a yearning tenderness as her glance fell upon the curly, golden head leaning against her knee.

"Little one, forget your own trouble for a time while aunty tells you the story of her youth—a love-tale of forty years ago, before ever your blue eyes saw the light."

"My parents were not rich—they were but plain farmers; but if in their veins flowed no 'blue' blood, a pure, healthful current formed by active, honest lives was the good heritage which they gave to their children.

"Near to our farm was the largest mansion in the vicinity, and the young ladies took a great fancy to me—'Little Dorris,' as I was called. So my good mother, nothing loth, gave her permission for me to go up to the great house as often as I was invited.

"The time passed until I was eighteen. Then the only son and heir of Wyndcote returned from college and entered upon his estates. I was visiting there at the time, and nothing would do but I must stay to the fete which celebrated his coming of age. The young ladies dressed me in muslin and twined some pale pink buds through my curls; and it was that evening that Arthur Wyndcote fell in love with me. So he said afterward.

"But, Jennie, dear, although he was handsome and wealthy, I did not love him, for my girlish heart had already been taken captive by another.

"I had known Robert Ingalls only a year; but in that short time I had grown to feel that his soulful eyes held all the sunshine that was necessary to make life happy. And thus when the heir of Wyndcote laid his heart and hand at my feet, telling me that his lady mother and sisters knew of his intentions and had signified their kind approval of his choice, I refused him.

"It was a crushing blow to him, accustomed as he was to gain anything he set his mind upon, and soon after he left his country home to forget his disappointment in the whirl of city life.

"Then, after a while, Robert asked me to be his wife, and I said 'yes.' My lover was not rich, but he was all that was good and noble, and I was very happy.

"During the year he had obtained a lucrative position as engineer on a prosperous road, and the little home we were to share in the future seemed very near.

"By and by an aunt, a sister of my father's who lived in New York, sent for me to come and make her a visit.

"Robert held me in his arms as I said good-bye to him in our little honeysuckle porch. (I never smell the fragrance of the honeysuckle now without that parting comes back to me).

"'Good-bye, Dorris,' he said, in his deep, rich voice; 'bring back the same loving, innocent little heart that you take away and I shall not be sorry I have let you go.'

"Then, as he kissed me—'Remember this is our last parting. When you come home I shall claim my little wife.'

"I went to New York. My aunt had married a wealthy merchant, and life seemed very different to me in her elegant home. Youth loves novelty, and I soon tasted and enjoyed to the full the charms of city society. I had been there about a month when a card was brought up to me bearing the name of 'Arthur Wyndcote;' and going down into the drawing-room I met my discarded lover. He was not embarrassed in the least, and soon put me at ease with him. 'I saw you riding in the Park,' he said; 'and learning where you were staying, ventured to call, presuming on the title of "an old friend."'

"My aunt was very much pleased with him, and cordially invited him to come again.

"He did so very often; and feeling convinced by the calm friendliness of his manner that his former fancy for me had died a natural death, I gladly accepted his kind attentions.

"Then came my mother's summons for me to return home.

"'She could not spare her daughter any longer,' she wrote, 'and Robert wanted his little Dorris.'

"It seemed good to be back again among those I loved, and though I realized for the first time how very old-fashioned and plain my daily surroundings were, home had never appeared lovelier in my eyes.

"I had been back only a week when Mr. Wyndcote called at the farm. He had left New York, he said, soon after I had. The sun was almost setting when he started to go, and I sauntered down to the gate with him. It was near the time that Robert's train came in, and I knew that I should soon see my lover, for he always stopped to say a few words to me on his way home.

"A great white rose-bush grew by the farm gate, and Mr. Wyndcote, breaking off one of the odorous buds, handed it to me, saying softly as he did so:

"'Do you know what a rose means, Miss Dorris? and will you accept this from me?'

"Something in his tone and the expression with which he regarded me showed me that I had been mistaken when I had thought his old fancy for me had died, and I saw at once that he could not have heard of my engagement. It was a painful surprise to me, for I had grown to value his friendship; but I felt I must not let the moment pass without telling him of my betrothal.

"I took the rose, and looking up into his face, said:

"'Certainly I will accept it, Mr. Wyndcote, as an assurance of the friendship you bear me, and also as an earnest of the congratulations you will give me when you hear of my approaching marriage.'

"His face paled, and he started violently, and was just about to speak when the gate swung back, and around the great rose-bush which concealed the road from our view by its blossom-freighted branches, came Robert. His gaze wandered from Mr. Wyndcote's pallor and agitation to my flushing face, and then to the rosebud which I still held in my hand; then, without any words, but with a look such as I had never seen in his face before, he left us and proceeded to the house.

"Mr. Wyndcote held out his hand, and I could see that it trembled.

"'I fear, Miss Dorris, that I have caused trouble between you and your lover, but you can explain and make it right. Will you shake hands with me? It will be for the last time. I was foolish to imagine that, rejected once, I still might hope. But you are not in fault. I have only my own blindness to blame.'

"As I walked to the house my heart was very heavy, for the way in which Arthur Wyndcote had borne himself had increased fourfold my respect for him.

"I was not at all prepared for the stern reproof which I found awaiting me. Conscious I had meant no wrong, I did not stop to think that to lookers-on actions speak louder than words; appearances than deeds. Never had I known Robert to be so angry, and looking back, I can see that he had cause, for he had known of Mr. Wyndcote's former proposal to me, and that I had met him again in New York, and he keenly felt the difference which existed between a poor mechanic and the heir of a large estate.

"His distrust angered me, and sealed my lips. A girl's heart is full of contradictions, and though I knew the strength of my love for him, I resolved to punish him for his lack of faith in me, and so I answered him back pettishly, instead of speaking in a way that would instantly have shown him his mistake. Thus we parted.

"My last words to him were much the same as those you said to Ernest:

"'I am glad we have found out we were mistaken in each other, Robert, before it would be too late.'

"When next I saw him—oh! little one, the rest is hard to tell.

"The very next day the train of which my lover was the engineer came into collision with an express, and only owing to his bravery and presence of mind was any one spared to relate the direful story.

"I heard it from the mouth of a friend who was eye-witness.

"As my lover's train rounded a curve, all saw another one coming at a fearful rate of speed.

"Quicker than a flash Robert understood the situation, and saw the only chance there was for escape.

"Escape for the rest, but not for him! He knew that he was doomed in any event; but there was a possibility of saving the passengers.

"With a rapid spring, and the exertion of his whole strength, he uncoupled the locomotive from the rest of the train. Then came a wild thud; a terrible crash of splintering iron; and the colliding locomotives leaped high in the air. Of course the rest of the train followed; but the momentum had been broken by the detachment of the engine, and the baggage car, which was foremost, received the worst of the injury, while the terror-stricken passengers, though much shaken up, and some of them badly bruised, escaped with their lives. But by the sacrifice of as brave and heroic a soul as God ever made!

"They found him some yards away, crushed and bleeding; but still alive—still conscious.

"'Dorris! Dorris!' was his cry; and thither they brought me. He could not move to greet me; but he knew me. His lips parted as I leaned over him and pressed passionate kisses upon his brow.

"'Then you do love me, and did not mean your last words?' he whispered brokenly.

"'Mean them—Oh, Robert! God knows I would give my life if they could be unsaid!'

"He seemed satisfied, but only for a moment. Then he looked up and I understood the inquiry in his eyes; and calmly as I could I told him the meaning of the scene he had witnessed between Arthur Wyndcote and myself.

"With my kisses yet warm upon his lips, he sank into unconsciousness.

"Jennie! oh, Jennie! beware of these misunderstandings between two who love each other. My first was my last; and the cold, cruel words with which I parted from my lover have left in my heart a sting which I shall carry to my grave.

"Let my sad, lonely lot, these tear-dimmed eyes, these childless arms, warn you not to yield to a false pride; for in doing thus you may blight your whole future happiness!"

The old lady paused; her story was ended.

For a moment there was silence; then Jennie sprang from her seat, and flinging her young arms around her aunt's neck, she kissed again and again the withered cheek.

"Good-bye for a little while, aunty dear. I am going to my own room to write to Ernest; when I have finished I will come back."

The old lady was left alone, and as she wiped away the tears which her retrospect had brought to her eyes, a tremulous smile hovered around her lips; for although it had cost her an effort to uplift the veil from the sad past which for long years had been shrouded from all other eyes but her own, she felt that it had not been in vain.—Ledger.

CORNWALLIS' BUCKLES.

I am not quite sure of dates, but it was late in the fall, I think, of 1777, that a foraging party from the British camp in Philadelphia made a descent upon the farm of Major Rudolph, south of that city, at Darby. Having supplied themselves well with provender, they were about to begin their return march, when one of the soldiers happened to espy a valuable cow, which at that moment unfortunately made her appearance in the lane leading to the barn-yard; and poor Sukey was immediately confiscated for the use of the company.

Now this unfortunate cow happened to be the pride of the farm, and was claimed as the exclusive property of Miss Anne Rudolph—the daughter of the house—aged twelve years. Of course, no other animal on the estate was so important as this particular cow, and her confiscation by the soldiers could not be tolerated for a moment. So Miss Anne made an impetuous dash for her recovery, but finding the men deaf to her entreaties and the sergeant proof against the storms of her indignation, the high-spirited child rushed over to the stables, saddled her pony, and was soon galloping off toward the city, determined to appeal to the commander-in-chief of the British army, if nothing else would save the life of her favorite.

Meanwhile, poor Sukey trudged along, her reluctant steps quickened now and then by a gentle prick with the point of a bayonet in here well-rounded sides.

To reach the city before the foraging party, was the one thought of the child, as her pony went pounding along the old Chester road at a pace that soon brought her within the British lines. She was halted at the first outpost by the guard, and the occasion of her hot haste was demanded. The child replied:

"I must see the general immediately!"

"But the general can not be disturbed for every trifle. Tell me your business, and if important, it will be reported to him."

"It is of great importance, and I can not stop to talk to you. Please let go my pony, and tell me where to find the general!"

"But, my little girl, I can not let you pass until you tell me whence you come, and what your business is within these lines."

"I come from Darby, and my business is to see the general immediately! No one else can tell him what I have to say!"

The excitement of the child, together with her persistence, had its influence upon the officer. General Washington was in the neighborhood with his ragged regiments, patiently watching his opportunity to strike another blow for the liberty of the colonies. The officer well knew that valuable information of the movements of the rebels frequently reached the British commander through families residing in the country, and still, in secret, friendly to the Crown. Here might be such a case, and this consideration determined the soldier to send the child forward to head-quarters. So, summoning an orderly, he directed him to escort the girl to the general.

It was late in the afternoon by this time, and Cornwallis was at dinner with a number of British officers, when "A little girl from the country with a message for the general," was announced.

"Let her come in, at once," said the general; and a few moments later Miss Anne Rudolph entered the great tent.

For a moment the girl hesitated, overcome, perhaps, by the unexpected brilliancy of the scene. Then the spirit of her "Redwolf" ancestors asserted itself, and to her, Cornwallis in full dinner costume, surrounded by his brilliant companions, represented only the power that could save her favorite from a butcher's knife.

"Well, my little girl, I am General Cornwallis," said that gentleman kindly. "What have you to say to me?"

"I want my cow!"

Profound silence reigned for a moment, then came a simultaneous burst of uproarious laughter from all the gentlemen around the table. The girl's face reddened, but she held her ground, and her set features and flashing eyes convinced the general that the child before him was one of no ordinary spirit.

A few words of encouragement, pleasantly spoken, quickly restored the equanimity of the girl. Then with ready tact, the general soon drew from her a concise narration of her grievance.

"Why did not you father attend to this for you?"

"My father is not at home, now."

"And have you no brothers for such an errand, instead of coming yourself into a British camp?"

"Both of my brothers are away. But General Cornwallis," cried she, impatiently, "while you keep me here talking they will kill my cow!"

"So—your brothers also are away from home. Now, tell me, child, where can they be found?"

"My oldest brother, Captain John Rudolph, is with General Gates."

"And your other brother, where is he?"

"Captain Michael Rudolph, is with Harry Lee." The girl's eyes fairly blazed as she spoke the name of gallant "Light-horse Harry Lee." Then she exclaimed: "But, General, my cow!"

"Ah, ha! one brother with Gates and one with Lee. Now," said the general severely, "where is your father?"

"He was with General Washington," frankly answered the little maiden; "but he is a prisoner now."

"So, so. Father and brother all in the continental army! I think, then, you must be a little rebel."

"Yes, sir, if you please—I am a little rebel. But I want my cow!"

"Well! your are a brave, straightforward little girl, and you shall have your cow and something more, too!" Then, stooping forward, he detached from his garters a pair of brilliant knee-buckles, which he laid in the child's hands. "Take these," he said, "and keep them as a souvenir of this interview, and believe that Lord Cornwallis can appreciate courage and truth, even in a little rebel." Then, calling an orderly, he instructed him to go with the child through the camp in search of the cow, and, when he should find the animal, to detail a man to drive her home again.

So Miss Anne returned in triumph with her cow! And those sparkling knee-buckles are still treasured by her descendants as a memento of Cornwallis and the Revolution.—St. Nicholas for February, 1882.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

There is nothing that commends itself more enthusiastically to the support of a true-hearted American than religious liberty, or in other words, the right of every man and woman to worship God according to the dictates of his or her own conscience. It is the crowning glory of our country's Constitution, written there by wise and patriotic ancestors, and intended to forever establish here a law justly protective to all people and strictly conformable to the equity of the great Ruler of the Universe.

Severely cruel have been the acts of former ages against the liberty we thus applaud, but that such unwarranted hostility should be carried on within and legally countenanced by any civilized nation in this enlightened century seems incredible, yet it is the truth, as the merciless persecution inflicted upon the Hebrew residents of Russia shamefully attests.

To boldly protest against any and all intolerant outrages is the duty of American citizenship, and with pleasure did we notice the proceedings of a meeting called for such purpose in New York last week, over which Mayor Grace presided, and whereat Hon. W. M. Evarts, Judge N. Davis, Rev. John Hall and others delivered forcible speeches.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

"Resolved, That the citizens of New York have heard with sadness and indignation of the sufferings inflicted upon the Jews of Russia, and especially during the past year at Kieff, Odessa and Warsaw and elsewhere.

"Resolved, That as citizens of a republic friendly to Russia, and which but recently exchanged mournful testimonials of national regard at the assassination of a Czar at St. Petersburg and a President at Washington, we earnestly urge the claims of the Hebrews resident in the empire to just and impartial treatment. In the great family of nations humanity and justice must constitute bonds of mutual reliance and good will.

"Resolved, That in the name of civilization we protest against the spirit of mediæval persecution thus revived in Russia. In this age the recognized equality of all men irrespective of their religious confession, an essential element of the American Constitution, is a principle which, in practice, secures the loyal devotion of all classes. This is eminently true of the Hebrews, who constitute faithful citizens and subjects wherever accorded the rights of manhood.

"Resolved, That we sympathize with our fellow-citizens of the Hebrew faith in their sorrow for their afflicted brethren in Russia and in their energetic efforts for the welcome of the exiles who, fleeing from a hostile populace and unprotected by the authorities, shall seek an asylum in this land.

"Resolved, That the people of the United States appeal to their Government for the exercise of such influence with the Government of Russia as the ancient and unbroken friendship between the two nations may justify to stay the spirit of persecution and redress the injuries it has already inflicted, as well as to secure by wise and equal administration the Hebrew subjects of Russia against their recurrence."

We hope the example thus set by citizens of New York will be followed throughout the United States, and that the concentrated and mighty voice of public opinion may be heard abroad and heeded.

As Americans we exult in the fact that religious liberty is a guarantee of the Constitution, and as Democrats we proudly declare it to be a time honored article of their political faith, fearlessly maintained.

FOOD.

The exports from the United States to foreign countries in 1880 aggregated the value of $823,946,353.

Of which $737,862,617 were the products of agriculture.

There is not only food for the body in that exhibit, but ample food for thought.

What does it show?

That ninety per cent. of the whole export trade of this country came from the tillers of the soil.

From the Farming and Planting, those most important of all interests, and which, amid the loud talk about tariff protection to home industry, have, as a general rule, been ignored.

And it shows further—

That the profit of transporting over the ocean such an immense bulk of productions must have been heavy, and of right our own realized gain, yet, owing to the shameful destruction of American commerce, it went mainly into the pockets of foreigners.

Reformers are wanted in Congress.

Men honest enough to do the right, and sufficiently intelligent to impartially comprehend the interests of all the people.

It should be remembered that a Democratic Congress passed a bill refunding the public debt at three per cent. interest, which John Sherman, then Secretary of the Treasury, procured to be vetoed, thereby causing millions of loss to the national finances, and that the same John Sherman now, as Senator, advocates the adoption of a similar measure. If the ambitious gentleman from Ohio thinks he is stealing opposition thunder he will find out his mistake. Neither cunning in the Cabinet nor lofty tumbling in the Senate can obscure the fact that Democrats are consistent and persevering advocates of wholesome economy in all public affairs. That the people know.

When slavery existed at the South, a certain class of Northern newspapers were constantly filled with horrible tales of cruelty committed in its name. The other day, in a well settled portion of the free and enlightened State of Illinois, facts came to light revealing a degree of barbarism never reached by the hardest of Southern slave-holders. In Illinois, not Mississippi, a poor little fatherless white girl, living in the family of a human brute, was found subjected to confinement in a dark cellar, at times, all day, thinly clad, without food, and to frequent horse-whippings that left her entire body black, blue and bloody. We rejoice that negro servitude is forever abolished, and would that all white people were practically free, even in this boasted land of Christian liberty.

The man who attends strictly to his own business in this world will not meddle with that of his neighbor. If all bestowed undivided attention upon their own affairs, and cultivated the spirit of charity, what an immense and varied amount of harm would be avoided.

At the close of the session of the State Board of Agriculture in Trenton last week, Hon. Thos. H. Dudley, of Camden, was elected President for the ensuing year and P. T. Quinn, of Essex, Secretary.

RELIEF AT LAST.

The action of the Common Council last Monday evening in adopting the Report of the Committee appointed by that body to confer with a Committee from the Board of Chosen Freeholders, to ascertain if some amicable plan could not be agreed upon to relieve the city of Plainfield in her present state of financial embarrassment, in consequence of probable mandamuses to be served upon the City Treasurer by the County authorities, restraining him from using the city's monies until the State and County taxes of 1880 and 1881 were paid, meets with popular approval. Instead of a long legal contest as to whether the city was liable for these taxes, wherein bills of costs would have been piled up, a little reasoning and mutual understanding has given the city the relief financially so urgently required. The debt of the city to the County is an honest one and should be paid. It is a gratifying fact to know, that since this arrangement has been entered upon, a considerable amount of back taxes has been paid to Collector Brown, which evidences that the taxpayers only desired to know where the city stood in the matter, for them to pay their taxes without litigation. The next step is to secure such proper legislation as will forever set at rest the proper manner and power of enforcing the collection of taxes. This seems on the road to accomplishment, through a bill now before the Legislature at Trenton, known as Senate No. 48, and drafted by a Committee of citizens and members of the last Council. Before presentation the copy was carefully considered, revised and reconsidered, until it was thought to be perfect for the purpose of oiling the machinery and starting the ways and means of extricating the city from its difficulties. After such painstaking efforts for the good of the bill, it was submitted for criticism to one of the ablest legal authorities in the State, who after reviewing every section and each clause, endorsed it with his complete and flattering approval.

For making a false election return, an eminent graduate of the Philadelphia school of political rascality has been condemned to suffer six months imprisonment, to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, and be disfranchised for seven years. A just verdict, although accompanied by too light a penalty. Twenty years in the State Prison and perpetual loss of citizenship would have come nearer his merited doom.

A bill has been introduced into Congress to make the anniversary of the discovery of America a legal holiday. That is a very pretty idea, but, the query arises, what is the authentic date to be so commemorated, and why does not this continent bear the name of its real discoverer—Christopher Columbus?

LOCAL ANNEX.

The McGibeny Family.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, deserves the thanks of the public for the novel entertainment offered in that church on Saturday evening of last week. Although the weather was so decidedly unpropitious, an attendance sufficiently large to more than cover the expenses of the affair, assembled to experience the many pleasures to be derived from the talents of the celebrated McGibeny Family. We trust, that the ability of the artists and the satisfaction of the audience, may impel a reappearance here of the Family, at some future date.

A Blunder of the "Times."

General McClellan's home is reported as one of the social centres of New York. Has this adopted son of New Jersey so soon forgotten the subjects who elevated him to rule over them for three years that he extends no social courtesies to them? Have we not enshrined his memory among us at "Bloaton" Range? George! This ingratitude is unworthy a soldier.

The above from our neighbor The Central Times, is intended to be facetious but only succeeds in being grossly inaccurate. General McClellan will never desert the only Northern State that has never deserted the Democratic ranks. His residence in New York is merely a temporary one for the Winter season, where his wife and charming family are "at home," on Thursday evenings, to all their personal friends. These receptions are not invitation affairs, and are attended by the beaux et belle of the first families of New Jersey, as well as elsewhere.

The Sleighing and the Sleighers.

A few days of passable sleighing last week and about the same of but little better this week, is thus far all we have been favored with during the present, but rapidly expiring, Winter. Park avenue, that most attractive "speeding stretch" to owners of fast roadsters, was as usual the objective point of both spectators on foot and on runners; and the edges of the road as well as the sidewalks were crowded on the days mentioned, by those more or less interested in the trotting abilities of the "stock" that was exhibited. A brisk drive "along the line" behind Mr. Benj A. Mumford's clipped bays "Kitty B. and Johnny B.," afforded a rare opportunity of viewing the "field" —which each day presented a scene of exciting contest. Usually in the lead, was to be found Mr Orville T. Waring's double team to a single cutter, closely pressed by Dr. Chauncey M. Field of Bound Brook, who was only prevented by the extra weight of a charming companion, from sending his handsome span to the front. Among other teams were to be noticed for their style and beauty, those of Messrs. R. H. Davies and D. N. Groendyke of North Plainfield, and Messrs. Newell, of the Plainfield Oilcloth works, Wm. B. Lewis, John H. Evans, E. A. Vanderhoff, Seymour Halt, C. P. Sebring, Charles and Henry Opdyke, R. B. Little, P. C. Ohl, I. W. Rushmore, A. D. Cook, L. Heyniger, Chas. Potter, Jr., J. U. Fraley and the Messrs. Maltby of this city. Mr. George Opdyke's high stepping sorrell with waving plumes and silver bells attracted the most admiration, while their many merrits called forth praise for the single teams of County Clerk James Vosseller, Commissioner of Alms Vanderbeek and Messrs. J. W. Johnson, E. P. Thorn, W. A. Sloan, Jr., Tell A. Brguelin, John Shotwell and Frank Merrill, Messrs. Joseph W. Gavett, Harry Dunn, Peter Bucklew and others of Plainfield's young gallants, also drove with their lady friends behind steppers more or less speedy and valuable.

M. E. Conference.

The District Conference of the Elizabeth District of the Newark Annual Methodist Episcopal Conference, will be held in the M. E. church of this city on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. At 7:30 o'clock p. m., of Tuesday, a sermon will be preached by the Rev. A. H. Tuttle, pastor of St. James M. E. church, of Elizabeth. On Wednesday at eleven o'clock a. m., an address by the Rev. J. M. King, of the St. James M. E. church, N. Y. city; at three o'clock p. m., an address on Sunday School work by the Rev. J. M. Freeman, D. D., Asst. Cor. Sec'y. of the S. S. Union, and at 7:30 a sermon by the Rev. J. M. Reid, D. D., the Missionary Secretary. The Revs. J. H. Haribut, J. M. Meeker and the pastor, Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, will care for the entertainment of the visiting brethren.

"Let Off Easy."

In spite of the able defense of Mr. Muldowney, made by Mr. Craig A. Marsh, at the trial of the former for selling liquor without a license, the jury after but a few moments deliberation rendered a verdict of guilty, and the accused was sentenced by City Judge Runyon to a fine of $50 or imprisonment in the County Jail for twenty days. The penalty imposed was most disappointing to the general public, and is undoubtedly insufficient to frighten others from committing the same offense. The profits of the business, when carried on illegally and with no regard for the purity of the beverages dispensed, are said to be enormous; and we are safe in asserting, so light a fine as that levied by our too lenient Judge, will fail to protect the City from the same transgression by others as well as the last convicted offender.

Prof. J. W. Churchill.

After hearing Prof. J. W. Churchill in so varied a programme as was rendered by him in the M. E. Church on Friday evening of last week, and experiencing his talented interpretation of the many dialects, emotions and facial expressions of, the characters protrayed, it is only just to say that there probably is no elocutionist at present before the public, who is his superior in the profession. The Deliber Society, under the management of which Mr. Churchill appeared, displayed most unusual and commendable taste in making the selection, and deserve a satisfactory financial profit as a reward. The evening selected, unfortunately, was that of important meetings in some of our churches; and, consequently, many who were desirous of attending the entertainment, felt called by their religious duty, elsewhere. Quite a satisfactory audience, however, of quality if not quantity, tendered the elocutionist an undoubtedly sincere and decidedly flattering appreciation.

No 2's Benefit Ball.

The Ball given by the members of Engine Co. No. 2, for the benefit of a brother firemen, at St. Mary's Hall on Thursday night of last week, was a grand success in every particular. The attendance was immense, and the opening march, in which seventy-five couples took part, was as perfect a thing of the kind as was ever witnessed. By eleven o'clock the Hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and as many as a hundred merry dancers were on the floor at a time. The Floor Director, Mr. Thomas Carty, and the Floor Committee, Messrs. G. A. Moore and H. J. Martin, with the Reception Committee, Messrs. Thomas Jones, Robert Skinner and Henry Goeller, performed their duties in a manner both able and satisfactory. Mr. Andrew Jennings at the ticket office, looked after the finances of the affair most efficiently, and it is believed that a sum of between $300 and $400 will be realized. No. 2's boys deserve great praise for their efforts in such a generous cause.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in adjourned meeting on Wednesday evening. Present—President Van Winkle and Messrs. Depew, Morris and Jones. In the absence of the Secretary, Mr. Morris was appointed to fulfill his duties for the time being. The minutes of the regular meeting of January were read and approved; and those of the last meeting were laid over, Mr. Morris objecting to certain statements contained in the latter and alleging to be the report of a Committee of which he was Chairman, yet had no knowledge of the action asserted to have been taken. Mr. Jones, from the Com. on Wells, reported that a person had been employed to loosen the well-caps, and that the work had been satisfactorily done. Treasurer Depew reported that the receipts since his last report had been $2,035.85 and the disbursements $2,784.37; leaving a balance now on hand of $2,875.84. Report accepted and placed on file. Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1, offered the names of Messrs John H. Jackson and W. W. Cottrell, for confirmation as new members by the Board. Laid over under the rules. The following bills were ordered paid: P. Bickett, $35.99; T. O Doane, $37.40; Carney Bros., $219.34; Rent of Alert House, $75; J. Sutphen, $9; E. Marsh, $1.50, and H. B. Young, $1.60. The following were referred to the Com. on Repairs and Supplies: J. S. Cutter, $11.41; Plainfield Gas Co., (Nov. 2, '81 to Jan. 1, '82) $84.16; W. Hand, $5.50; B. W. Mahaffey, $4; Gutta Percha M'f'g. Co., $44.96, and Flannery & Cooper, $7.75. Mr. Morris requested the patience of the Board while he made a brief reply to the statements of a member of his Committee, at the previous meeting, in relation to the new truck. He felt he was taking no advantage of the absence of that member, as the latter had seen fit to say certain things when he (Mr. Morris) was not present to explain or reply. The Committee—he continued—as such, had taken no action in the matter, had never met and appointed a date on which to visit the works and had ordered no one to make an inspection of the uncompleted apparatus. The contract distinctly and specifically states that when the truck is completed it shall be delivered on board of the cars of the C. R. R. of N. J., at Jersey City. It also states exactly what the work shall be and warrants that the material shall be first-class in every respect. After the arrival of the truck it is to be inspected and if approved as satisfactory in every particular, it is then to be accepted. Consequently it need not be received if found wanting in any respect whatever. As to the quality of the wheels—each one is stamped by the manufacturer and shows its class, whether A, B or C. The wheels used for the Plainfield truck are stamped A. In regard to the material used for axles and boxes, not being such as it should be—he would merely call attention to the clause in the contract that distinctly provides that the same shall be case-hardened. If not so, the truck can be condemned. The works are not owned by a firm but by a corporation, and whether the contractor is connected with such or not, is of no concern to the Board which only looks to Mr. Preston for a fulfillment of the terms of the contract. Mr. Morris asked for the instructions of the Board in relation to the colors desirable in painting the apparatus. The Superintendent of the works had suggested that the running gear should be painted with English vermillion, the body with ultramarine blue and the ladders maroon with black ends. On motion the Committee was authorized to use its discretion in the matter after such consultation with the members of the Truck Co., as it saw fit. The meeting then adjourned.

A party by the name of Hartshorne, who still claims an unpaid balance of $250 on the Truck now used by the Department, is after his money. As the Board of Managers has already accepted an allowance of $237.50 on the apparatus, it would be out just $12.50 if Mr. Hartshorne's bill should be paid. The latter sum seems but a small cost to the city for a truck of which they have had the service for the past thirteen years, or more.

The new Clapp & Jones steam fire engine, built for Raritan Eng. Co., No. 4, of New Brunswick, was tested before the city authorities on Friday afternoon last, and again on Saturday morning. The test was very satisfactory, the engine making steam rapidly, holds it well and is easy to handle. At the last trial she threw 220 feet with an 1¼ inch nozzle; 210 feet with an 1½ inch nozzle, and 237 feet 4½ inches with a 1 1-16 inch nozzle. The steamer cost $8,200. Of this the city pays $2,500 and the company the balance.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Eau de cologne cake is said to be the latest æsthetic craze at social gatherings in Westfield; at least we are so informed by one of the utter, utterly æsthetic young gentlemen who helped to carry off the cake, and who went into quite a gale of delight and pronounced the cake just too sweet-scented for anything.

Dorthica Iselman, daughter of Lulu Iselman, who has been working for Geo. W. Tice Esq., on Clark street, slipped and fell while in the yard hanging up clothes on Monday last, and broke her collar bone.

The "Thief Detective Society" held their monthly meeting on Monday evening last. Considerable business of importance was transacted; this society is in a very flourishing condition, both financially and in its number of members.

A resident on Central avenue refused on Sunday night last to let a physician drive through his vacant lot to get around the large snow drift in the road, so that he might be able to visit a very sick patient. The physician had to walk over a quarter of a mile through the deep snow, and leave his horse tied along the road until he came back. Is not the above act the heighth of meanness?

The record of vital statistics for Westfield township for the month of January, 1882, shows as follows: six births and five deaths. The causes of death described in the physician's certificates are divided as follows: 1 from accident, 1 from dysentery, 2 from scarlet fever and 1 from heart disease.

On Wednesday Feb. 1st. the Health Board was notified by Dr. T. V. Smith that Bridget Maloney, a servant girl in the employ of S. E. Beebe, Esq., residing on Prospect street, had the scarlet fever. The Board immediately notified Overseer of the Poor, Samuel E. Young, who took charge of the case. Mr. Young found it a very hard matter to secure a nurse to take care of the patient, but finally succeeded in getting one temporarily.—On Thursday afternoon, Feb. 2d, while the nurse was absent from the room for a short time, the patient, being delirious from the fever, broke through and jumped out of the window, falling about 20 feet to the ground. The nurse immediately notified the doctor, who found her wholly unconscious. She was removed to the basement and made as comfortable as possible. She never regained consciousness and died on Friday morning. She has no friends nor relatives in this country, but has a grandfather and brother residing in Ireland. Her parents are both dead. She had been at work for Mr. Beebe for about two months and recently sent money home to her brother to pay his passage to this country. Her remains were interred at Plainfield.

Constable March arrested Isadore Kunkle of Cranford on Friday last, upon complaint of the Central Railroad Co., for pulling the bell rope on one of their passenger trains and stopping the same on January 9th last. Kunkle gave bail for his appearance at the May term of the Union County Courts. The pulling of a bell-rope on any train of cars by any other person than an employee of the company is a State Prison offence, the full extent of punishment being two years hard labor.

A resident of our town about a week ago had stolen from his porch a nickel plated spittoon. He notified officer March who recovered it for him, the thief having hid the article under one of the stoops along Broad street. The thief is known and must look out for himself and not get into another scrape, or he will certainly be punished. It is only his youthfulness that saved him this time.

Our roads running out of the village towards the mountains, and Central avenue towards Rahway, were completely blockaded with the snow from the storm of Saturday last, so that the residents along the same had to turn out and dig their way through, it having drifted in some places from six to eight feet deep.

A jolly time was had at the residence of Mr. J. S. Miller, on Broad street, on Tuesday evening Feb. 7th. The friends of Mr. Miller from Orange, came over in a large sleigh holding ten couple, together with a number of friends from the village. They enjoyed themselves until the wee small hours in dancing. Music was furnished by Messrs Wilson and Applegate, who understand their business thoroughly.

The Town Committee met on Thursday evening last to settle all bills due by the Township, preparatory to making the annual statement of the Township finances, which must be published according to law, twenty days before the next town meeting, which occurs on Tuesday March 14th next. The Treasurer and Collector have their reports nearly ready. They expect to make as good a showing this year as last, if not better. Westfield Township is in as good a condition financially as any township in the County.

Mrs. John J. Willis has gone to South Carolina on a short visit and to look after her property interest located there.

On Wednesday morning, Mr. E. A. Clark, our butter merchant on Broad street, while driving his horse and loaded sled across the cross walk, corner of Broad and Elm streets, which was bare of snow, the horse slipped on the flagging and fell injuring himself seriously so that it was impossible to get him on his feet again. He had to be removed on a sled; he seemed to have no use whatever of his hind feet.

THE Mayor is after such occupants of property as neglect to clean the snow and ice from their sidewalks. The police call upon them and politely but emphatically serve a verbal notice of their duty.

AND now the wise scientists tell us there is death in drinking of impure ice water, which is gathered from ponds and streams polluted by impurities. This, together with the ice bug will make the ice merchant unhappy.

Voss' celebrated band of Newark, will "spiel" the music for the merry dance.

DURING Thursday evening of last week, Mr. Cornelius Westerfield, an old resident of this city, died at his residence on Front street, opposite the First Baptist Church. A MEMBER of the colored race arrested on the charge of terribly scalding another was transported to the County Jail, on Thursday, by Captain Dodd. Upon application to Court of Special Sessions the accused will be tried and dealt with in due season.

IT is with regret we have to report that, owing to taking cold in the face and a consequent increased swelling of the broken jaw, the very satisfactory and rapid improvement in the condition of Foreman T. G. Doane, has been temporarily suspended.

WE heartily and sincerely congratulate Craig A. Marsh Esq., on his recent appointment as a Master in Chancery. We know of no member of the legal profession who is more deserving, by reason of ability, of such promotion and continued advancement in the future.

THROUGH the vigilance of Capt. Dodd, there was recently arrested at the Plainfield depot a party caught in the act of trading in beer bottles bearing the private marks and lettering of dealers in that beverage. The accused was convicted of the charge and fined accordingly.

MR. Wallace Vail is still Postmaster of Plainfield, in spite of the fact that so many—a short time ago—were confident of their individual certainty of appointment. The various conflicting directions in which a Republican Senator or Representative will pledge himself, are—to put it mildly—contrary.

ON Thursday afternoon, Engine No. 104 of the C. R. R., going eastward, was the victim of a peculiar accident which stopped her progress and delayed travel for some time. The centre one of the locomotive's three immense drive-wheels on the left hand or "firemen's side," came off its axle, snapped the connecting rod and rolled itself clear off the track.

THE Committee on Streets should turn its attention to the condition of the water-sheds under the railroad bridges. In many instances they are no ought of repair as to be of no use in shielding pedestrians from the dripping water, and the loosened boards are liable to fall upon the heads of those passing beneath. Already have bridge lamps been broken thereby, and more serious consequences are likely to result.

THE many friends of Gershom Frazee, Esq., were agreeably astonished to learn of his arrival home in the city on Tuesday last, after an absence of over a year in Arizona Territory, where he has mining interests near Tombstone. "Gep" is looking well and report says comes back with unbounded wealth, intending to straighten out the present unhealthy condition of affairs in the Republican party of Plainfield, if it takes all next summer to do it.

MR. Richard L. Tobin, a young man of this city, was on Wednesday evening arrested on a charge of feloniously assaulting a married woman of this city. The later, however, either because she was unable to substantiate her charge or was unsuccessful in the attempt to extort money from the accused, failed to make an appearance in Court on Thursday and the accused was immediately discharged. Possibly the woman was mistaken in the person, but whatever the facts, such a charge against an innocent man is most unfortunate.

THE premises at No. 43, W. Front street, have been rented by Mr. R. Bruce Shann, son of the Hon. Josephus Shann, who has associated with himself Mr. S. J. Holland, and the two will act as agents of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., in this city. From the Rahway Democrat we copy the following in relation:

R. Bruce Shann, who has been engaged with Shann & Sons since they established the dry goods business in this city, has just received a responsible appointment by the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and will take charge of a branch office in Plainfield. Bruce is an energetic young man, well calculated for a business of that character which fact, some one connected with the company seems to be aware of, as he has been given a very "good lay."

Y. M. C. A.—Health Talk.

Thursday evening, Feb. 16th, at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, will occur the second of the current course of Health Talks. Henry H. Lowrie, City Physician, will speak on "Some of the causes of Nervous Disorders." The address of Dr. Tomlinson was practical and instructive not only but it interested all who attended. The same will be true of Dr. Lowrie's. All young men who can, should attend. Tickets, free, are for distribution at the Association rooms.

"Hon. Ephraim Muggins."

The Netherwood Chapel was well filled on Tuesday evening by an appreciative audience assembled to listen to that latest of æsthetes, the "Hon. Ephraim Muggins," on the "Hibernian Question." The lecturer's discourse was in a humorous strain (frequently a strain to be humorous) illustrated with lightning sketches of public characters and interspersed with songs of plebian quality. The organ solos covered a wide territory of style, and served as an opportunity of placing the name of "Wm. A. Beadle, of Brooklyn" in a prominent position on the programme. Mr. Muggins closed with the promise of an appearance, shortly, in this city.

New Railroad Arrangement.

One ticket will be issued for each month. The cost of each monthly ticket from Plainfield and neighboring stations is as follows: Dunellen, $8.40; Evona, $8.00; Plainfield, $7.60; Netherwood, $7.60; Fanwood, $7.20; Westfield, 6.80. All orders for Scholar's Tickets must be made on a certain form, signed by the Principal of the School or College, the parent or guardian, and the agent.

Common Council Proceedings.

An all night session—The propositions to light the City—The Mayor's nominations—Corporation Counsel Kimball's re-appointment laid over—Reports of City Officers—The Assessor's claims—The agreement with the Board of Freeholders—Ordinances to be adopted—Adjourned to Monday the 27th inst.

MONDAY EVENING, Feb., 6th, 1882.

The Council met in regular meeting at 8 o'clock. Present—President Rushmore and Messrs. Ginna, Newhall, Lindsley, Livingston, Gardner, Thompson, Depew, R. Simpson, J. Simpson and Kaufman.

Absent—none.

Minutes of last adjourned meeting, read and approved.

Mr. Lindsley presented a communication from the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, stating in effect that certain provisions of the ordinance governing the sale of liquor under a license, had not been complied with by many of those to whom licenses were granted at the previous meeting of the Council. All applicants to whom licenses were granted, were required to file a bond and pay certain fees and costs—some had not as yet fulfilled such conditions, and as their former licenses expired on the first of the present month, they were, consequently, now selling illegally. He thought that the truth of such fact being established, would justify the Council in a reconsideration and a reversal of its action.

On motion of Mr. Livingston, the communication was received and laid on the table.

Mr. Thompson presented a proposition from the Plainfield Gaslight Co., offering to light the streets of the city so far as its mains extended, twenty nights per month and all night, at 11 cents for each lamp per night. Also a proposition from the N. Y. and N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., to light all the lamps throughout the city with naptha, twenty nights per month at 8½ cents a lamp for all night. Provided in the latter case that a contract entered into be for not less than one year, and agreeing to accept the interest bearing warrants of the city.

It was moved by Mr. Depew, seconded by Mr. Kaufman, that the propositions be referred to the Lamp's Com., with power.

Mr. Thompson of the Committee asked for an expression of the Council regarding the matter. The city was now being lighted, partially with gas and partially with naptha, during 18 nights of each month but only until twelve o'clock. There, however, seemed to be a demand for lights all night. He desired to understand whether the Council favored the extra expense of lighting the streets all night, and whether it approved of contracting for a part of the city to be lit with gas, or of using naptha throughout.

Mr. J. Simpson understood that the extra expense of lighting the streets all night, would be about $1,000. If such a contract was made, it would take half of the city's entire resources of $10,000, to light it.

Mr. Livingston was in favor of lighting the streets all night, as the greater benefit from such a convenience would be attained after midnight.

Mr. Kaufman agreed with the previous speaker as to the benefit derived, but thought as a matter of economy it would be better to light the lamps during half of the night only.

Mr. Lindsley stated that the saving made by using naptha instead of gas was only about $250.

Mr. Thompson disagreed with the gentleman, and estimated that the cost of using naptha all over the city, and all night long, would be about $3,930; while they were paying for lights until midnight, $4,200.

Mr. Depew stated that the Gas Co., could reduce the burners to one-half the size and then be equal to naptha. The expense of lighting them would in that case be but a trifle more than the cost of naptha, while the expense of new lamps would be saved. He further said he was empowered to offer a proposition from the Plainfield Gaslight Co., to light the city so far as its pipes were laid, all night during 18 nights of each month, for the same price as was now paid for that service during 20 nights up to midnight.

The motion to refer the proposition with power, was then carried; all aye;

Mr. Newhall presented the claim of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., for Jan., $127 13. Ref'd.

By Mr. J. Simpson; John Flynn, rent of rooms, $8; H. H. Lowrie, balance of salary as City Physician, $42.75, and D. L. Hullick, boarding pauper, 7.50. Ref'd.

By Mr. Gardiner, police claims of C. W. Dodd, $58.34; R. Randolph, 22.34, and G. W. Grant, 26. Ref'd.

President Rushmore presented the following communication from the Mayor:

Received and placed on file.

By Mr. Lindsley the following:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Herewith find a detailed statement of the amount of work done by me upon the different streets of the City during the past year. The expense has been $917.46, upon about sixty miles of roadbed; of course this work has embraced only necessary repairs. Demands were frequent from various property owners for additional work upon the streets and graveled sidewalks, but the embarrassed state of the city finance and the limited means at the disposal of your honorable predecessors prevented the performance of any considerable amount of important and needful repairs. The streets will be in need of much greater expense the present year to keep them even in passable condition. Is it not a questionable policy to spend money every year, in merely patching up the roadways? The best interests of the City seem to call for more permanent work especially upon the main thoroughfares which are traveled so much. I respectfully submit that your Committee on Streets be requested to examine the condition of our public thoroughfares, as soon as the weather permits, and report to the Common Council what in their judgment should be done as early as practicable for the best care and protection of the streets of the City.

Amount of money spent on the streets from Feb. 1, 1881 to Feb. 1, 1882.

Front st. $43 47; 2nd 14.75; 3rd. 19.50; 4th. 7.25; 5th. 44.44; 6th. 26.50; 7th. 124. 10; 9th. 7.25; 3rd. place, 2.47; Arlington ave. 7.12; Belvidere ave. 23.65; Broadway, 31.50; Central ave. 3.75; Cottage Place, 17.12; Grant ave. 5 50; Hillside ave. 9.12; Liberty st. 16 31; Leland ave. 11.00; La Grand ave. 13.50; Madison ave. 24 00; North ave. 1.50; Prospect ave. 82 00; Plainfield ave. 20.00; Park ave. 171 06; Putnam ave. 6.50; Peace st. 7.35; Race road st. 27.50; Rahway road, 1.28; Road to Jackson school, .75; South ave. 12.38; Union st. 7.50; Woodlawn ave. 2.00; Washington ave. .63; Washington st. 10.19; Cross Walks, 10.12; Sewer basins, 82.90; Trees trimmed, 9 11; Total, $917.46.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. HAND, Street Com.

Plainfield, Feb. 1, 1882.

Received and placed on file.

By Mr. Livingston the following:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Feb. 1st, 1882.
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I would most respectfully submit my report as City Physician, for the quarter ending Jan. 31, 1882. I have issued sixteen (16) permits for the burial of bodies brought into the city for interment, and forty-seven (47) for the burial of persons dying within the City and North Plainfield; also two (2) for the burial of paupers. For all the above named permits I have received the sum of nineteen ($19.75) dollars and seventy-five cents. I would also report that I have attended twenty families by order of the Overseer of the Poor. Appended is the mortuary tabulation compiled from the permit stubs, showing actual mortality of the City for the period from Nov. 1, 1881 to Jan. 31, 1882, together with the cause of death of each decedent: Consumption, 8; pneumonia, 4; cholera infantum, 3; convulsions, 3; railroad accidents, 2; apoplexy, 4; heart disease, 2; fract. femur, 1; hepatitis, 1; hydrocephalus, 1; jaundice, 1; uræmia, 1; general debility, 1; typhoid fever, 1.

Very respectfully,
H. H. LOWRIE, M. D.,
City Physician.

Received and placed on file.

Also a communication from Assessor Hubbard, calling the attention of the Council to his unpaid bills for the assessment of the taxes during the past four years, as follows:

1878 - - - - - -	$410.46
1879 - - - - - -	430.92
1880 - - - - - -	465.80
1881 - - - - - -	453 05
Total - - - -	$1,760.23

The officer stated that a portion of his claim had been settled by the late Collector but not in full, and he asked the immediate action of the Council in the matter. He also expressed his willingness to meet a Committee from the Council at any time, to confer in relation.

Mr. Lindsley was astonished that claims of the sort should be allowed to run for four years unpaid. He thought the matter should be placed in the hands of a Committee at once for investigation and immediate settlement, and moved the reference of the communication to the Finance Com., for its examination and report. Seconded by Mr. Kaufman.

The motion was subsequently withdrawn, and a substitute offered by Mr. Livingston, referring to the Com. on Salaries, was carried.

Mr. J. Simpson from the Auditing Com., reported correct the following: J. VanWinkle, $75; W. L. Force & Bro., 100.35; Runyon & Leonard, 99.75; W. W. Corriell, 10; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., 128.93. On Motion of Mr. Depew, seconded by Mr. Kaufman, laid on the table.

Mr. Thompson from Lamps Com., reported its approval of the petition of Wm. M. Jennings to build a frame lean-to on his premises. Report accepted.

Mr. Ginna from Laws Com., reported back the bond of City Treasurer Van Winkle, as correct and approved. Bond accepted and placed on file.

Also on the report and resolution offered by the special Committee appointed to confer with the Board of Freeholders, which were referred to the Laws Com., at last meeting with power. That committee approved of the report but not of the resolution, and offered the following in place of such:

A resolution by Freeholder Ruckle:

WHEREAS, An alternative mandamus has been issued on behalf of the County of Union, requiring City of Plainfield to show cause at the February term of the Supreme Court why the taxes due to the State and County from the City of Plainfield should not be paid; and

WHEREAS, The Common Council of the City of Plainfield have proposed to pay at once the balance claimed for the year 1880, with interest and thirty per cent. of the amount of taxes due for the year 1881, upon condition that the County agree to postpone the argument on the application for such mandamus till the June term of Court; therefore

Resolved, That if the City of Plainfield on or before February 15, 1882, pay to the County Collector the sum of $3,413.02 principal and interest due for taxes for the year 1880, and the sum of $3,855 being thirty per cent. of the taxes due from said city for the year 1881, the County hereby agrees to postpone the argument on said motion for a mandamus till the June term of the Supreme Court; but if the balance due or any part thereof remain unpaid until the June term of the Supreme Court, the right of the County to apply for mandamus to compel its payment shall not be impaired by these resolutions, and that our Committee be empowered to carry out these resolutions.

I certify the above to be a true copy.
JOHN L. CROWELL, Clerk.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

The State ex rel. Patrick Sheridan, County Collector of Union County, vs. The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield and Jeremiah Van Winkle, Treasurer, &c.	on Mandamus, Taxes 1880.
The same vs. The same	on Mandamus, Taxes 1881.

It is agreed by the relator and the respondents in the above stated cause:

First. That the respondents will, on or before February 15, 1882, pay to the relator the balance of taxes and interest due for the year 1880, and each party will pay his own costs.

Second. The respondents will pay on or before February 15, 1882, thirty per cent. of the balance of the taxes now due to the relator for the year 1881.

Third. If these payments are made as above provided, the relator will discontinue the suit for taxes of the year 1880, and will postpone the argument of the suit for the taxes of 1881 until the June term of the Supreme Court of this State.

Fourth. The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield to be at liberty to use the funds now in his hands and to be received by him from whatever source between now and June 1, 1882, for municipal purposes.

Fifth. If the balance due the relator for State and County taxes of 1881 be not paid by June 1st, the relator shall be at liberty to apply for mandamus for the payment of the same, as though this stipulation or agreement had not been made; such mandamus, if allowed by the Court, shall issue only against the Treasurer and Corporation of the City of Plainfield, commanding them to pay the balance found due out of such moneys as shall come into the hands of said Treasurer after June 1, 1882.

Nothing in this agreement shall be construed to affect the relator's remedy by mandamus, except as herein stated, nor shall it be construed to affect any defence which might now be interposed by the respondents, except so far as the same is herein stated.

Feb. 3, 1882.

P. H. GILHOOLY,
County Attorney.
GILHOOLY & MARSH,
Attorneys of Relators.
C. W. L. MARTINE, Director,
J. F. HUBBARD,
Chosen Freeholders.
P. SHERIDAN, Collector.
S. A. GINNA,
HENRY LINDSLEY,
ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON,
Com. of Common Council of Plainfield.

Mr. Depew again insisted that the opinion of the Corporation Counsel should be received, and moved that the report and the above agreement be referred to that officer for his written opinion. Seconded by Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Ginna stated that a resolution of about the same effect had been referred to the Committee with power at that last meeting, but not desiring to take any advantage of such power the committee offer a substitute and submit its terms to the approval of the Council. He urged such a settlement with the County at once, so as to stop present mandamus proceedings which were sure to be decided against the city, besides involving great expense. He read a number of decisions on certain cases claimed to be identical with the city's, in support of his statement that the city would surely be defeated. He also stated that the Corporation Counsel had that day expressed himself as against any settlement of the kind, so that to wait for his written opinion would be of no avail. The delay would also be disastrous, as unless the agreement was immediately accepted, another year of litigation and accumulating interest would ensue.

Mr. Lindsley was in favor of a reference of the matter to the Corporation Counsel "if his unbiased and unprejudiced opinion could be received"; but he realized the fact that that officer was "pledged to the other side," and could not be expected to act in conformity with the agreement, against the influence brought to bear upon him. "By the compromise proposed," he continued, "the money now locked up—not by the action of the Board of Freeholders but by the action of the last Council—could be used to pay those holding just claims against the City for services rendered. This would be done to our own honor and the satisfaction of a majority of the citizens of Plainfield."

Mr. Depew considered that no member had a right to claim a foreknowledge of what the opinion of the Corporation Counsel would be, on any matter. "If such an officer was appointed and paid for his services, his opinion on all such steps should be asked. If he is an incompetent person for the position, he should be removed; but just because it is believed by certain gentlemen in the Council that he holds an opinion contrary to theirs, they endeavor to prevent the matter being referred."

Mr. Ginna replied that the committee had shown every paper, agreement and resolution in relation, to the Corporation Counsel, and he had stated that he was "committed" to oppose all such steps.

Further discussion was stopped upon the moving of the previous question, by Mr. Livingston seconded by Mr. J. Simpson.

Mr. Depew's motion to refer to the Coporation Counsel, was then lost by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Depew, Kaufman and Thompson.

Negative—President Rushmore and Messrs. Ginna, Newhall, J. Simpson, R. Simpson, Lindsley, Livingston and Gardner.

Mr. Livingston moved that the report be accepted, the agreement adopted and the Treasurer directed to pay the money as therein provided. Seconded by Mr. Ginna.

Mr. Kaufman asked for information, before voting, as to whether the agreement committed the city to the payment of State and County taxes in future, in spite of the fact that the City may not have the power to collect such.

The Clerk read the last clause of the agreement, which covered such point.

Mr. Kaufman then strongly criticised the course of the Board in agreeing to waive such rights as it claimed. He thought if the law expressly required that the full quota of State and County taxes should be paid out of the first moneys received from all sources, the Board was wrong in agreeing that such funds might be used for another purpose.

Mr. Thompson thought that the Council had no assurance from the Treasurer that he would pay out the money for the city purposes even after it was released.

Mr. Depew regretted that as he had so strongly opposed any action without the Corporation Counsel's opinion, he was compelled to vote against the motion and thus place himself in the false position of being antagonistic to the Board of Freeholders.

Mr. Newhall expressed himself as undesirous of acting in the matter without the Counsel's opinion, but as such was unattainable at once, he should vote for the motion. He had perfect confidence in the committee and believed that it would act only for the city's best interests.

Mr. Livingston's motion was then carried by the following vote.

Affirmative—President Rushmore and Messrs. Newhall, Ginna, J. Simpson, R. Simpson, Kaufman, Lindsley, Livingston and Gardner.

Negative—Messrs. Depew and Thompson.

The Laws Com. also reported back the ordinances referred to it at last meeting.

"An Ordinance providing for the licensing and regulating of hackmen, pedlers, &c.," was then read its first time by the Clerk.

On motion the following were read the second time section by section, adopted, and ordered engrossed and published preparatory to a third reading.

"An ordinance to provide for the erection of barriers to prevent accidents."

"An ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a police force."

"An ordinance relating to the duties of the Street Commissioner."

"An ordinance providing for the licensing and regulating of hackmen, pedlers, &c."

Mr. Livingston of License Com., referring to the communication of the Rev. Mr. Stockton, stated that the City Treasurer had received the fees of all to whom liquor licenses had been granted at the last meeting of the Council.

Mr. Gardner, from Police Com., reported corrected the claims of Dodd, Randolph and Grant. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Lindsley, from Sal's. Com., reported correct the claims of H. H. Baker, J. O'Neil, N. Runyon and W. Hand. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. R. Simpson, from Streets Com., reported correct the bill of W. Hand. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Mr. Thompson presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is of the first importance to the city of Plainfield that such general legislation shall be obtained as will enable this city to collect its State and County taxes, and to this end will provide a way for the issue of the proper warrant by the magistrate and such as will establish a tax lien on real estate.

Resolved, That our representatives in the State Senate and Assembly are hereby requested to urge the adoption of such legislation as will cover these requirements and furnish means for our reasonable municipal expenses.

Resolved, That as covering a portion of these requirements Senate bill number forty-eight (48) introduced by Senator Vail, has the approval of this Council.

Resolved, That the City Clerk be directed to transmit forthwith to Messrs. R. A. Vail and F. L. Sheldon, at Trenton, copies of these resolutions.

Messrs. Lindsley and Ginna expressed their disapprobation of any resolution that might imply an inability on the part of the city to collect its taxes.

On motion of Mr. Newhall, seconded by Mr. Ginna, the resolution was referred to the Laws Com.

Mr. Ginna presented a resolution to the effect that the Corporation Counsel be directed to sign all papers necessary to postpone the present proceedings against the city by the Board of Freeholders, as provided for in the agreement entered upon. Carried; all aye.

Also a resolution that the Finance Com., be requested to obtain from Tax Collector Moore, an account of all money collected by him since his last statement—allowing such officer to deduct his fees for services from the amounts he may have received.

Messrs. Depew and Lindsley objected to any resolution allowing a city officer to pay himself out of the moneys he may collect for the city.

On motion of Mr. Ginna, ref'd to Sal's Com.

Also a resolution, which was adopted, rescinding the resolution passed at the last meeting authorizing the Collector to issue his warrants for all taxes remaining unpaid, March 1st, 1882, and to vigorously prosecute collection of same.

Mr. Livingston presented a resolution that a warrant of $1,500 be drawn on the city funds for any deficiency over the amount of State and County funds in the hands of the City Treasurer, necessary to carry out the provisions of the agreement with the Board of Freeholders. Carried; all aye.

Mr Depew offered a resolution to have the Collector notify delinquent tax payers that 7 per cent. will be charged on taxes paid before March 1st. next, and costs, and after that date 10 per cent. interest with penalties and costs. Carried.

Also a resolution authorizing the City Treasurer to pay the note of $3,500, with interest in full, previously falling due and charged up by the bank. Adopted; all aye.

The nominations of the Mayor for the appointable offices of the city, were then taken up and all unanimously confirmed with the exception of Corporation Counsel Kimball. That reappointment was, on motion, laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Kaufman, the Janitor was authorized to purchase the kindling wood necessary for use in the Council room.

On motion of the same, the Special Committee appointed to confer with the Board of Freeholders, was discharged.

The rules were suspended, and Mr. J. Simpson presented the application of P. Lynch for a license to keep a saloon and sell spirituous and fermented liquors on the premises formerly occupied by the late F. Schumm. Ref'd to License Com.

The Council then (Tuesday morning,) adjourned until Monday evening the 27th inst.

Next Sunday Evening

Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, pastor of the M. E. Church, will speak on the subject of the Triple Alliance, or, the late election, our City Council and the liquor question. All persons interested in the future welfare of our city, either as christians or citizens, and especially all persons who will be entitled to vote at our next election for City Council, are invited to be present and will be cordially welcomed.

LADY BEAUTIFIERS.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.
It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for IT ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

CHARLES MARSHALL.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

Young Charles Marshall was spending the summer vacation with his college chum, Fred Davenport. The Marshalls, who lived in an adjoining State, were people in quite moderate circumstances, and Charles had been brought up to practice pretty strict economy. The elegant living and lavish hospitality he found at the fine Davenport residence was a striking novelty to him.

He enjoyed it all exceedingly, and was greatly flattered by the polite and considerate attention he received, although he did not approve of some of the ways of the household, which were unfamiliar to him. Sometimes he would indulge in satirical comments, which he doubtless thought to be very smart, but which were, in reality, unbecoming and rude.

One damp, rainy day, Miss Margaret, his chum's sister, stood by the open library fire cutting into narrow strips a letter she had that morning received and had just read. She then deftly twisted them into paper-lighters, placing them one by one as they were finished into a quaint old green porcelain jar that stood on the carved mantel.

Young Marshall at the time was lounging in an easy chair near by, watching the fair girl with an amused look as she rapidly wound the dainty spirals. At length he spoke up in a sarcastic tone of voice, "What queer ideas of economy you people seem to have. Now, when matches cost less than two cents a hundred, I am unable to appreciate the economy of saving them by devoting valuable time to making paper lighters."

"I thought I had explained to you once," and Margaret laughed pleasantly, "that we don't use paper lighters as a matter of economy at all, although the fact that they save matches is not to be lost sight of. It is a matter of taste entirely. The smoke of a lucifer match of any kind, even parlor matches, is disagreeable and is almost sure to set some of us off coughing or sneezing."

"Well, it strikes me as a decidedly objectionable way of treating the missives of one's correspondence," went on the young cavalier, presently. "Rather of an unfriendly 'cut' I should say."

"I fancy I am the best judge of what disposal I make of my correspondence," replied Miss Margaret, with some spirit. "All important letters I preserve, of course, but mere chatty notes from my school friends accumulate so fast that I think it best to make way with them. Now, Ida Stanly, my chum at Vassar, who affects this pink stationery, does not object at all to my using her letter to brighten my jar of paper-lighters. Just look. Is not the shade lovely? It is just the color of the dear girl's cheeks."

One morning two or three days later the young man handed Miss Margaret a roll of music which he had volunteered to copy for her. "I have had no end of difficulty over it," said he, as he glanced impatiently out of the window. "I upset my inkstand in my writing desk, and so completely daubed over a letter I had just finished that I was obliged to copy it. And at length, in order to be in season to take a drive with your brother at the hour appointed, I was compelled to hurry this music. It presents a much less neat appearance than I wish it did."

The span of horses were now at the door, and the young man left the room, drawing on his gloves as he departed. He had been gone a few moments when Miss Margaret proceeded to look over the manuscript music. Lying between the sheets in full view was one page of young Marshall's blotted letter he had referred to. At the first glance she saw her name, and before she was really aware that the blotted paper had evidently been placed in the roll by mistake, she had read:

"This is a rare old place to visit, I assure you. The Davenports spend money as though it grew on bushes, and yet they use 'paper-lighters' to save matches, and fancy themselves to be very economical, as we have to be at home. By the way, I suspect Miss Margaret is more than half in love with me. She refused to pay a visit at the home of her very intimate friend, Ida Stanly, while I was here. How do I know this to be a fact, ask you, brother Tom? Why, thanks to those same 'paper-lighters.' This Ida Stanly's letter had been cut up into strips, rolled up and placed in the economical porcelain jar over the mantel in the library. I just abstracted them from their receptacle, carefully unrolled them, matched the strips and so possessed myself of a pretty array of girlish secrets. Oh, this is a jolly place to visit, and one small economy is much better than all economy at home; so I don't know but I had better make love to Margaret, although—"

Miss Margaret was very indignant of course, but she quietly dropped the blotted sheet of paper into the grate and mentioned the matter to no one at the time. She treated her brother's college friend and chum with her habitual courtesy, until the vacation was ended and the two young men had left the Davenport residence for college.

It was a great puzzle to Charles Marshall why he was never again invited to visit the Davenports, and why Miss Margaret answered a letter he wrote her, soon after he arrived at college, only by a brief and somewhat curt message to him in a letter to her brother. About the same time he was astonished to find, as he entered his room one evening, that his old friend, Fred Davenport, had taken his books, pictures, and his part of the furniture, to another room to share them with a new chum. Both the young men subsequently graduated, and for a long time Charles Marshall's path in life was unknown to the Davenports.

The other day on reading in the morning newspaper that Charles Marshall, a business man in S—, had betrayed an important trust, Miss Margaret, now Mrs. Dr. Lawrence, said: "I am not at all surprised. Any young man with so little sense of honor as to abuse the sacred rites of hospitality as he did at our home, could not be expected to prove true in any position," and then for the first time she told this story.

Rumor doth double, like the voice and echo.

The man who minds his own business has a good steady employment.

A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner; neither do uninterrupted prosperity and success qualify for usefulness and happiness.

Never argue at the table, but tell pleasant stories, relate or read anecdotes, and look out for the good of all. Sometimes a single anecdote from a paper starts a conversation that lasts during meal-time.

PARSON BRIGGS.

The other day Parson Briggs, and old time preacher from "away in the country," paid his first visit to Little Rock. He went to the residence of old Squire Muckle, who at one time had lived in the parson's neighborhood. The Squire's family were exceedingly glad to see the parson, for years ago he had taken off his saddle at the Squire's gate; had eaten corn bread and cabbage with the family and had sung and prayed until the boys, who had plowed all day, fell asleep. After singing the old familiar songs and praying the old familiar prayer, the Squire conducted the parson to the bed-room designed for the rest of the good old servant.

'What do you call this?' asked the parson, regarding with an air of interest a mosquito-bar suspended above the bed.

'Why, that is a mosquito-bar.'

'What account is it?'

'To keep off mosquitoes.'

'Brother Muckle, I thought that you were too sensible a man to give way to these town fixin's. You told me that when I came to see you that we would have a revival of the old days. Now you want to hang the thing over me. Take it down, please. I'm afraid that the vanity that I've allers heard lurked about these towns is taking a hold of you.'

The bar was taken down and the old man blew out his candle, which he always carried in his saddle-bag, with a 'puff,' and retired.

The Squire and Mrs. Muckle slept in an adjoining room. They had been in bed but a few moments, when Mrs. Muckle remarked:

'What was that noise?'

'Pow, pang!' came from the adjoining room.

'I don't know what it is,' answered the Squire, stuffing the corner of the pillow into his mouth.

'Slap,' came from the next room.

'Did you hear that?' exclaimed Mrs. Muckle.

'It's nothing,' said the Squire.

'Something is shaking the bed, Mr. Muckle.'

'Slap, slap.'

'Go in there and see what's the matter with the parson, Mr. Muckle.'

'Chuck, chuck, chuck,' was all that Muckle could say.

'You act like a man that hasn't got any sense. You'd lie here and see a man die in the next room.'

'How can I lay here and (chuck) see a man in the (chuck) next room? The door's shut and the lights out.'

'Slap, bang!'

'You must go in there, Mr. Muckle.'

'Why don't you go?'

'Think I'm going into a man's room? All right, if the old man dies it ain't my fault;' and Mrs. Muckle turned over and Muckle chuckled himself to sleep.

Next morning when the parson appeared at the breakfast table he presented a swollen appearance. His face was covered with bumps and his hair looked as though he had the nettle rash.

'I lay there and fit them things all night,' said he dolefully. 'Reckon you'd better put up that thin looking sheet,' and bowing over his plate, he said: "Gracious Lord, make us thankful for these, Thy many blessings."

IT'S MEAN GAME.

A correspondent writes: I had some snipe on toast in Harrisburg, Pa. I saw on a bill of fare:

'Snipe on toast, sixty cents.'

Snipe on toast would be almost too healthy food to feed people who had been floating on a raft three weeks, feeling on boot legs. Says I to the waiter:

'Give me some snipe on toast.'

By and by he came in and put down some toast, and I kept on reading. I sat there an hour. Then I rang the gong. The waiter entered, and says I:

'Where the deuce is my meat?'

'They've been on the table an hour.'

'I didn't order plain toast. I want a snipe on it.'

'There is snipe on it.'

Then I drew close up to the table and I saw a black speck on the toast, and I said: 'You'll swear that's a snipe?'

'Yes.'

'You would make a good linen buyer, you would,' said I.

'It's snipe on toast, anyhow,' said he.

'How did it get on it?'

'That snipe's all right; it's a full sized one, too,' said he.

'I'm glad you told me that's a full sized snipe; for, do you know, young man, when I sat out there reading, I saw a black speck on that toast, but I took it for a fly, and I'm glad to be informed that it is a snipe. Now you can take that snipe away and bring me a turkey on toast; and I want a full sized turkey, too.'

I ain't hankering after snipe since that episode. I could have blown that snipe through a putty blower without hurting the snipe or putty blower either. Snipe on toast may be game, but it's mean game.

HE'D SHOOT HIM.

Six or eight congenial spirits sat around a stove in a Grand River grocery the other night, and after several other subjects had been exhausted, some one introduced that of panics in churches, theatres and balls. This gave Mr. Hopewell a chance to remark:

'Gentlemen, I just long to be there.'

'Where?'

'Why, in one of these panics. Yes, sir, I'd give a new twenty dollar bill to be in the theatre one night when there was an occasion for a panic.'

'Why?'

'Why, because one cool, level headed man could stop the thing as easily as you could end up that barrel of flour.'

'Well, I dunno about that,' observed one of the sitters. 'There is something awful in the cry of fire, and hear it when and where you may it startles and frightens. What would you do in a theatre in case there was a cry of fire and a rush?'

'I'd stand upon my seat, pull a revolver from my pocket and shout out that I'd shoot the first man who attempted to crowd or rush. One cool man would check the panic in ten seconds.'

While the subject was being continued the grocer withdrew to the rear end of the store, poured a little powder on a board, and gave three or four men the wink. Directly there was a bright flash, yells of "fire!" and "powder!" and every man sprang up and rushed. Hopewell didn't spring up and talk of shooting. On the contrary, he fell over a lot of baskets piled between him and the door, got up to plow his way over a rack of brooms, and when he reached the sidewalk he was on all-fours, white as a ghost, and so frightened that he never looked back until he reached the opposite side of the street.

He who will stop every man's mouth must have a great deal of meal.

Corn is cleaned by wind and vicious habits by chastisement.

GOING FOR A NUISANCE.

The Somerset Gazette of a recent date, contained the following:

"The citizens of Bound Brook and of Piscataway township have a nuisance in their midst which ought to be abated without further delay. It is a house of which everybody has public knowledge; a place of resort for loafers, a few professional men who have no regard for themselves as men, and miscellaneous crowds without morals who gather there in the evening, particularly in the Summer. It is a lager house, worse than if it had the smallpox within its walls, corrupting to the community and the source of much evil. The Middlesex Grand Jury have hitherto failed to indict the house, but it is alleged by many that the reason is because of the high standing of some New Brunswick citizens who frequent the place.

We have gathered facts respecting this house, with a view to such publication of them as will compel the parties concerned to pay some respect to public sentiment and abate the nuisance. If the churches of Bound Brook and the best citizens of that vicinity do not arouse and take some action, it will be our duty to make an expose, which will not be as pleasant reading as it will be true."

THE HOTEL CLERK'S DIAMOND.

A very singular accident occurred in a Cleveland hotel the other day. One of the dining-room girls at the high-toned & ff-e house of Strive & Sweat was standing near the door talking with the head clerk of the Cheatem House. To shield her fair face from the sun's rays she made an awning of her little hand. Among the bands of gold that encased her fingers was one containing a solitaire diamond about the size of a door knob. A sun-beam struck it and glanced to a corresponding knob on the shirt front of the hotel clerk; it melted the setting of the pin and the stone fell, striking the young man on the left foot, breaking two of his toes. The bystanders say that before descending to his shirt front the reflected ray from the young lady's ring played around the young man's cheek but a careful examination shows that it left no trace there of its intense heat.

Dutch fishermen kill their fish as soon as they take them from the water, preventing them from dying slowly and having their tissues softened. The superiority of the flavor of the fish killed by Dutchmen when compared with those which die slowly in French markets, is very great.

One of the most clearly defined attacks of hydrophobia ever reported has just resulted in the death, at Camden, of a boy 16 years old, named William Gardiner. He was bitten on the hand last September by a dog of the accursed Spitz breed, but the wound healed and the boy forgot all about it, nor, so far as could be judged from his manner and talk, did it recur to his memory till after the fatal attack set in. During his illness a quantity of the frothing saliva from his mouth got in his father's eye, and some lodged in a wound on the hand of his sister Kate. Both father and sister are now very ill with nervous prostration, induced by lyssophobia or spurious hydrophobia.

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First.

Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.

Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.

Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.

Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.

Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.

Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

POETRY.

THE TWO AGES.

BY HENRY S. LEIGH.

Folks were happy as days were long
In the old Arcadian times;
When life seemed only a dance and song,
In the sweetest of all sweet climes.
Our world grows bigger, and, stage by stage,
As the pitiless years have rolled,
We've quite forgotten the Golden Age,
And come to the age of Gold.

Time went away in a sheepish way
Upon Thessaly's plains of yore;
In the nineteenth century lambs at play
Mean mutton, and nothing more.
Our swains at present are far too sage
To live as we lived of old;
So they coupled the crook of the Golden Age
With a hook of the Age of Gold.

From Corydon's reed the mountains round
Heard news of the latest flame;
And Tityrus made the woods resound
With echoes of Daphne's name.
They kindly let us a lasting gauge
Of their musical heart we are told;
And the Pandean pipe of the Golden Age
Brings mirth to the Age of Gold.

Dwellers in huts and in marble halls—
From shepherdess up to the queen—
Care little for bonnets and less for shawls,
And nothing for a crinoline.
But now simplicity's not the rage
And its funny to think how cold
The dress they wore in the Golden Age
Would seem in the Age of Gold.

Electric telegraphs, printing, gas,
Tobacco, balloons and steam,
And little events that have come to pass
Since the days of the old regime;
In spite of Lempriere's dazzling page,
I'd give—though it may seem bold—
A hundred years of the Golden Age
For a year of the Age of Gold.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN EAST BLOW.

BY SUSAN W. DAY.

The summer hotel among the mountains was almost deserted. Half a dozen of the late-staying guests were gathered in the little parlor for the last evening. A high September wind turned their thoughts to the desolateness of the winter months in the White Hills. Maud Wellington, always a leader in talk and action, called to the landlord;

"Come here, please, Mr. Little; tell us how you ever live here through the winter?"

"Wa'al, you jest come up here and try one of our east blows! I tell you, you don't know anything about the maountings. You only come up here when it's warm and nice, and Mr. George he drives his team around, what d'ye call it?"

"Tandem," suggested George.

"Yes, tantrum; and he takes you girls to drive, and it's all very pretty. Jest let him be here in the winter, and he'd drive tantrum, sure enough."

"Wouldn't it be fun?" asked Maud. "Would you really take us in, if we came up next winter?"

"I guess most likely I could. You'd have to kinder put up with things, though. I'd be real glad to see you, naow; the winters is awful lonely!"

"I am in earnest, and I will come if the rest will. I think it would be very jolly," said Maud.

"Yes, quite too awfully ghastly jolly," murmured her brother George, whose slang was overwhelming.

The others all promised they would join her if she formed a party, and the next morning they separated, and forgot all about the plan and the promise, as people do.

It was late in December; the holidays were approaching. Maud Wellington was restless and dissatisfied. The season had been very disappointing. Everybody was dull and stupid; Germans were tiresome, dinner more so, and she was tired of Boston and every one in it. And all this was because a certain Thomas Sedgwick Thornton had not appeared in the city, as she had expected. It was none the less true because she would have denied it, and that she had always laughed at him, and professed to hold him in the most perfect contempt. She knew perfectly well that he was a hard-working lawyer in New York, with little time for holiday-making, but she was quite unreasonable to think that such trifles as business made no difference. He ought to have admired her enough to have made any sacrifices, and have made haste to continue the summer's acquaintance. It made no difference to her, also, that there were many others as assiduous in their devotion as he was remiss. He was the Mordecai at the gate, and she was unhappy. The wind howling round the corner of the house took her thoughts back to the last evening in the mountains, and a sudden resolve made her spring to her feet.

"Mother," she cried, rushing into the warm library, where her mother sat dozing by the fire, "I have made up my mind. We will go up to the mountains, and see how they look with the snow on them."

"You crazy girl! we won't do anything of the sort."

Mrs. Wellington always made a point of seeming to oppose her daughter's plans, but she always did just what her children told her to do. Maud wasted no words in entreaty, but coolly told her that she must go, without more ado.

With Maud to decide was to act. George was delighted with the prospect of such a "lark"; he had not known what to do with the holidays. Notes were immediately sent to those who had been with them when the proposition was made, and to several others who might be congenial spirits. When they had written nearly all, Maud said with perfect carelessness.

"I suppose you will have to write to that Mr. Thornton. I don't think he would add much to the general hilarity, but I am afraid it won't do to leave him out and ask all the rest who were there."

"Right you are!" said George. "I'll send an invite to the old duffer, he's not half a bad fellow after all. Of course he won't put in appearance."

But it is the impossible which happens. For some occult reason, Mr. Thornton chose to join this wild expedition, and presented himself at the appointed time at the rendezvous. With the exception of himself and poor Mrs. Wellington, who looked already victimized, it was as gay a party as Boston could furnish.

As usual, it was Maud who was leader and prime favorite. But she was admirably seconded by three of her friends, only a little less brilliant and daring than she. Then there were two or three society men, who would have gone anywhere that Maud and her set proposed. Little did they care for the grandeur of mountain scenery in its severe winter dress, but the trip promised much fun and unlooked for opportunities for carrying out certain intentions. Last and noisiest of all came George Wellington, a Harvard Sophomore, with an equally reckless and hair brained classmate, whom the young ladies alternately petted, snubbed, and used as foils in their more serious schemes.

Mr. Thornton felt out of his element, as he had done so many times during the summer. He was not keyed to the same pitch of high spirits and unceasing gayety. He was grave, quiet—a man who was terribly in earnest about everything he did. From the first moment he saw her he became fascinated with Maud, against his will and better judgment. Her beauty, wit, caprices, would not let themselves be forgotten. He was angry with her, he heartily disapproved of her, a dozen times a day; and then, when he was most indignant with her, he discovered that he loved her, with a love which he could not reason away nor live down. He was more bitterly enraged with her than ever, to-day, as the cars rapidly bore them towards the mountains. He cursed himself and his folly in having joined them. No one seemed to want him. Maud, with her usual perverseness, had given him a careless greeting, and turned away to lavish her brightest smiles and merriest speeches on Gilbert Livingston, one whom he cordially hated and despised. Mrs. Wellington alone seemed to need him. She was nervous, weak and timid, dreading the journey, and unable to control her children's madness, so she clung to Thornton with instinctive trust in his sober strength. He never dreamed, being blind as men are, that Maud saw every motion that he made, that she had so placed herself as to hear every word he spoke. He only saw, with wrath and shame, that she was flirting openly, desperately, with that soulless, brainless Livingston.

But even Thornton shook off his gloom when they came among the hills. The highest peaks were white with snow, reflecting the setting sun with dazzling brilliancy against the marvelous blue sky. It was very cold, but clear and still, when they left the cars for their drive of a few miles. Mr. Little met them with his six-horse stage; the wind had not left enough snow on the rising ground for sleighing, to Maud's regret. It was an exhilarating drive. The air was like wine, and made each inhalation an increasing joy. The laughter and the sweet, ringing voices of the girls no longer jarred upon him; he was a boy again himself, and startled them by his wit and gayety. Maud was delighted. She warmed toward him, and left poor Livingston shivering out of sunlight of her favor. It was all going to be a perfect success, she thought, and blessed herself for the inspiration.

The hotel, when they reached it, after the stars had come out superbly in the clear air, looked as if it prepared for a siege. It was closed except a few rooms on the ground floor of the west and south sides. On the north and east every blind was securely fastened.

"Have you had an east blow yet?" asked Maud, as they dashed up to the door.

"No, miss, not yet," said the landlord. "I guess we will hev one pretty quick though. The maounting hev kinder looked like it all day."

"I hope it will come, I should consider our whole trip a failure if it does not."

Mr. Little shook his head and smiled doubtfully. "I guess when you've seen one, you won't be likely to want to see another very quick."

The next day was a gloriously clear. There was no wind stirring as yet. It was the stillness that roused the forebodings of the landlord. His guests had a magnificent walk, they said; they climbed part way up Starr King, and had a view a hundred times more superb than they ever imagined it could be. It had been hard work climbing over the slippery rocks, and they came back to the house delightfully tired and in undiminished spirits. The general hilarity flagged not during the cozy evening round the open fire, and one and all pronounced their satisfaction and delight—all except Mrs. Wellington, who had not stirred from the fire all day, and grew more and more nervous as the talk about the expected east blow continued.

In the morning Mr. Little's predictions were verified. The city people's ears were startled by what he had so often described as the "roaring of the maountings." This strange, steadily increasing roar, which seemed so inexplicable, filled some with alarm, some with most enjoyable excitement. Mr. Little called them to see the "churning of the clouds up the chasm," and, looking they forgot to smile because he pronounced the ch of the last word as he did in the first. It was a sight, as the angry clouds came up, rolling over and over, as it seemed, through the gap which opened out toward the east.

Within the house there were hurried preparations. Mrs. Little and her sons went about making everything as fast as possible, while her husband and his two men went to the barns to give the cattle and horses food and water to last them till the storm had passed; for when it had reached its height, neither man nor beast could stand against it. Thornton, George, and his classmate prepared to go down to the barn and help them, for the time seemed very short. Every moment the tempest increased in violence. Quick as thought Maud wrapped herself in her fur cloak, and said she would go with them. Her mother was so distressed that she would have desisted, but that she caught Thornton's look of disapproval and disgust, she thought, and then nothing could have prevented her. Seizing her brother's hand, she rushed out of the house. The barns were west of the hotel, some little distance down the hill. The wind carried them on as if they were straws, and drove them breathless against the building. Maud had never dreamed of its force. When they were inside the barn, and the door had been closed with difficulty, Thornton said to her, sternly:

"This is perfect folly. If you do not go back to the house instantly, you will not be able to go at all."

Mr. Little said the same; the storm roared so that they could scarcely hear each other even then. Maud was bitterly ashamed of her folly, but not one whit afraid. Even Thornton could not help admiring even while he blamed her. He asked Little to take her and "the boys" back to the house. He, himself, being strong and large, would stay and help the men. It was the best plan. The four had a hard fight to return. Holding each other's hand, one keeping behind the other as much as possible, they struggled up the hill. Once they fell flat to the earth, but regaining their feet after a moment, they toiled on, and reached the protection of the house. Little said he had never seen the "blow come on so fast." There was no use in trying to go back to the barn; the men would do what was necessary, and his strength was half used up by his efforts already. After Maud had regained her breath she went to the window, and would not stir or speak. Her eyes were fixed on the barns. The others gathered around the fire in awed silence. The terror of the storm was upon them. It seemed as if nothing could stand against its violence. Mrs. Wellington was nearly fainting with fright. She was certain that the house would fall. Once Maud turned and said, in a strained, hard voice:

"Mr. Little, how long does this sort of thing generally last?"

"Wa'al, it begins, abaout noon to be the worst, and it keeps it up till next morning."

"Ought not the men to come up pretty soon?" she asked again, with ill-concealed anxiety.

"Oh yes, they'll be up directly, I guess."

But they did not come. Once Maud saw three figures creep around the partially sheltered side of the building, but when they reached its front they were struck down, and she saw them crawl on their hands and knees back into the sheds. The full horror of the circumstance struck her. Calling Mr. Little, she told him what she had seen.

"Then they must stay there till it is over?" she said, in a low, unnatural voice.

"Do try to help them," she pleaded, so earnestly that the men all resolved to try, though it was of little use. Taking a rope, Little tied all the volunteers firmly together; even the "howling swell," Livingston, as George called him, offered to help. When all was ready, they crept along the western side of the house with little difficulty. But when they reached the corner, they went down like planks. They tried again and again, and then came back into the house tired and disheartened.

The short afternoon had passed; the early darkness made the terror of the storm more awful. Maud still strained her eyes through the deepening gloom. The storm at that moment was at its height. Clutching the window-frame tightly with her fingers, she pressed her dilated eyes against the pane, and saw with speechless horror the roof of the large barn swept off as if it had been paper. It was all the more terrible because not a sound of the falling timbers could be heard above the ceaseless roaring of the wind.

It was an awful night. No one thought of sleeping. They clustered together about the fire in silent terror. From time to time Mr. Little spoke reassuringly. There was no danger for themselves, he said; the house was firmly built; large beams passed diagonally from floor to ceiling through the partition walls; it was not possible that they could give way. But the awed hearts were not easily assured. Maud alone had no thoughts for herself or the safety of the house. She had seen the roofless barn, and she strove to picture the fate of Thornton, and the two men with him, without food, without fire, with no roof to shelter them, and perhaps crushed by falling timbers, for it had been too dark to see the extent of the disaster. She told no one of the sight which she had witnessed. Only she and Little knew what had happened. All that was best in her came to the surface, that long, agonizing night. Never again could she silence her better, noble self. Very base and contemptible seemed all her wiles, her caprices, her coquetries. It had been her wild folly that had placed Thornton in this danger. If she had not delayed the men they could have returned to the house before it was too late. If he were alive when morning dawned he should know how bitterly she had repented.

She remembered how she had trifled with him when once, the summer before, he had told her that he loved her more than he had ever loved any being before or ever could again. She had not meant to drive him away from her; she had only meant to tease him for a little. But he had taken it all in earnest, and now, of course, he had ceased to think of her except to despise her. If he had continued to love her, would he have been so long silent? She little knew that the man who was all sincerity could not understand the insincere.

He would never care for her, now, of course, and she loved him with all the force of her strong, ungoverned heart. After that night of agony she could never be the same.

The pale daylight dawned upon her white face. The wind died slowly down, as the sun came up the troubled sky. The ruin of the night was revealed to the weary watchers.

Three men came slowly up the hill, tired, hungry, half-frozen, but safe. They had made a comparatively warm nest for themselves in the bay, where they had passed the sleepless night. The part of the barn which had sheltered them and the cattle and horses had been uninjured, and not a man or beast had been hurt by the falling beams.

Mrs. Wellington could not be induced to remain an unnecessary moment in the terrible place, and late in the afternoon the subdued party were in the cars returning to Boston. Thornton confessed that it was the most uncomfortable night he had ever passed, but that he would cheerfully have undergone far greater hardships for the reward that it brought him. Before they reached the city he had learned of the agony which the night's suspense had been to Maud, and she had acknowledge her love for him in answer to the passionate reiteration of his devotion to her. And this was the work of an East Blow!

A NEIGHBORLY FAMILY.

A family from down in Indiana moved into a house on Second avenue last week, and before night had borrowed tea, sugar, eggs, milk and kerosene from as many different neighbors. After three or four days the new family ceased to borrow promiscuously, and settled down on one particular neighbor. At an early hour in the morning a small boy appeared and said:

"Say, we are out of tacks and want to put down our carpet. Ma wants to know if she can borrow a few?"

A hunt was made and the request granted, but in ten minutes the boy returned and said:

"Say, we've mislaid our tack-hammer, and ma wants to borrow yours."

He got it, and this time it was twenty minutes before he returned and said:

"Say, ma's pulled all her teeth out pulling on that carpet. She wants to know if you won't lend her one of your boys."

One of the boys was sent over, but it was an obstinate carpet, and back came the messenger with:

"Say, ain't your husband home?"

"Yes, what do you want?"

"Well, ma's mislaid her husband somewhere, and she wants to borrow yours to pull one end of that infernal carpet through two doors and across a hall."

The line had to be fixed somewhere, and it was fixed here.—Detroit Free Press.

WAR EAGLE OF DETROIT.

It was a mild eyed, long haired young man of twenty-seven, who answered to the name of Donald O'Grinnel, and he wanted to know of the court if he couldn't have a glass of lemonade before his trial.

"Guess not," said His Honor, "Bijah had a lemon around here five or six weeks ago, but ten to one the cockroaches have lugged it off and traded it for gum drops. It wouldn't hurt you any to be tried."

"I feel all gone."

"Yes, I suppose so. I never had the sensation myself, but I've seen so much of it here that I can imagine what it is. What ailed you last night?"

"I felt bad."

"And what did you do for it?"

"Took a prescription."

"Just so. It was a thumping big drink of whiskey on top of two beers, wasn't it?"

"I—I believe so, but I'm so gone that I can't tell."

"Poor youth! You are assistant to a florist in the suburbs. You came to town about dusk last night with your hat on your ear and a desire in your heart to mash some one. You took a prescription to give you further courage, and you went into a Michigan avenue store and offered to chew the proprietor into shavings for two cents."

"Did I do that?"

"Of course you did. You called yourself the War Eagle of Detroit, and you denounced the man until he made your heels hit the ceiling and then flung you into the alley."

"And then what?"

"Then you slept the sleep of the drunk and your snores guided the officers to the spot."

"Well, I'm awful sorry."

"Yes, so am I. It's a pity you are not a statesman instead of a loafer."

"I guess I'll begin from this very morning to be a statesman."

"I guess you won't. You'll begin from this very morning to go to the Work House for three months."

"That finishes me; I might as well die at once."

"Well, do your dying in the corridor and please don't kick around and smash Bijah's new coal stove. Fall back and die and make room for the next."

WISE WORDS.

One act of charity is worth a lifetime of eloquence.

Character would be impossible were there no temptation.

Next to love, sympathy is the divine passion of the human heart.

Win, work and wait, but work a good deal more than you wait.

The gossip and busybody labor without thanks, live without love, and die without tears.

We waste our time on moments, our money in small sums, and our happiness in trifles.

No soul is desolate as long as there is a human being for whom it can feel trust and reverence.

The praises of others may be of use in teaching us, not what we are, but what we ought to be.

He that does good for good's sake seeks neither praise nor reward, through sure of both at last.

It many times falls out that we deem ourselves much deceived in others, because we first deceive ourselves.

We spend half of our life in making mistakes, and waste the remainder in thinking how we might have avoided them.

Fine connections are apt to plunge you into a sea of extravagance, and then not to throw you a rope to save you from drowning.

Money and fame are two things that men work their hardest for, and after death one is worth to them just about as much as the other.

NOT ENTITLED TO RELIEVE.

The Committee on the Sick reported that Judge Alanthus Griggs, a local member in good standing, was confined to his bed and had asked for his allowance from the relief fund.

"What am de matter wid de Judge?" asked the President.

"Sprained his back."

"How?"

"By jumpin' obeg a hitchin' post on a bet ob ten cents."

"Bein' dat he sprained his back by jumpin' ober a hichen' post, he kin now obtain releif by fallin' off a house," concluded the President as he blew his nose and sat down.

The committee also reported that Darkweather Smith was likewise confined to his bed with bilious colic and needed relief. It being ascertained that he had let himself loose on four pounds of grapes to see what he could do, the President decided that it was not a case coming under the provisions of the relief fund.

There is a delicious sarcasm in the old proverb, "God help the rich, because the poor can beg."

If you intend to do a mean thing, wait till to-morrow. If you are to do a noble thing, do it now.

The young man who boasted that he could marry any girl he pleased, found that he couldn't please any.

A young lady who was squeezed between two freight cars says it felt just like trying on a pair of new corsets.

Whatever you have to do, do it with your might. Many a lawyer has made his fortune by simply working with a will.

No man can honestly pray to be delivered from this world's temptations, who does not persistently strive to keep out of them.

Nothing makes so much noise as a rickety wagon with nothing in it, unless it be a man who insists on talking when he has nothing to say.

An old lady in the country had a dandy from town to dine with her on a certain occasion, and on the table was an enormous apple pie. "La, madame," said the gentleman, "how do you manage to make such a pie?" "Easy enough," was the reply. "We make the crust in a wheelbarrow, wheel it under an apple tree, and then shake the fruit down into it."

"Yes," said he to his confidential friend, I am engaged to her, and suppose I ought to be very happy; but somehow I am worried about a possible former attachment of her's. There's that infernal blackguard, Jones, who—" "Why bless my soul! You stupid fellow, she hates him like poison." "Yes, yes, I know—that's what troubles me. She hates him too bitterly not to have loved him once."

ARE vs IS.

Secretary Frelinghuysen, in an official communication addressed to a diplomatic representative of this country in South America, used the following singular language:

"The United States is at peace with all the nations of the earth, and the President wishes, hereafter, to determine whether it will conduce to that general peace, which he would cherish and promote, for this government to enter into negotiations and consultation for the promotion of peace with selected friendly nationalities without extending a like confidence to other peoples with whom the United States is on equally friendly terms."

Saying that the United States "is at peace, &c," has elicited just criticism, and caused more than one editorial pen to prefer against President Arthur's stalwart Secretary of State the charge of bad grammar.

That certainly cannot be well founded, because Secretary Frelinghuysen is a lawyer, an ex-Senator, and a gentleman claiming high repute as a scholar. To accuse him with ignorance of correct language appears absurd, if not cruel.

True, he may possibly have made a mistake, as wise and learned men have done before, and as good old President Taylor did when, in a message to Congress, he gravely spoke about "all the world and the rest of mankind," but Taylor was a soldier, not a scholar, and as Secretary of State, Mr. Frelinghuysen out to appreciate, for his own and the country's credit, the importance of carefully reviewing every word officially uttered.

We do not take stock in the Secretary's lack of grammar.

There was method in his expression.

He meant something.

He belongs to the centralization school of politics, and therefore, when declaring that the United States "is" &c., evidently sought to give official and diplomatic currency to the heterodox idea that the government he champions is a Consolidated Nation and not a Union of States.

That, to us, looks like the proper interpretation, and it is in direct opposition to the wording of the Constitution of the United States, which Secretary Frelinghuysen solemnly swore to obey.

If the Secretary will read the Constitution he can find therein the following mandates:

"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies."

"No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them," etc.

"—and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them."

No "is" to be found there.

Follow the letter of the Constitution?

Grammar is good.

Loyalty to law is better.

WHITE SLAVERY.

We recently called attention to a case of inhuman treatment in Illinois where the victim was a poor little white girl, and now comes a similar recital of fiendish outrage committed within our own State. Advices from Mount Holly, Burlington county, speak as follows:

"David C. Wall, a wealthy farmer, who lives on the road between New Egypt and Jacobstown, had in his employ a young girl whom he had taken from a charitable institution and who was indentured to him to do his housework. On Friday a letter came to the girl from her brother, who is in Illinois and is doing well. The letter contained $20, with which she could pay her passage, as he wished her to come and live with him. Wall opened the letter and read a part of it to the girl, but said nothing about the money. He then went into an adjoining room and read the letter to his wife. The girl overheard the talk and immediately demanded the money. Wall took a horsewhip, stripped off her clothing and whipped her until the blood flowed all over her back, and she fainted. Then he went down into the cellar, got strong brine from the pork barrels and poured it over her. He was arrested on Saturday, and the Mirror says that public feeling is strongly in favor of lynching him. The girl is in a precarious condition."

That confirms our previous assertion that white slavery continues to exist in a malignant form throughout the North, notwithstanding the abolition of Southern black.

The cruelty inflicted by the Burlington county brute shames the hardest fate slaves ever experienced at the South. We would not lynch the monster, because that is illegal, but we would speedily consign him, and all like hyenas, to the severest penalty the law can possibly be strained to impose.

Down with white slavery!

HONORABLE MENTION.

It is refreshing in these days of avaricious grabbing, no matter what the circumstances, to chronicle noble and generous action.

Here is a praiseworthy specimen.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in response to an inquiry relative to charges for valuable services rendered during the illness and after the death of President Garfield, thus made answer to a committee of the Senate:

"Our company had not at the time, nor have they now, any intention to make a claim for compensation for courtesies extended to the late President and his family or to the Government. We felt it to be not only a duty but a pleasure to do what we could to increase the comfort, and aid in restoring the health of President Garfield."

Comment is needless, other than to say, by such a course the Pennsylvania Railroad Company earns repute worthier far than heaps of gold.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The Catholic Directory for 1882 reports in the United States 13 archbishops, 72 bishops, 6,366 priests, 1,500 candidates for holy orders, 5,975 churches, and an estimated population of about 6,500,000. Two new dioceses have been established during the past year—Trenton and Davenport.

POLITICAL TRUTH.

After quoting from our editorial columns as follows: "During the long and bitter agitation concerning slavery, now happily abolished by the Constitution, the Democratic party, regardless of calumny and threats, claimed strict compliance with the letter of organic law and that only as statesman duty," the Gloucester City Reporter says—"Come off, Brother! Had you not better read the platform adopted by the Democratic party at the National Convention of 1864, and find out where your party stood on the slavery question?"

We are perfectly familiar with the platform referred to, a copy of it is before us, and we defy any man to point out its connection with the slavery question, unless affirming devotion to the Constitution and Union, and the rights of States thereunder, be so perverted by adverse partisanship.

The Democratic party in 1864, as it did in 1860, and as it does now, gives unqualified support to the Constitution from A to Z. When that sovereign instrument recognized slavery as a legal State institution, the Democracy, North, East and West, contended that its modification, overthrow or continuance depended exclusively upon the popular will where it locally existed; and when, subsequent to 1864, the Constitution was formally amended for the total abolition of slavery throughout the Union, the Democracy with unabated ardor maintained that to be organic law.

We reiterate as the truth of political history our former remarks.

Come on, Brother!

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Senate bill, No. 48, intended for relief to the city of Plainfield, passed the Senate Monday night, and has gone into the House. The full bill will be found in another part of this issue.

Senator Vail has introduced a bill concerning taxes upon real estate in cities. It provides that all taxes so assessed, whether for State, county, municipal, or local purposes, may be collected by the sale of such real estate, if the Common Council desire to proceed in that way.

Also Senate No. 123, a further supplement to the act incorporating the inhabitants of townships. Provides that whenever a tax assessed upon property owners has been declared illegal by the Supreme Court, the tax so paid shall be refunded, a general tax to be raised for that purpose.

Mr. Paxton introduced Senate No. 126, which provides that where boards having control of finances in cities have exceeded the appropriation for any special purpose, they may have the deficiency made good in any sum not exceeding $3,500.

Mr. Sheldon introduced a bill in the House, authorizing fire departments to renew matured and maturing bonds. It applies to Plainfield. The full bill will be found in this issue.

Mr. Schomp introduced House No. 188, an act respecting the courts of this State. Provides that the presiding Judge of any court, whenever in his judgment the public morals would be affected, he may exclude from the court room all persons except members of the bar or those whose presence is necessary or is required by the counsel of either party to the suit.

Several bills have been introduced relating to game and game fish. The end will be that the law relating to woodcock, quail, rabbit and squirrel will remain as it now is, while shooting ruffed grouse will be prohibited for four years. There is a determination to forbid netting in any of the streams of the State, while a bill to commence black bass fishing on June 1st, with hook and line, is likely to pass.

Both Senate 48, relative to cities, and House 182, fire department, both Plainfield bills, were reported favorably in the House on Wednesday night.

A concurrent resolution was adopted in the House, providing for adjournment sine die on March 3d.

The Senate had an executive session Wednesday forenoon, in the Senate Chamber at the State Capitol.

The nomination of A. B. Woodruff, for Law Judge of Passaic county, which had been laid over on Tuesday, was confirmed.

The following nominations were received from the Governor, and referred as usual to the Judiciary Committee: Sec. of State, Henry C. Kelsey; State Prison Keeper, Patrick H. Laverty, and Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals, ex-Senator Wm. H. Kirk, vice Amzi Dodd.

PAYING THE DEBT.

Treasurer Van Winkle has paid over to the County Collector all the State and County taxes due for the year 1880, also the 30 per cent. of the taxes of 1881, as ordered so to do by the Common Council of Plainfield, and has commenced to pay the seventy per cent. balance of 1881. There is now due the county only about $8,700 of taxes.

The new five cent Garfield postage stamp will be ready for issue on March 1. Dark brown has been selected as the color best calculated to bring out the fine engraving of the work. The five cent stamp is almost entirely used for foreign correspondence, and Third Assistant Postmaster General Hazen, believing that an accurate engraving of the late President should be used for this purpose, has succeeded in producing what is pronounced to be the truest likeness of General Garfield and the handsomest stamp yet issued by the Post Office Department.

The Baptist Weekly relates this little story: "Tommy was a rogue whom his mother had hard work to manage. Their house in the country was raised a few feet from the ground, and Tommy, to escape a well-deserved whipping, ran from his mother and crept under the house. Presently the father came home, and, hearing where the boy had taken refuge, crept under to bring him out. As he approached on his hands and knees Tommy asked, 'Is she after you, too?'"

A New Haven druggist gave an unknown woman by mistake a poisonous compound in putting up a prescription. Discovering his blunder after the customer had left the store, and failing to catch her, he advertised the danger in a local paper. Fortunately, the woman saw the advertisement before she had used the prescription.

The Selma (Ala.) Times insist that Mr. Tilden is not the man for the Democracy to nominate for President in 1884, and that Mr. Thomas F. Bayard should be selected.

New Hampshire has already had 70 inches of snow this Winter, and is expecting more.

Nathan Harper, Esq., has been confirmed by the Senate for Lay Judge of Union County for a term of five years.

MONSIGNOR DOANE APPOINTED VICAR GENERAL OF TRENTON.

The Right Rev. Michael J. O'Farrell, D. D., Bishop of Trenton, according to Sadlier's Directory for 1882, just published, has appointed the Rev. Mgr. George H. Doane, Vicar General of this diocese. This is an honorary title, and will not necessitate his resigning the rectorship of St. Patrick's Cathedral, of Newark. Vicar General Doane is now on a visit to Boston, whither he was called to pay the last tribute of respect to a dear relative.—True American.

Postmaster Pope.

At last after the circulation of many petitions, the supplication of innumerable applicants, the recommendation of countless candidates especially qualified, the button-holeing and wire-pulling of those more or less influential, the condemnation and commendation of private citizens and public officials—after a raking up of the past history of opponents without any regard but for one side of the narrative, and the defamation and villification of each other in public and private—after repeated promises by the leading politicians of the party to do precisely that which they did not nor never intended to do, and emphatic pledges not to do what they subsequently did or had already done—after all this, and more, the tug of war between Greek and Greek has ended and Elias R. Pope Esq., has been confirmed as Postmaster of Plainfield.

The struggle being confined within the limits of the Republican party and being a quarrel entirely among its own members, has perforce kept our editorial fingers out of the broth so completely spoiled by unsavory ingredients and a superabundance of cooks. Now, however, that the matter is settled, we can rejoice with those who do rejoice in the fact that undoubtedly the best man has won. Not that we can find a single degree of unfitness in the qualifications of any other candidate whom we have heard prominently mentioned, but no one else so completely possesses the requisite business tact, the thorough acquaintance with our community and its needs, the philanthropy and generosity—all these and many other traits necessary to conduct the office as it should be conducted in this city, are undoubtedly embodied in the coming incumbent.

It will probably be some days yet before Postmaster Pope takes upon his shoulders the cares and duties of his new charge. As to the situation of the office, it will remain where it is for the present and possibly only be removed elsewhere, temporarily, while the owner of the present building carries out his intended project of erecting on the same spot a handsome brick structure, built especially for occupation as a post office and containing all the latest appliances and improvements calculated to afford every convenience and the most prompt and accurate service.

Important to Farmers.

Mr. P. Lorillard, of Jobstown, has for some time been convinced that the climate and soil of this section of the state are fully adapted to the successful growth of what is known as "White Seed" or "Red Burley" tobacco, the cultivation of which has been heretofore principally confined to a particular section of the state of Kentucky, known as "Mason county district." In order to test the matter, last season some gentlemen near Jobstown made an experimental planting of seed procured for them by Mr. Lorillard and have lately gathered and cured their crops and forwarded them to Jersey City. The result has exceeded their most sanguine expectations, the tobacco being fully equal in every respect to that grown in Kentucky, being valued by Messrs Lorillard & Co., at 20 cents per pound.

An acre of land will produce from 1200 to 1500 pounds of tobacco, ranging in value up to 20 cents per pound, according to quality, making a more profitable crop than anything now raised in this vicinity; and this being the class of leaf most extensively used and eagerly sought for by tobacco manufacturers generally, the subject would seem to be worthy of careful investigation and trial.

To encourage experimental plantings, Mr. Lorillard has procured a quantity of seed for gratuitous distribution, which can be obtained on application to Wm. Griswold, Esq., Jobstown, N. J. If the quantity of tobacco raised is sufficient to warrant it, at the end of the season Mr. Lorillard will establish a receiving depot at some central point, with facilities for packing and shipping, in charge of a party competent to judge of the quality and value of the tobacco and will pay cash for crops as delivered; otherwise arrangements will be made to receive direct at the works in Jersey City and full value will be remitted to the shipper.

Milldams and Malaria.

There are millions of people in New York who should be interested in the case of a manufacturing company in Massachusetts that has been indicted for maintaining a nuisance and propagating malaria, which is claimed to be caused by the company's millpond being alternately filled and partially emptied. The effect of the sun's rays on long saturated soil that is suddenly uncovered is well known; it universally causes a brisk demand for quinine among the persons living in the neighborhood. When a stream is dammed high, so that its breadth is greatly increased by a slight increase of depth, the large area of soil afterward exposed when most of the water is drawn off by the mill is just the thing to distribute ague among all persons living near by. Of course the company who are defendants in the case alluded to claim that they have not done anything detrimental to the public health, but it has long been known that manufacturing corporations are not disinterested authorities on questions of health and life.

The above editorial from the New York Herald brings back to the minds of many the benefit claimed to have been derived from the draining of the Bound Brook mill pond a year or so ago. Since that time there has been no complaint of malarial diseases from the citizens of that place. Whether or no the existence of the Randolph Pond in this city about the same time was the cause of malarial troubles, we have heard of no complaints on that score since this pond was also drained and its bottom sown with grain.

Assembly Bill No 182.

On Tuesday last, Assemblyman Sheldon, at the request of a gentleman from Plainfield, introduced the following bill before the Legislature. It is intended to apply to Plainfield particularly:

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey.

1. That any incorporated fire department may renew such of its bonds as have been legally issued and are now due, and to renew twenty-five per centum of such bonds as have been legally issued and that will become due on or before the first day of July, in the year 1884 by the issuing of bonds for that purpose in denominations of not less than $500 and payable in periods of time not exceeding ten years from date of issuing the same, bearing interest not exceeding ten per cent. per annum and which said bonds shall be signed by the President and Treasurer of such Fire Department, and shall have coupons attached for every half year's interest until due, and which coupons shall be signed by the Treasurer of such corporation and numbered to correspond with the bonds to which they shall be attached, and all the bonds issued under the act shall be numbered and the date of issuing and the time of payment shall be made by the Treasurer of such corporation and which bonds may be sold at not less than their par value at either public or private sale.

2. This act shall take effect immediately.

The last three days have been an "Indian Winter."

The 39th annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, which appears in another column, shows that age does not wither its resources or enterprise, but on the contrary only serves to make it stronger. It now has assets amounting to $94,702,957 and more than $12,000,000 surplus. Its income last year was over $17,000,000 and its payments upon policies $12,640,113. The magnitude of its transactions, is unequaled by any other similar corporation on the face of the globe and the only wonder is when it will stop growing. The reductions in its premium rate, its liberality in the matter of lapsed or surrendered policies and the promptness with which death-claims are adjusted and paid, places it far in advance of any other company in the estimation of the public. As a rule it cost no more to insure in a good company than in a feeble one, but on the contrary it costs less to insure in the Mutual Life than in any other of the great companies. When comparative cheapness is coupled with absolute safety, that is all the policy-holder ought to require.

The following item is going the rounds of the State press:—

"Fifty or sixty years ago Passaic Engine Company No. 1, of Patterson, had a hand-engine. In the course of time it passed into the possession of the Boonton Iron Company, and has now been bought by its original owners in Paterson for $25 to be preserved as a relic to be contrasted with their fine modern steamer."

This reminds us of the old "Gazelle" hand-engine of the Plainfield fire department. Now that a steamer has taken her place, she is lying uncared for, scarcely under cover, unthought of for the good work she has done. She should be preserved, too, as a relic.

As we go to press the members of Warren Hose Co. No. 3, are having their First Annual Ball at St. Mary's Hall. The good time they all will have, we can more particularly speak of, next week.

A Card to the Public.

In answer to the many queries that have been made by my friends as to the cause of such a high fence being erected by my neighbor, shutting off thereby a view of my house from the street, I would herewith explain to the public that the reason of such actions on his part arose from the fact that I, a short time since, compelled him through a decision of the court, to pay interest on mortgages that he led me to believe was paid to the date of transfer; since that time he has tried in every way to annoy me, and, finally built the fence now between us, besides some other additions that tend to injure me in the eyes of my neighbors. To those who have known me for years, this explanation is hardly necessary, but to the public it will at once make plain what otherwise might be interpreted to my disadvantage.

REAL Estate is booming. The agents state that there are not nearly enough houses to let and for sale to supply the applicants already on their lists.

ACCORDING to the report of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, there were 49 marriages, 161 births and 130 deaths in Plainfield for the year ending June 30, 1881.

On Monday the 27th inst., the postponed lecture of Mr. Benj. F. Taylor—the 6th of the Y. M. C. A., Course of Entertainments—will be given in the M. E. church.

MR. JOHN W. MORRIS, at his New Brunswick stables, keeps constantly on hand a fine assortment of horses and mules, for sale or exchange. Forty head of Canadian ponies will arrive about Monday next.

MAYOR Randolph has been absent from the city for some days, engaged in making the annual tour of inspection over all the branches of the Illinois Central Railroad in company with other directors of the road.

MR. E. C. Mulford, the Real Estate agent at the depot, has on his books some very desirable property to rent and for sale. He has also several specially attractive bargains which parties about to purchase should examine.

THE next and fourth of the Y. M. C. A., free descriptive talks, will be given on Monday the 28th inst., by the Rev. T. H. Stockton, on "Three months in the British Islands." The place where it will be given, we shall announce in our next issue.

THE Post and Gazette, of Elizabethtown N. Y., owned, and edited by Mr. C. H. Livingston, brother of our able Councilman, is a new and welcomed visitor to our sanctum. It is full of newsy items, and through its editorial paragraphs runs a commendable strata of pure democracy.

THE Saengerbunders and their friends are preparing for a big time on Tuesday evening next, when the masked dancers to the music of the waltz and lanciers, will fill the rooms of the society with whirling beauty, flashing color and ringing mirth. Four hundred invitations have been issued, and every indication betokens that the Second Annual Masquerade of the Plainfield Saengerbund is to surpass all others.

LAST Sunday morning, as Mr. Edward Drake, a milkman, residing near New Brooklyn, entered his stables to hitch his horse up for his morning's route, he was astonished to find the animal lying dead in his stall. Evidently in attempting to arise from his bedding or in lying down upon it, he had broken his neck. Ed's customers were compelled to get along without his usual supply of the lacteal fluid for one day in consequence.

THE second number of the Oriental Casket, a literary monthly, issued by L. Lum Smith, of Philadelphia, is before us. The Casket is printed on fine tinted paper, and is filled to overflowing with good, pure reading matter for the young and old. Every family should have the Casket in their house. The name of the editor, Emerson Bennett, should be a sufficient guarantee of its high rank as a literary magazine. The subscription price is $2 per year. This sum for such an elegant sixteen page magazine is cheap enough. Address L. Lum Smith, No. 913 Arch street, Philadelphia.

THE case of Somers vs. Runyon, which was tried by a Plainfield jury, resulting in a verdict of $7 in favor of the Plaintiff, was appealed to the Court of Common Pleas. The trial of the appeal took place on Thursday last, Craig A. Marsh appearing for Mr. Somers, and George F. Suydam for Mr. Runyon. A very spirited contest resulted, occupying half a day. The court announced its judgment which was in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. Somers, for four dollars more than the Plainfield jury gave him, besides costs below and costs above. Mr. Sommers naturally feels elated over his double success.

IN the issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of Jan. 26th, an item appeared credited to the Somerset Gazette, which called for the suppression of an alleged nuisance in Bound Brook. William Miller, late proprietor of the Elm Hotel, at Bound Brook, informs us that he and his house are the party and place referred to, and that there is no truth in said allegation, also that the report has and is doing him injury in the procurement of a license to keep the hotel in New Brunswick, formerly called the Bull's Head Hotel. We give this explanation at his request, knowing ourselves of no irregularities or nuisance maintained by him while proprietor of the Hotel above named.

Not Peace, but a Sword.

Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, Pastor of the M. E. Church, will preach on the above topic, next Sunday night, at 7:30 o'clock. All persons interested in the cause of righteousness and temperance are invited to be present and will be cordially welcome.

One Year Ago.

Mr. George Miller, proprietor of Laing's Hotel, died on the 16th in the 59th year of his age. The Washington avenue dam over Green Brook, was carried away by a freshet. A terrible accident occured on the C. R. The Rutgers College Glee Club.

On Monday evening the 20th inst, by special request, the celebrated and talented Rutgers College Glee Club, will give an entertainment of vocal music, at VanDeventer Hall. The reputation of this organization is a national one; and wherever its members have sung, naught but the most flattering praise has been incited. The Club is indeed excelled by none & equalled by few—consequently a rare treat will be experienced by those who attend upon its appearance in this city. Do no forget that Monday evening next is the occasion—reserved seats for which can be selected at Dunham & Millers' pharmacy.

The following press notices, selected from many such, will give an idea of the criticism accorded the Club in other places. "The Concert of this Club at Jersey City was a decided success. The singing was characterized by universal excellence."—N. Y. Express. "A unique Concert. A nest of singing birds"—Jersey City Journal. "Nearly everything encored. One of the best Concerts ever given in Poughkeepsie. Fully equal to the Yale Club."—Poughkeepsie Eagle. "To say that the Concert of the Rutgers College Glee Club was a most enjoyable one, would but faintly express the pleasure and appreciation evinced by the audience."—Yonkers Statesman. "Bragdon's falsetto has been pronounced by competent critics, unexcelled even by that of Ricardo."

Lynch vs. Lilienstern.

In December last, the store of S. Lilienstern of this city, was burglariously entered and a large amount of merchandise stolen therefrom. At about 3:30 o'clock a m. of the same morning, and before Mr. Lilienstern was aware of the robbery, Mr. Lynch, a police officer at Bayonne, was called to the station house of his district on account of a robbery in that city. He thence proceeded to the R. R. station, saw two suspicious persons upon an oil train, caused the stoppage of the train, effected the arrest of one of the persons, marched his prisoner to the station, and upon searching, discovered various articles upon his person.

Without knowledge of any arrest, and to stimulate search for the persons who had entered his store, Mr. Lilienstern offered a reward for the discovery of his goods and the conviction of the offenders. Officer Dodd having seen a notice of the Bayonne arrest, called Mr. Lilienstern's attention to it, and in company they proceeded to Bayonne. The goods were identified; they returned to this city; a complaint was made, and by virtue of a warrant issued by Justice Wadsworth, Henry Wilson was brought to this city. An examination was had and Wilson committed to await the action of the Grand Jury. He was indicted, convicted and sentenced to ten years in the State Prison.

In these proceedings, officer Lynch did valuable service, but when the conviction had been obtained, Mr. Lilienstern thought he had placed too high an estimate upon his labors. But a small portion of his goods had been recovered, and the demand made upon him considerably exceeded their value. Mr. Lynch had acted in the line of his duty without knowledge of the reward, and had performed no services in consideration of its offer.

An offer was made by Mr. Lilienstern for a settlement, without admitting a legal liability; it was declined; suit was brought by Lynch and the cause was tried before Judge Alward and a jury at Elizabeth on Friday last.

The plaintiff was represented by City Attorney Clements of Bayonne, and the defendant by Craig A. Marsh of this city. The cause was elaborately tried and argued. The jury found a verdict for $50 for the plaintiff, but this verdict was set aside by the Judge, who sustained every legal proposition presented by Mr. Marsh at the trial.

Had the liberal offer of Mr. Lilienstern been accepted, Mr. Lynch would have been well recompensed. As it is, he has been defeated in his action, with the poor consolation of being liable for the costs.

Gross injustice has been done Mr. Lilienstern by the Bayonne Herald. He defended this action because otherwise he would have been liable to pay in like manner every person who should recover any of the stolen goods or aid in the conviction of any participant in the burglary.

Common Council Proceedings.

Special meeting—The members endorse Senate Bill No. 48—Messrs. Vail and Sheldon urged to favor its passage—Other special business deferred.

MONDAY EVENING, Feb. 13th

The Council met in special meeting at 8 o'clock, in accordance with a call of the President, setting forth that some action was to be taken in relation to a resolution previously presented endorsing Senate Bill No. 48, and also that the acceptance of warrants in payment of taxes would be considered.

Present—President Rushmore, and Messrs. Newhall, Ginna, Depew, J. Simpson, R. Simpson, Thompson, Livingston, Lindsley and Gardner.

Absent—Mr. Kaufman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were, on motion, deferred, and the Clerk read the present call.

Mr. Ginna, from Laws Com., reported on the Resolution of Mr. Thompson's referred to it at the previous meeting, that it failed to meet the approval of the Committee. It thought that the resolution reflected, to a certan extent, upon the subsequent action of the Council, and although a resolution recognizing the Bill now before the New Jersey Legislature was no doubt proper, yet the one under consideration was not drawn up and worded in an entirely desirable manner.

Mr. Thompson expressed a desire to withdraw his resolution, but such action not being allowable, on motion of Mr. Depew, seconded by Mr. J. Simpson, the report of the Committee on the matter was accepted.

Mr. Depew then offered in its stead the following preamble and resolutions, and moved their adoption. Before action was taken the Bill referred to, as published elsewhere in this issue, was read by the Clerk.

At a special meeting of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield held the 13th day of February, 1882, the following preamble and resolutions were offered:

WHEREAS, On the 22nd day of November, 1881, the citizens of Plainfield met for the purpose of considering the necessity of the passage of a general law relative to the collection of taxes in New Jersey and have passed the following resolution, viz., "That in view of the importance of having the law plainly provide for the enforcement of taxes due, and to become due in Plainfield and of having such taxes imposed, and only such, as shall adequately meet the requirements of the public good, a committee be appointed by the chairman of the meeting to consist of nine (9) citizens whose duty it shall be to consider carefully what legislation is necessary and, acting under proper legal advice and if possible with a committee from the Common Council obtain such legislation as shall meet the requirements of the city.

In accordance therewith, the said committee having been appointed, have prepared and introduced into the Legislature a bill known as Senate Bill No. 48, and reported its action to this Common Council; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senator for Union County, and the Representative for the Third Assembly District of said county, be, and they are hereby requested and urged to vote for the said bill and to make every effort to secure its passage.

Resolved, That the city clerk be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish copies of the foregoing preamble and resolutions to be presented to Hon. B. A. Vail, Senator, and Hon. F. L. Sheldon, Assemblyman, by a committee of three members of this body to be appointed by the President, said committee to have power to act in concert with the citizens' committee as they may deem expedient.

Mr. Livingston seconded the motion to adopt the above, for the purpose, as he stated, of bringing it before the meeting for action.

Mr. Ginna inquired if any member present could point out the benefit of the Bill or any specified power it gave additional to that already possessed. While he recognized the fact that it contained many good points, he thought it merely went back to the powers invested in Township Committees.

Mr. Depew replied that even if the City already possessed the powers embraced in the Bill, the passage of it would not weaken such but rather strengthen them beyond all question. He thought that the Council should endorse the document as a whole, without picking it to pieces and selecting portions only for its approval. If the Council commenced to criticise the labors of the Citizen's Committee, it would merely weaken the efforts of those gentlemen who were acting for the City's interests. In reply to Mr. J. Simpson, the speaker said that the Bill gave the City the right to use the State and County moneys for municipal purposes if the remote probability of there being an excess of such, should occur.

Mr. Ginna arose to correct any impression that he was opposed to the resolutions. He offered an amendment to the effect that instead of the Clerk being directed to forward a copy of the resolutions to Messrs. Vail and Sheldon, he be instructed to hand the same to a Committee of Three appointed by the President to act with the same from the Citizen's Committee, as they may deem expedient.

Mr. Depew accepted the amendment and embodied it in the original resolutions, which were thereupon unanimously adopted.

The President appointed Messrs. Depew, Ginna and Newhall as the Committee provided for.

On motion of Mr. Depew, seconded by Mr. Livingston, the other business specified in the call was dispensed with.

The Council then adjourned.

The Helen Potter Pleiades.

Our public cannot too greatly appreciate the great favor accorded it by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Park avenue Baptist church, in bringing before it that thoroughly artistic, attractive and enjoyable combination of talent, the Helen Potter Pleiades. This organization, now on its third grand and successful tour is pronounced by popular acclamation the greatest entertainment at present on the road, and only the heavy expense of securing so prodigious an array of talent, has prevented its appearance in this city under the auspices of "some one," before this.

The bright particular star of the constellation is, by matter of right, the lady whose name it takes. Miss Potter is not a stranger to Plainfield, and all who have heard her will agree with us that she stands pre-eminently at the head of American elocutionists, readers and impersonators. Miss Nannie Louise Hart, a soprano-dramatique of rare talent and ability—we are told—is to be mentioned next out of compliment, at least, to her sex, although young J. Williams Macy should be ranked below none other of the Pleiades. The latter artist is a buffo-basso of remarkable endowments in the way of voice, dramatic cleverness and humorous faculties. He is an entire entertainment in himself and capable of filling a whole programme unassisted by the many others of the troupe, of whom we have not the space to further mention.

Suffice it to say that Miss Potter, Mr. Macy and the rest, may be heard at the Park avenue Baptist church on Monday evening next, and we advise no one to miss the opportunity.

Personalis.

On Thursday evening of next week, from 8 to 11 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray will tender a reception to Mr. John W. Murray, Jr., and his recent bride, formerly Miss Amelia Dowley.

Mr. A. B. Reynolds of this city, formerly connected with the Equitable, has been appointed State agent for the New York Life Insurance Co., which still further proves the sound judgment of the managers of that organization in thus making so discreet a selection.

SENATE BILL, NO. 48.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

INTRODUCED JAN. 24, 1882, BY MR. VAIL.

A further Act concerning cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the Common Council of any city may fix by ordinance the times and dates within which taxes required by law to be raised in such city, whether State, County, municipal or other taxes shall be assessed, as well as the times and dates when the same shall become due and within which the same shall be collected, the date of the session of the commissioners of appeal, and the date on which the collector of taxes in such city shall make return of the names of delinquents in the payment of such taxes, in order to the issue of warrants for the collection of taxes due from such delinquents respectively; and whenever the Common Council of any city shall so fix such times, dates and periods as aforesaid, all provisions of law affecting such city, so far as they fix such dates, times and periods otherwise, shall be suspended and of no effect so far as concerns such city, during the continuance of such ordinance unrepealed; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the fixing of any date, time or period, as aforesaid, later than the several corresponding dates, times or periods for the assessment, time of falling due, collection, session of the commissioners of appeal and return of delinquents, which are, or shall at any time be, fixed by the general law in respect of townships.

2. And be it enacted, That every city shall have full power, through its appropriate officers, to assess and collect its full quotas of State, State school and County taxes, and that said taxes shall, in each city, be assessed and collected by the same officers and in the same manner as municipal taxes in such city are or shall be by law directed or authorized to be assessed and collected, respectively, and the names of delinquents in the payment of such taxes shall also, so far as said taxes shall remain unpaid, be returned, with the sums due from such delinquents, respectively, to the same manner, and to the same magistrate, as the names of delinquents in the payment of municipal taxes in such city are by law required to be returned; every assessor and collector who is by law charged with any duty in respect to the assessment or collection of municipal taxes in any city, is hereby empowered and directed to perform the like duties in respect to the assessment and collection, respectfully, of such city's quotas of State, State school and County taxes, and the Common Council of such city is hereby empowered and directed to exercise the like authority, supervision and control over and in respect to the assessment, collection and enforcement of such city's quotas of State, State school and County taxes, as well as of its taxes for municipal and other local purposes, as township committees of townships are by law empowered to exercise over and in respect to the assessment, collection and enforcement of State, State school and County taxes required to be raised in townships, and any balance of moneys remaining in the hands of the treasurer of any city, derived from the levy of State, State school or County taxes, for any year, shall, after the quotas of State, State school and County taxes, due from the taxes of such city for that year, and for all previous years, has been paid in full, be transferred to the general fund, and belong to and be applicable to the general municipal or other purposes of such city.

3. And be it enacted, That after the date fixed, pursuant to the provisions of this act, by the Common Council of any city for the return of the names of delinquents in the payment of any taxes, the magistrate to whom any such return in such city shall have been made, shall thereupon issue his warrant, and, if required, shall issue from time to time successive alias and pluries warrants, for the collection of such taxes, to such officer as shall have been or shall be designated by such Common Council to receive the same, commanding him to collect such taxes, with the interest and costs by law chargeable thereon, by levy and sale of personal property, in like manner as justices of the peace in townships are authorized by law to issue warrants for the collection of taxes in townships, and with the like force and effect; and such Common Council may at any time revoke the designation of any such officer, and designate another for the like purpose, who shall have the like powers; and the officer to whom any such warrant shall have been issued, is hereby empowered and directed to collect all taxes by such warrant commanded to be collected, whether such taxes be for State, County, municipal or other purposes, and to this end he is empowered and directed to levy upon and sell personal property of delinquents, so far as may be necessary to collect the amounts due from them respectively for such taxes, with the interest and costs by law chargeable thereon, in like manner as is required or authorized by law in respect to or upon similar warrants issued in townships.

4. And be it enacted, That whenever, by reason of any ambiguity or inconsistency in or misconstruction of existing laws, or for any other reason, no legal return of the names of delinquents in the payment of any taxes now or heretofore due and payable in any city has been made, then and in such case, at any time within six months after the passage of this act, a return of the names of delinquents in the payment of such taxes, with the sums due from them respectively, shall be made by the collector for the time being, to the magistrate to whom, by the foregoing provisions of this act, returns are required to be made, provided that the Common Council of such city shall by resolution so direct; and upon the receipt of such return and upon the request of such Common Council, such magistrate shall issue his warrant, and, if required, shall issue from time to time successive alias and pluries warrants, for the collection of such taxes to such officer as shall have been or shall be designated by such Common Council to receive the same, commanding him to collect such taxes, with the interest and costs by law chargeable thereon, by levy and sale of personal property, in like manner as justices of the peace in townships are authorized by law to issue warrants for the collection of taxes in townships, and with the like force and effect; and such Common Council may, at any time, revoke the designation of any such officer, and designate another for the like purpose, who shall have the like powers; and the officer to whom any such warrant shall have been issued, is hereby empowered and directed to collect all taxes by such warrant commanded to be collected, whether such taxes be for State, County, municipal or other purposes, and to this end he is empowered and directed to levy upon and sell personal property of delinquents, so far as may be necessary to collect the amounts due from them respectively for such taxes, with the interest and costs by law chargeable thereon, in like manner as is required or authorized by law in respect to or upon similar warrants issued in townships.

5. And be it enacted, That the powers conferred, and duties imposed, by law upon any officer, in any city, in respect to the collection or enforcement of taxes in such city, including the power and duty of issuing warrants therefor, shall not lapse or cease to exist by reason of the expiration of his term of office, or by reason of any vacancy which may arise in his said office, but all such powers and duties shall, so far as the same shall not have been executed or performed, devolve upon his successor in office, and be executed and performed by such successor; and if at any time within six years next previous to the passage of this act, the power to collect and enforce the payment of any taxes in any such city has lapsed or ceased to exist, solely through the expiration of the term of office of any such officer, then, and in every such case, the time to collect such taxes in such city shall be, and hereby is, extended and continued for two years next after the passage of this act, and at any time within six months after such passage a return of the names of delinquents in the payment of such taxes, with the sums due from them, respectively, may be made, and warrants issued by and to the same officers or persons, respectively, and in like manner, and with like effect, as is provided in the last preceding section of this act with reference to the making of returns and the issue of warrants in cases of improper, illegal or inadequate returns, or in case of the absence of any returns, by reason of ambiguity or inconsistency, or misconstruction of the law.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall not take away or impair any power conferred by law upon any city, or any officer thereof, in relation to the assessment, collection or enforcement of taxes.

7. And be it enacted, That the term Common Council, whenever used in this act, shall be construed to mean the legislative body of any city, whether called "Common Council" or "Board of Aldermen," or called or known by any other designation.

8. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall take effect immediately.

MR. Charles Sebring, engaged in the driven well business in this city, started on Wednesday last for a pleasure trip through Illinois and Iowa, intending to be absent some weeks. His many friends wish him a pleasurable trip.

Episcopal Gypsies.

It is a well grounded belief that all church sales, where one-half of the congregation dispose of useful and useless combinations of beads, canvass, worsted and straw to the other half of the congregation at a profit of from five-hundred to a thousand per cent., are intensely monotonous in their similarity whether called a fair, a bazaar, a sale, or any other name as sweet. But it remained for the Grace church Guild to give the public an entertainment most novel and original, while at the same time combining that desirable feature (to the projectors) of limitless emolument. At Van Deventer Hall, on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday just past, the organization referred to has been encamped, and its members in the gay orange and scarlet colored guise of light-complexioned gypsies, roamed at will among the large gathering of our public in attendance. There were mystic daughters of the race whose palms were "crossed with siller" and who in return promised a future of health, wealth and happiness; there were fascinating children of the roving band who charmed you into the purchase of articles you did not need and which were a likeness of nothing "in the earth beneath"; and there were willing and soft-handed sisters who brought you the rich cream (with a wintry aspect) the fragrant coffee and other palatable delicacies. It would be unfair to state that the fair was anything but a successful affair, and the fair ladies who labored for its prosperity deserve to fare as well that the fair will not be but their farewell affair.

Chess Tournament.

The score in the tournament of the Plainfield Chess Club, stands as follows:

	won	lost
Asa Collier,	11	4
Henry Boice,	9	3
Charles Opdyke,	8	2
Geo. P. Suydam,	6	2
Alex. Gilbert,	2	0
Thos. Lloyd,	2	0
John H. Jackson,	8	8
Gen'l Long,	2	7
Geo. S. Hunt,	4	10
Chas. Dewey,	3	10
Chas. R. Thiers,	3	12

Mr. Lloyd has quite a record as a player, having competed in drawn games with the renowned Paul Morphy with the odds of a knight, only. Mr. Suydam has been advised by his physician not to continue his play at present, but he will probably finish his series, although quite unwell.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Rev. Wm. Roberts occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church, on Sunday morning.

Postmaster Decker has made a much needed improvement to the Post Office, having fitted up a private entrance expressly for ladies.

The marriage ceremony was performed on Tuesday evening, 14th inst, by the Rev. Thomas Drumm, of the Episcopal Church, at the residence of the bride on Central avenue. The contracting parties were Miss Minnie C. Scudder, daughter of John Scudder deceased, and Frederick Squier, son of Wm. C. Squier, of Rahway, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westfield H. & L. Co., was held on Monday evening. There was a full attendance of members present. The Treasurer reported the amount received from the entertainment given a short time ago by Mr. A. Westbrook and friends, was $25, which by a resolution, unanimously passed, was donated to the Village Improvement Committee, for lighting the streets.

On Wednesday, Feb. 15th, Richard Gennir, a German, who has been at work for our hotel keeper, Mr. A. W. Moffett, was arrested for the crime of grand larceny committed two years ago, at Cranford. He then worked for Mr. E. K. Adams of that village, and stole a new suit of clothes, an overcoat and a revolver, and after going to New York, finally returned to Westfield to work. He was taken before Justice Wendell of Cranford, who committed him to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury in May next.

Town Committee met at Town rooms on Wednesday evening, Feb. 15th. Present—Henry F. Alpers, Robert B. Sinclair, Jas. Moffett, Luther M. Whitaker, Town Clerk. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. The following four bills were on motion ordered paid: Dr. T. V. Smith, medical services to Bridget Maloney, from Jan. 27th to Feb. 2, 1882, $16, R. E. Young, overseer, paid Dr. Cooper for medical services for township, $1.50. The following bills were on motion ordered paid: Force Bros., printing to date, $10.25; J. M. C. Marsh, postage stamps for Health Board, $1.38; road account, Isaac F. Scudder, overseer of road district, No. 2, $22.88. The balance of the evening was spent in examining Collector's accounts and preparing the annual statement.

The new Congregationalist church is progressing rapidly and fast assuming proportions, under the supervision of the contractor, Joel Moffett.

Our ice merchant, J. Henry Manning, has his ice house at Clark's Lake, about one-half full, it averaging seven inches in thickness and being pure and clear.

Noah Badgley appeared before Justice Jaques on Friday last, and made complaint against Squire Radley for killing a rabbit out of season. The Justice issued a summons for the penalty, which is fifteen dollars, returnable on Thursday, the 16th inst.

Hannah L. Radley, widow of Benjamin Radley, deceased, aged 89 years, was buried in the old church burying ground on Saturday last. Mr. and Mrs. Radley were originally residents of our township, until the death of Mr. Radley a few years ago, when his widow went to Plainfield to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Solomon F. Dunn.

The "Westfield Game & Fish Protective Society" has received another consignment of live quail which, together with the first lot, makes a total of over 300, that are to be distributed through the county for the enjoyment of the lovers of dog and gun. This society believes in spending their money for the public good.

The bill of Dr. T. V. Smith, against the township, charging $5 for carrying the servant girl, Bridget Maloney, into the cellar of Mr. Beebe's house after she had, in her delirium, jumped out of the window and rendered herself unconscious is an outrage, and no doubt will be entirely ignored by the members of our Township Committee, who have the supervision of all bills due by the township.

Mr. John S. Irving and family, residing corner of Central avenue and Quimby street, have the most heartfelt sympathy of our whole village in this, the hour of their sad bereavement, they having on Friday last, lost their "Little Harry," aged 5½ years, from that dread disease, scarlet fever, whose burial occurred on Saturday. Again on Monday they were called upon to mourn the loss of the pet of the household, their daughter Lotta, aged 3½ years, whose burial took place on Tuesday.

George Godfrey, Jr., eldest son of Geo. Godfrey, Justice, died on Monday evening, Feb. 13th, at the Hotel Royal, New York city, of acute spinal meningitis, after a short illness. His body was removed to Westfield on Tuesday afternoon, to the residence of his brother-in-law, Loyd Harbison, residing on Union street, and his burial occurred on Thursday, 16th inst, at 2:30 p. m., from the Episcopal church. Services by Rev. Thos. Drumm; interment in the family plot in Fairview cemetery.

On Sunday evening, Feb. 12th, the first public meeting of the Westfield Sunday School Association was held in the Presbyterian church. Its officers consist of Anson F. Grant, President; William H. Elston, Vice President; David Sayers, Secretary; W. W. Baker, Treasurer. The order of exercises in the church were as follows: organ voluntary, by the organist of the church, Miss Jennie Pierson; singing by the congregation; reading of the Scriptures, by the Rev. W. H. Hoagland, of the Methodist church; prayer by the Rev. H. M. Neill, of the Congregationalist church, and remarks by Anson F. Grant, President of the Association and Superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School; an able address by the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, of Plainfield, on "Basal preparation for Sabbath School work;" an address by the Rev. E. H. Bronson, of the Baptist church, and singing by the congregation of the hymn "All hail the power of Jesus' name," after which the benediction was pronounced. This is a good work, in which the members of the different sunday schools are engaged, and the first of their public meetings was a decided success.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

A good Baptist clergyman of Bergen, N. Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia, and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was told that Hop Bitters would cure him, because he was afraid of and prejudiced against "Bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

PROOF EVERYWHERE.

If any invalid or sick person has the least doubt of the power and efficacy of Hop Bitters to cure them, they can find cases exactly like their own in their own neighborhood, with proof positive that they can be easily and permanently cured at a trifling cost—or ask your druggist or physician.

COMPLICATED DISEASES.

A prominent gentleman in Cerro Gordo County, Iowa, writes us that he finds Kidney-Wort to be the best remedy he ever knew for a complication of diseases. It is the specific action which it has on the liver, kidneys and bowels, which gives it such curative power, and it is the thousands of cures which it is performing which gives it its great celebrity. Liquid, (very concentrated) or dry, both act efficiently.—N. H. Journal and Courier.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an Impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

THE MYSTERIOUS ORGANIST.

A LEGEND OF THE RHINE.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

Years ago at a grand old cathedral overlooking the Rhine, there appeared a mysterious organist. The great composer who had played the organ so long had suddenly died, and every person from the peasant to the king was wondering who could be found to fill his place. One bright Sabbath morn, as the sexton entered the church, he saw a stranger sitting at the crape-shrouded organ. He was a tall, graceful man, with a pale but strikingly handsome face, great black, melancholy eyes, and hair like a raven for gloss and color, sweeping in dark waves over his shoulders. He did not seem to notice the sexton, but went to playing; and such music as he drew from the instrument no words can describe. The astonished listener declared that the organ seemed to have grown human—that it wailed and sighed and clamored. When the music at length ceased, the sexton hastened to the stranger and said:

"Pray, who are you, sir?"

"Do not ask my name," he replied. "I have heard that you are in want of an organist, and have come here on trial."

"You'll be sure to get the place," exclaimed the sexton. "Why, you surpass him that's dead and gone."

"No, no—you over-rate me," resumed the stranger, with a sad smile; and then, as if disinclined to conversation, he turned from old Hans and began to play again. And now the music changed from a sorrowful strain to a grand old pean, and the mysterious organist—

"Looking upward full of grace,
Prayed, till from a happy place
God's glory smote him on the face," and his countenance seemed not unlike that of St. Michael as portrayed by Guido.

Lost in the harmonies that swelled around him, he sat with far-seeing gaze fixed on the distant sky—a glimpse of which he caught through the open window—when there was a stir about the church and a royal party came sweeping in. Among them might be seen a young girl, with blue eyes like the violet hue, and lips like cherries. This was the Princess Elizabeth, and all eyes turned to her as she seated herself in the velvet-cushioned pew appropriated to the court. No sooner had the music reached her ears than she started as if a ghost had crossed her path. At last her eyes met those of the organist, in a long yearning look, and the melody lost its joyous notes and once more wailed and clamored.

"By my faith," whispered the king to his daughter, "this organist has a master hand. Hark ye! he shall play at your wedding."

The pale lips of the princess parted, but she could not speak—she was dumb with grief. Like one in a painful dream she saw the pale man sitting at the organ, and heard the melody which filled the vast edifice. Aye, full well she knew who he was, and why the instrument seemed breathing out the agony of a tortured soul.

When the service was over, and the royal party had left the cathedral, he stole away as mysteriously as he had come. He was not seen by the sexton until the vesper hour, and then he appeared in the organ loft and commenced his task. While he played, a veiled figure glided in and knelt near the shrine. There she knelt until the worshippers dispersed, when the sexton touched her on the shoulder, and said:

"Madam, every one has gone but you and me, and I wish to close the door."

The sexton drew back into a shady niche and listened. The mysterious organist still kept his place, but his head was bowed upon the instrument, and he could not see the lone devotee. At length she arose from the aisle, and moving to the organ-loft, paused before the musician:

"Bertram!" she murmured.

Quick as thought the organist raised his head. There with the light of a lamp suspended to the arch above falling upon her, stood the princess who had graced the royal pew that day. The court-dress of velvet with its soft ermine trimmings, the tiara, the necklace and the bracelets had been exchanged for a grey, serge robe and a long, thick veil, which was now pushed back from the girlish face.

"Oh, Elizabeth, Elizabeth!" ejaculated the organist, as he sank at her feet, and gazed wistfully into her troubled eyes.

"Why are you here, Bertram?" asked the princess.

"You are to be married on the morrow?"

"Yes," sobbed the girl. "Oh, Bertram, what a trial it will be to stand at yonder altar and take upon me the vow which will doom me to a living death!"

"Think of me!" rejoined the organist. "Your royal father has requested me to play at the wedding and I have promised to be here. If I were your equal I could be the bridegroom instead of the organist; but a poor musician must give you up."

"It is like rending body and soul asunder to part with you," said the girl. "To-night I tell you this—tell you how fondly I love you—but in a few hours it will be a sin. Go, go, and God bless you!"

She waved him from her, as if she would banish him while she had the power to do so. And he, how was it with him? He rose to leave her, then came back, held her on his heart in one long embrace, and with a half-smothered farewell, left her.

The next morning dawned in cloudless splendor, and at an early hour the cathedral was thrown open, and the sexton began to prepare for the brilliant wedding.

Flame-colored flowers waved by the wayside; flame-colored leaves came rushing down from the trees and lay in light heaps upon the ground; and the ripe wheat waved like a golden sea, and the berries dropped in red and yellow clusters over the rocks along the Rhine.

At length the palace gates were opened and the royal party appeared, escorting the Princess Elizabeth to the cathedral, where her marriage was to be solemnized. It was a brave pageant; far brighter than the entwined foliage and blossoms were the tufts of plumes which floated from the stately heads, and the festal robes that streamed down over the housings of the superb steeds. But the princess, mounted on a snow-white palfrey, and clad in snow-white velvet, looked pale and sad; and, when on nearing the church, she heard a gust of organ music, which, though jubilant in sound, struck on her ear like a funeral-knell, she trembled and would have fallen had not a page supported her. A few moments afterwards she entered the cathedral. There, with his retinue, stood the bridegroom, whom she had never before seen. But her glance roved from him to the organ loft, where she had expected to see the mysterious organist. He was gone; and she was obliged to return the graceful bow of the king to whom she had been betrothed from motives of policy. Mechanically she knelt at the altar-stone; mechanically listened to the service, and made the responses. Then her husband drew her to him in a convulsive embrace and whispered:

"Elizabeth! my queen! my wife! look up!"

Trembling in every limb she obeyed. Why did those dark eyes thrill her so? Why did the smile bring a glow on her cheek? Ah! though the king wore the purple and many a jeweled order glittered on his breast, he seemed the same humble person who had been employed to teach music, and had taught her the lore of love.

"Elizabeth!" murmured the monarch, "Bertram Hoffman, the mysterious organist, and King Oscar are one! Forgive my stratagem. I wished to marry you, but I would not drag to the altar an unwilling bride. Your father was in the secret."

While tears of joy rushed from her blue eyes, the new-made queen returned her husband's fond kiss, and for those two hearts were made happy by a royal marriage.

ANNOYANCES.

To see yourself in a lucid moment as others see you.

To put something away for safe keeping so carefully that you can't find it again.

To sit down hungry at a restaurant and wait fifteen minutes before you can catch a waiter.

To fix your mouth for a favorite dish, and after waiting ten minutes more, to be told "It's all out."

To get fairly out of the house and find you have forgotten the very thing you meant to take with you.

To attempt in one day more business of various sorts than your mind can grasp or your hands can handle.

To be always putting your knife or pencil in the wrong pocket and going through all the rest before you can find them.

To buy "something handy to have in the house" and to be told by your wife on taking it home that you've paid too much for a poor article.

To trade with the "furnishing store" clerk who insists after you have bought what you desire, on selling you cravats, collars, cuffs and fancy hosiery.

To be told by advisory friends that you ought to do thus and so, when you haven't done anything of the sort, and then to have to be told you ought to do thus and so, when you have all along been doing it.

To get yourself snugly settled in your seat, and your baskets, bundles, packages, valise, umbrella and bird cage all stored away in the rack and before and behind you on adjoining seats, and then to discover you're in the wrong car.

To stow your railroad ticket carefully in some recess of your clothes and then forget it, and at regular intervals be seized with a sensation of fear that you have lost it, consequent on which comes a spell of frantic rummaging until you find it.

THE AUTOCRAT OF ALL THE RUSSIAS.

The man who to-day possesses, theoretically, the most absolute power, is, in fact, the least enviable of men. As an example read this:

The following statement of an attempt upon the Czar's life comes from a private source: "The Czar finds that he is not safe in his palace of Gatschina. It was his habit to rise early in the morning and go at once to his study, and when he rose it was the duty of the guard to make a fire in the stove. Sometimes the Czar himself handled the wood. A private letter dated St. Petersburg, January 10, says that an attempt was made in December to kill the Czar which the Russian newspapers are not permitted to report. Early in the month the inspector of the palace rushed into the presence of the adjutant and told him to warn the Czar not to have a fire made in the stove, for he had overheard a suspicious talk between the fireman, whose duty it was to furnish the wood, and an officer of the guard. The Czar and an adjutant examined the fuel, and after some search, found that several pieces of the wood were hollow and filled with dynamite—enough in all to have caused an explosion equal to that at the winter palace a year earlier. The fireman and officer disappeared and have not been found. Alexander does not dare go near his conservatory, which has been one of his favorite resorts, for he has been warned of danger there, and it is believed that the plants are poisoned.

Inspection of Steam Boilers.

A bill was introduced in the Senate as Bill No. 82, relative to the inspection of steam boilers. It is based upon the Connecticut law. It provides, among other things, that a steam boiler inspector shall be appointed by the Governor of each Congressional district, to hold the office during three years, and to receive the sum of $3 for each boiler inspected, and every boiler to be inspected once a year. No person shall receive such appointment unless thoroughly qualified by practical experience for the duties required, the candidates' fitness to be vouched for by the certificate of twelve responsible boiler owners of known experience. Among the minor provisions of the bill is one that the manufacturer shall not be placed at the mercy of the inspector by being compelled to shut down works without notice. The inspector must give one week's notice of the day and hour when the inspection is intended to be made, so that no unnecessary delay shall be caused to the manufacturer's business. For every unnecessary delay caused by the inspector he to be held responsible in damages. Another provision is that no boiler owner shall be compelled by an inspector to place any patent appliance on his boiler in order to have it pass inspection. This provision shuts off effectually every opportunity for inspectors to combine with patentees in the compulsory sale of worthless patents to boiler owners.

What it Costs to Keep Them.

The following is a table of prices paid for board of prisoners in the counties of the State. As will be seen the prices vary much for which no adequate reason is given:

Just how Newark City can manage to support its prisoners on about 10 cents a day is not explained, and is more than we can understand. If they get but two meals daily, it would seem difficult to fill up an able bodied person on 5 cents, no matter how judiciously it is expended.—Warren Democrat.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The most sadly degenerate and thoroughly disreputable holiday on the calendar—St. Valentine's Day—has passed again. Its heralds defaced the shop-windows in the shape of vilely and beef-colored caricatures, with verses from the slums attached, to lure the patrons of the bedraggled saint with tawdry cupids and things, set in paper lace. There are youths and maidens all over the country, in the calfy period of existence, who delight in the suggestive interchanges which St. Valentine affords, and thousands of others who avail themselves of this opportunity to emphasize some vulgar resentment or petty malice. Altogether it is a most unlovely holiday and the sooner decent people kick it down their backstairs and out into the alley the better.

This is the way the Philadelphia Evening Star puts it: "Are you vaccinated? Have you been vaccinated within the last five years? The new branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey from Port Oram to Nolan's Point, Lake Hopatcong, is expected to be completed upon the opening of navigation. The line has been run out and partly staked for cross sections, and work upon it was expected to be commenced this week. This branch will connect the Ogden Mine Railroad with the Central.

Some one in the Christian Union suggests that in a couple of hundred years from this, if the Bible is again revised to suit the times, the passage in the parable of the virgins, which reads thus, "Give us your oil, for our lamps have gone out," will be expected to be changed to "Give us your electric light, for our circuit is temporarily broken."

The orange crop of Florida, it is said, will be much shorter than was anticipated. The loss from splitting has been very heavy on the river St. Johns, in some cases 75 per cent. and upward. A large part of the crop has already been shipped, the fear of a freeze and the loss from splitting having induced owners to market their fruit as soon as possible.

The Rev. Mr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, in one of his recent characteristic addresses is reported as saying—"Watt's application of steam and Morse's magnetic telegraph were known to antiquated Job." If that is the truth, what an ignorant set of wretches now inhabit the earth and persist in believing that those great achievements of science were the work of modern times? Possibly, Mr. Talmage knows more than the rest of mankind. Doubtless, he thinks so.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That licenses may be granted by the Common Council to such and so many persons of good moral character and otherwise qualified according to the provisions of this ordinance as the Common Council shall from time to time think proper, to carry on, wholly or in part, within the limits of the city, the business of peddler, hawker or cartman, to drive or keep for use for hire a hack, omnibus, stage, truck or other vehicle for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise, according to the provisions of this ordinance; and the city clerk shall keep a detailed record of all licenses so granted.

SEC. 2. That every application for any such license shall be in writing, signed by the applicant, stating his place of residence and the purpose for which such license is asked.

SEC. 3. That no person shall, in person, or in any manner carry on, as owner or as an agent for another, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler or hawker without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance; provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent farmers and gardeners from selling the produce of the farms owned or occupied by them, or milkmen and butchers from carrying on their business in said city without a license.

SEC. 4. That no person shall drive, keep or use for hire or wages, or cause to be driven, kept or used for hire or wages, any cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for the transportation of passengers, baggage, or merchandise of any kind, wholly or in part within the limits of said city, without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance. One license and only one shall be required for each cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle; and no person shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this section for driving a cart, truck, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for or in respect of which a license has been obtained by its owner.

SEC. 5. That each license granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall expire on the first day of March next following the granting of the same, and shall state the object for which it is given, the name of the person licensed, the number of the license, and the date of its expiration, and shall be signed by the Mayor and attested by the City Clerk.

SEC. 6. That every person so licensed shall, at the time of receiving such license, pay therefor to the City Clerk, to be by him paid to the City Treasurer for the use of said city, the sum of five dollars for each license for one year, [illegible]

SEC. 7. That no person licensed under this ordinance, and no driver or other person in the employ of any such person shall stand upon any sidewalk, or in any street or other public place in said city, for the purpose of soliciting custom, [illegible]

SEC. 8. That every person so licensed shall, as soon as licensed, cause the number of his license to be permanently and conspicuously placed or painted upon the outside of both sides of each vehicle for which such license shall have been granted, [illegible]

SEC. 9. That every license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge for satisfactory cause, [illegible]

SEC. 10. That any person licensed under this ordinance to use for hire or wages any hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers, may charge therefor the following rates, but no more, that is to say: [illegible]

SEC. 11. That the first applicant to any licensed hackman shall be entitled to conveyance to any point that the said applicant may desire to reach within the city limits; and any refusal on the part of the owner or driver of such licensed vehicle to comply with the request shall render liable said owner or driver to a fine of two dollars for the first offense, and five dollars for a second offense, and the revoking of the license for a third offense.

SEC. 12. That every person licensed as aforesaid and the driver of every hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers who shall demand for any service mentioned in section ten more than the rates fixed therein shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five dollars for the first offense and by a fine not exceeding five dollars and by a forfeiture of the license which may have been issued for any offense subsequent to the first.

SEC. 13. That the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to license and regulate street vendors of meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, patent medicines or other articles," approved June 17, 1879, and the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license cartmen, expressmen and hackmen," approved July 22, 1879, and the amendment thereto, approved December 30, 1879, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 6, 1882.

AN ORDINANCE

An Ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police force.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. The Mayor, the President of the Common Council and the Committee on Police, shall constitute a Board of Police, which Board shall possess such powers and perform such duties as are herein prescribed.

SEC. 2. The Board of Police may hold such meetings at such times and places as they may determine and appoint, and shall have full authority and control over the City jail and over other buildings used for police purposes, and over the entire police force, and shall establish and cause to be enforced such rules and regulations for the care, protection and government thereof as such Board may deem necessary or desirable, subject, however, to the ultimate control by resolution of the Common Council.

SEC. 3. The police force shall consist of such number of regular and special policemen, each of whom shall be a resident and legally qualified voter of this city, as the Common Council shall from time to time deem necessary, and by resolution order to be appointed.

SEC. 4. SEC. 5. Each of the regular policemen shall devote all his time to the duties of his office and shall be vigilant in detecting and arresting all offenders against any city ordinance or any law of the State within said City and in preserving the public peace and protecting the rights of persons and property, and when on duty shall wear such dress or badge as the Board of Police may designate, but no service shall be required of special policemen excepting when called for by the Mayor or Board of Police, save in cases of sudden emergencies requiring the performance of police duty, in all which cases such special policemen shall be ready for any detailed service required of them by the Mayor or the Board of Police, or such member of the regular police as the Mayor may designate for the time being as Chief of the Police force.

SEC. 6. In case of riot or other sudden emergency, the Mayor, or in his absence any member of the Board of Police, may call into active service with full police powers, such number of extra special policemen as they may deem necessary to suppress such riot or meet such emergency; but the services of such extra policemen shall cease with the occasion which called them into service.

SEC. 7. The Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police Force," approved December 12, 1877, is hereby repealed, but this section shall not be construed to revive any ordinance which was repealed by the ordinance hereby repealed.

ÆSTHETIC DECORATION.

From the Clipper.

When I asked of Angelina—
She than whom there's none diviner—
"Can you decorate old china
In the true æsthetic style?"
Straightway did she make me answer,
"You can bet your boots I can sir;
Bet the limit of your pile!

"Yes, sir, when to decorate it
I set out, a dinner plate, it
Would be difficult to state it,
For that's just within my line;
And I tell you if you'd seen it
(Which the same I really mean it),
You'd declare it quite divine!"

"Tell me by what incantation
You perform this decoration
Which so interests the nation—
Tell me, Angelina, pray!
Leave me not to wild conjectures,
Nor to Wilde's still wilder lectures,
But explain the simple way!"

"Well, then," answered Angelina,
"When I decorate old china
First I take the plate and line'er
With roast beef that's choice and rare;
Then, in keeping with old Plato,
To the plate I add potato,
Which I gravy-ly prepare!

"Then, to make the soft heart flutter,
Unto each I add some butter—
Just how much it were too utter
Utterly to give away;
But, as classic Greece was small, so
Is the grease that I use also—
Which is all I need to say!

"Last, to make it more æsthetic,
Not to say more dietetic,
Sometimes do I add poetic
Turnips or tomatoes—canned;
That's my way," said Angelina,
"For to decorate old china,
In this wild, æsthetic land!"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

"Are we almost there, Charles?"

"Do you see the old moss-grown roof, with the huge brick chimney, peeping up among the apple-blossoms? That is the house."

Laura's heart gave an involuntary throb. Would they welcome her as a new daughter? Would they love her? Charles Page smiled as he read the thought passing through her mind.

"Do not fear, Laura; I do not know who could help loving you!"

Laura smiled a little doubtfully; she could hardly expect the world to look at her with her young husband's eyes.

Old Mrs. Page stood at the farmhouse door in her best black silk, with her "company cap" and white ribbons, as the stage-coach rolled up—a hard-featured old lady, with silver-streaked hair brushed away from her wrinkled forehead, and hands on which the network of veins stood up like knotted cord. Her welcoming kiss was like the peck of a bird of prey—so cold and hard did it seem against Laura's cheek.

"Mother!" whispered Laura, softly.

"I am very glad to see you, Mrs. Charles," said the old lady.

"So you are Charlie's new wife, hey?" said Farmer Page from the sitting-room; "and a tall, well-grown girl, too. Come in, come in! Tea's most ready, and I dare say you'll be glad of a cup."

There was something that passed like the chilled breath of an iceberg across Laura's heart as she entered, leaning on her husband's arm. It was not the welcome she had expected and hoped for; and involuntarily she felt that her mother-in-law's cold, criticising eye was upon her, and with no favorable glance.

"I s'pose you've been brought up to work?" said Mrs. Page, senior.

No; Laura could not say that she had.

"Can you wash and iron your husband's shirts?"

"No."

"Can you make bread?"

"I have never tried."

"Cannot cook at all?"

"I am afraid not, ma'am."

"Humph!"

At this stage Charles, who had been watching the deepening color in Laura's cheek with some annoyance, broke in:

"But she can speak two or three different languages, mother, and paint beautifully, and I wish you could read some of the poetry she has written."

"Humph!" again enunciated the mother-in-law. "Languages, painting and poetry stuff won't make the kettle boil, you'll find, young lady."

"She has been taught in a seminary, mother," the young husband interposed, "where she has had no opportunity to learn the useful things you speak of. All in good time. Rome wasn't built in a day."

But Mrs. Page, with her thin lips set close together, was busying herself about the tea-table. She need not have taken the trouble—Laura's appetite was pretty effectually destroyed.

"Come, darling," said Charles, "I want to show you the path to the spring in the woods."

Old Mrs. Page looked contemptuously after them.

"That's all she's worth," she muttered, "to look at pretty things and listen to honeyed speeches. I wonder where Hiram Page would be now if I had been cut out after that pattern?"

In short, it was an infinite relief all round when the short visit came to an end, and Charles took his young wife back to his home. Laura was depressed and melancholy, and Charles, though he would not have confessed it even to himself, was a little prejudiced by the strong opinions expressed by both father and mother on the subject of his matrimonial choice.

Scarcely six months had passed over the horizon of their married life, however, when clouds came to darken it.

Charles Page was only a clerk in a bank, but his humble salary had proved sufficient for himself and Laura. Consequently, one night returning late from business, he slipped and broke his right ankle so badly that a severe illness followed. It brought the grim phantom poverty nearer to them than was at all pleasant.

"We won't let the old folks at home know of it, Laura," said the young clerk, trying to speak cheerfully. "I'm afraid they are in trouble themselves about that note my father endorsed for old Milliman, and I dare say we shall get along nicely with a little economy."

Laura was sitting by her husband's bedside one dreary November twilight, when there was an unwonted bustle at the door below—a throwing down of trunks and shrill articulation of voices. She hastened to the head of the stairs—it was farmer Page and his wife!

"We've no home of our own now," said Mrs. Page, senior, speaking bitterly and loud, "and we've come to stay with you and your wife, son Charles."

"No home of your own, mother?"

"No—thanks to your father, who would indorse that note for old Milliman, and he's lost every cent—just what he might have expected, I think—and we're as good as beggars in our old age! But, dear me, what's the matter, Charles?"

Then followed explanations and recitals, much to the relief of Farmer Page, who had instinctively slunk into the back ground until the violence of his wife's wrath should have subsided.

"And you're no better off than we be!" sighed Mrs. Page, glancing sadly around the room. "Ah—h! this is what comes of fine ladies for wives!"

It was not exactly a logical conclusion, but it seemed to afford wondrous consolation to the old woman, who immediately untied her bonnet-strings, and prepared to "make herself at home."

"Is this money in the pocket-book all you've got left, Charles?" demanded his mother, about ten days after their unexpected arrival.

"Yes, mother."

"Only five dollars; and the rest will come due to-morrow, and there's a bill for groceries enough to make one's hair stand on end—and as for milk, I don't see how men can sleep at night who charge ten cents a quart for milk that's half water. And nobody knows how much the doctor's bill is going to be, and Bridget's wages—but I'll discharge her to-morrow morning. If your wife can't do the housework of these few rooms, I can."

Charley Page closed his eyes wearily and pressed his hand upon his throbbing temples. It was not the best course of treatment for a feverish patient, this enumeration of domestic troubles; but old Mrs. Page had never been ill herself, and consequently made little allowance for the weak and worn-out state of her son.

"I don't know what Laura's doing up in her room," said the old lady. "She had a great deal better buy a wash-tub and a bar of yellow soap, and do the family washing instead of putting it out, and spending her time writing poetry."

"Laura has been the most tender and devoted of nurses to me, and I will listen to no aspersions of her conduct," interrupted Charles Page, indignantly.

Mrs. Page screwed her lips tightly together as she turned the solitary note over and over, but she ventured on no more derogatory remarks down-stairs.

Creeping like a veritable pussy-cat up the staircase, she entered her daughter-in-law's apartment with the stealthy movement peculiar to that quadruped.

"Painting, eh, Mrs. Charles? Let me tell you I think it's your duty to attend a little more to the housework and less to your fine amusements up here. Do you see this note? it's all we've got left in the house, and if you think it's going to support you in idleness you're mistaken."

"Is Charles alone, mother?"

"Yes, he is alone; but as I was saying—"

"I think we had better join him."

Old Mrs. Page hobbled down after Laura's graceful movements, grumbling as she went.

"Laura," said her husband, with a troubled face, "mother tells me that our funds are getting low—"

"Only a five-dollar bill left," said the old lady, clutching at it greedily, as if fearful that it would take wings unto itself and vanish into thin air.

"And," resumed her son, "what are we to do?"

"Might as well ask advice of the biggest wax doll in the shop around the corner," grumbled Mrs. Page, sotto voice.

"See, Charles."

Laura had opened her little portemonnaie, and was showering its contents on the bed, close to Charley's hand.

"My gracious me!" ejaculated the old lady, "where did all these bills come from?"

"One hundred dollars! My dearest wife, how did you get this?"

Laura's cheek flushed high with pride and gratification.

"My little picture of 'Spring in the Wilderness' was sold this morning, Charles; and I have orders for two more at the same price!"

"A hundred dollars!—for a trumpery picture!" gasped Mrs. Page, senior, under her breath, yet looking at Laura now with difference and admiration dawning in her face. The woman who could earn a hundred dollars by a week's work was not to be despised.

Charles Page's eyes filled with tears; he pressed his lips lovingly to the hand whose whiteness Mrs. Page had so despised.

"My dear little wife; my helpmate indeed!" he murmured, softly.

"You must not wear that serious face any longer, Charles," she said, hiding the depth of her emotion by an assumed playfulness. "We shall have plenty of money now to last us all until you get well, and mother"—she spoke it with an effort—"shall lay it out for us after the most economical fashion!"

But, to Laura's astonishment, the old lady jumped up, and threw her arms around her neck with a curious hysterical sob.

"Laura, I've been wrong all this time—I've been a conceited, obstinate old fool!"

"Mother!"

"I have—and there's no use making a secret of it! I've scorned and despised you, and been as ugly as Cain to you, and now—"

"Now we will forget it all and begin anew, mother," said Laura, soothing the old woman's agitation with a tender kiss.

It was not until Mrs. Page the elder had had her attention called to the preeminent necessity of an apple-pudding for dinner, that she left off reproaching herself and crying on Laura's shoulder.

"For I have been such an old Witch of Endor to you," she remarked, most truthfully, as she went into the kitchen.

And Charles Page, smiling up in his wife's face as the door closed, said:

"You have conquered her, Laura!"

HE DOESN'T LIKE THE BOYS TO MENTION IT.

It was at a way station on the Wabash. An old man and woman with bundles and packages arrived from out in the country. They expected to get on the train for Detroit. The station agent told them the train always stopped. "Just put your things where you can get them quick," said the agent, "and when it comes along just get on."

There was an "extra" on the road, as it happened, in advance of the "regular." In a few minutes they heard the sound of the approaching extra. The baggage was all secured, and the two waiting passengers stood close to the edge of the platform. The train went by at the rate of forty miles an hour.

When it had passed the old woman dropped her bundle, and rushed to the door of the office shaking her fist. She screamed out, "You bid-headed fool, did you say get aw-on?"

The old man rushed around the platform calling for the agent to come out. The agent came to the door. There was a smile on his face.

"Don't come out a-smiling at me! By the living Holly," said the old gentleman, "we've a notion to pace you around this platform six times faster than them keers went! You blasted fool, did you get on? Did you think a man of my age could get on a streak of greased lightning? You may play tricks on some folks, but don't you try any games on me! Because a man lives on a railroad he doesn't have to know it all. I'm feeling hungry, and somebody is liable to get chawed up afore I leave!"

Before anything serious happened the regular train arrived, and the couple boarded it all right. The railroad agent felt relieved. He doesn't like the boys to hallo, "Did you say get on!" at him.—Detroit Free Press.

A little boy running struck his toe and fell on the pavement. "Never mind, my little fellow," said a bystander; "you won't feel the pain to-morrow." "Then," answered the little boy, "I won't cry to-morrow."

A GREEN CONGRESSMAN.

He was a fresh young Congressman from a rural district, and when he got to Washington he found every other member had a private secretary; so he hired one. But, though fresh, he was energetic and a man of vigorous ideas. One day he said to his secretary:

"Mr. Sneels, to-morrow I shall speak on the tariff question."

"To-morrow?" said the secretary. "That's rather short time, but I guess I can do it. Which side are you on?"

"The free side, sir."

The secretary left the room, and the Congressman was rather puzzled to comprehend his remark. Next morning, bright and early, his secretary appeared and handed him a paper.

"What is this?" asked the member.

"Your speech."

"My speech?"

"Yes; I've written out what you're to say on the tariff issue."

"You miserable wretch!" cried the enraged member. "Do you assume to dictate what I shall say?"

He drove the amazed secretary into the street, and would hear no explanation. Indignant, he went down to the Capitol and told a friend, an old member, the story. The friend was shocked at the fellow's impudence, but they looked over the speech and found it read very well.

"You did just right to discharge the conceited rascal!" said the old member, and the next day the young member was amazed to learn that his discharged secretary had been employed by his old friend.

THE ROSY NOSE.

Every person has noticed the drunkard's rosy nose. It is not simply red; the skin is rough and thickened, and its whole appearance makes an unpleasant and sometimes a laughable impression.

But this affection (acne rosacea) is not confined to the inebriate, nor is it owing directly to alcohol; but to some derangement of the digestive functions induced by the person's habits. The capillary veins of the face are in peculiar sympathy with other organs, and, through the action of the latter, often become permanently congested.

A congested liver may be due to high living as well as to hard drinking, and whichever the cause, may equally result in congestion of the nose. In women it results, in full half the cases, from some derangement of their peculiar organization.

Further, a red nose may be caused by occupations—as that of cook, for instance—which keep up a constant state of congestion in the face.

The disease first shows itself in little rounded spots on the summit and sides of the nose. These come and go at intervals, gradually increasing in number and continuing longer. The veins enlarge; the skin becomes thicker than in its normal condition, and in the worst cases, there are elevated points, some red and solid and some yellowish and filled with pus.

To effect a cure the main thing is to remove the cause. Let your physician tell you what that is. The local congestion may, in many cases, be relieved by bathing the part for some time every day with water as hot as can be borne. The object is to stimulate the circulation.

SQUEEZE HIM.

The Cheethams keep a boarding house in Brooklyn. According to Mr. Cheetham he found himself in a dispute with his wife the other morning during which he remarked that her mouth was too big and he saw blue flames coming out of it. Thereupon he ran to his room into which she fastened him with a strap. He contrived to run out and strike at her for which she gouged him in the cheek. Her story, as told in the Police Court, differed from this. 'My husband,' she said, 'came down stairs and accused me of being too free with Mr. Lobe, a German boarder, and of having said 'au revoir,' which he defined as 'good-bye, sweet love, until we meet again.' In the evening when Mr. Lobe came home, I asked him to take up the insult my husband had put on me but my husband wouldn't fight. When I found that Mr. Cheetham would not fight with a man, I very gently poured six glasses of water down his back and one tumbler of vinegar to preserve him for future reference. He immediately got up and struck me. I caught hold of his whiskers and gave him a squeeze. He then said I had gone to a picnic with a young man. I asked him to take that statement back, and he refused. I then proceeded to box his ears.' I asked him again to take it back, and he said: 'I'm sorry, my jewel, but it is the truth.' I boxed his ears again and gave him a third chance to take back what he had said, but as he still refused I gave him a still heavier box on the ear. Your honor, I don't know how to fight, but I can everlastingly catch hold of a man and squeeze him so that he cannot give me a black eye."

CONTINENTAL.

Much unfavorable comment has been indulged in regarding the proposed assembling of representatives from the various nationalities of North and South America for the purpose of considering matters pertaining to their mutual peace and welfare, as broached by Mr. Blaine, late Secretary of State.

We cannot perceive any well grounded cause for opposition to such a practical interchange of official sentiment. No harm could possibly emanate from the deliberations of a Congress so convened, but, on the contrary, great and important benefits might be the attained result. Summoned into existence by this country, it would certainly give the United States that preponderating influence throughout the Western World which President Monroe claimed as her rightful prerogative, and which every true hearted citizen of our own Republic must desire to see permanently established.

Besides the vast territorial Empire of Brazil, presided over by the enlightened Dom Pedro, and the British Dominion of Canada, there are about a dozen distinct nationalities existing as Republics upon the two continents of America. They all possess varied, boundlessly rich and only partially developed resources, and in fact are bound together by similar interests, and require the protecting and prospering effect of generous and friendly intercourse with each other.

The idea of calling those governments into council at the City of Washington, and there debating among themselves, as friends and neighbors, the best way of enacting and executing International law, settling disputes, opening communications, enlarging products and avenues for reciprocal trade and commerce, putting an end to devastating war and firmly planting the ensign of enduring peace, is surely the spirit of genuine statesmanship, which, casting aside every minor consideration, ever seeks to create and maintain universal public good.

THE NEXT APPORTIONMENT.

Last Thursday the House rejected the Seaton method of apportionment, and went back to the old plan. This will make the number of Representatives 325, and will increase the ratio of representation from 131,425 inhabitants, as fixed after the census of 1870, to 151,912. It will change the representation in twenty-five States, all of which will gain, except Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, which lose one Representative each. The States affected are as follows:

States.	Present Number.	New Number.	Gain.	Loss.
Arkansas	4	5	1	—
California	4	6	2	—
Georgia	9	10	1	—
Illinois	19	20	1	—
Iowa	9	11	2	—
Kansas	3	7	4	—
Kentucky	10	11	1	—
Maine	5	4	—	1
Massachusetts	11	12	1	—
Michigan	9	11	2	—
Minnesota	3	5	2	—
Mississippi	6	7	1	—
Missouri	13	14	1	—
Nebraska	1	3	2	—
New Hampshire	3	2	—	1
New York	33	34	1	—
North Carolina	8	9	1	—
Ohio	20	21	1	—
Pennsylvania	27	28	1	—
South Carolina	5	7	2	—
Texas	6	11	5	—
Vermont	3	2	—	1
Virginia	9	10	1	—
West Virginia	3	4	1	—
Wisconsin	8	9	1	—

By this apportionment the North will gain twenty Representatives and lose three, making a net gain of seventeen, while the South will gain fifteen and loses none. New England loses three and gains one, making a net loss of two. Classifying the States politically, according to the electoral vote of 1880, the net gain to the Republican States is fifteen and to the Democratic seventeen. This would increase the Democratic electoral vote seventeen and the Republican fifteen, whenever the States would go as they did in 1880.

THE VERDICT.

With all due deference for womanly feelings, we are compelled to characterize the letter which Mrs. Scoville is said to have written Mrs. Garfield, imploring interference on behalf of her wretched brother, the condemned assassin Guiteau, as exceedingly ill-advised.

Mrs. Garfield has suffered heartbreaking grief caused by the dastardly villain who, on the second of July last, fired the shot that deprived her of a husband and the Country of a Chief Magistrate. She properly declined making written reply to the communication of Mrs. Scoville, but is reported as saying—"the murderer's fate rests with God and the American people."

The verdict has been rendered and universally accepted as just.

Guiteau must pay the forfeit of his life.

There let the curtain drop.

A CHECKMATE.

It is not a year ago that the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company was flanked in their attempt to obtain possession of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railway. The concern virtually was in their grip, but too much public talk and too many friends undid the business, and the Pennsylvania Company swooped like a flash and whisked away with the coveted prize before the very eyes of the astonished Baltimore and Ohio Company. Common sense would seem to dictate that that lesson would have been profitable so far as future operations were concerned. But not so. About a month ago the air was rife that the Baltimore and Ohio Company had united with the Reading, and both had obtained possession of the New Jersey Central Road. As often as a denial came from New York, a reiteration was sent over from Philadelphia. Mr. Gowen was positive he had his bird caged, and Mr. Garrett backed him up. Their asseverations must have been based upon fact, for on Wednesday a bill was rushed through the New Jersey Legislature allowing the Jersey Central to issue $8,000,000 stock—80,000 shares—to pay off the income bonds. This was a knock-down argument for Gowen and Garrett, and sent them both to grass. Another point that may not be amiss here shows how indiscreet Mr. Garrett acted in showing his hand at this time, not only when adverse legislative action could be taken against him, but when the Pennsylvania Company could shut him out from Philadelphia to Baltimore until he completed his own new road between those two points. It is doubtful whether any change of management in the New Jersey Central would improve its condition or enhance the value of its stock. The road is managed carefully, ably, and economically, and stockholders and travelers could hardly look for better accommodations or very extensive improvements.

The Garrett-Gowen party, having apparently recovered from their astonishment at the blow they received from Messrs. Lathrop, Gould, and their associates in the management of the Jersey Central Railroad, made their first defensive movement on Saturday last. It consisted in an application to Judge Arnoux of the Superior Court of New York city for an injunction to restrain the Central and its directors from acting under the provisions of the bill passed at Trenton early in the week. The suit is brought by Wm. F. Proctor, General Manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, which owns 10,000 shares of the stock of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and is in his own behalf and that of other stockholders who may join in the suit. The affidavits upon which the application is based are made by F. B. Gowen, President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, and Thomas P. Fancher, a lawyer of New York city. Judge Arnoux granted the application, and directed the company and its officers to show on Feb. 28 why the injunction should not be made permanent.

Judge Lathrop has received a circular letter pledging him support, which is signed by all of the directors and by John S. Kennedy, J. D. Vermilye, A. J. Drexel, George H. Potts, S. D. Babcock, Thomas Dickson and R. A. McCurdy.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

In the Senate Monday night there was a lively tilt between Senators Youngblood and Vail on a re-consideration of the Senate bill, which had also passed the House, increasing the salary of the Chancellor from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. The former desired a reconsideration, the latter objected. Finally a resolution to recall the bill from the House was agreed to by a vote of 11 to 10. Later in the evening the Clerk of the House delivered to the Senate the bill, with the information that it had passed the House. It was not returned, however, in answer to the resolution passed. The Senate then went into executive session, confirming the Governor's nominations of P. H. Laverty, of Hudson, for State Prison Keeper and Wm. H. Kirk, of Essex county, as Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

In the House the following resolutions were introduced by Assemblyman Flynn, and adopted:

WHEREAS, As citizens of a free government, enjoying, as we do, liberty, equality and independence, and as representatives of the people of a free State, one of the original thirteen which composed the American Union, it is but meet that we at this trying hour of Ireland's struggle for the overthrow of a system and government whose history of centuries of wrongs, cruelties and oppressions of a people unparalleled in its history of human government, should at least express our sympathy with the struggle and also encourage the efforts being made by our Congressmen, to the end that our National Government shall interfere to secure the release from British prisons of American citizens alleged to be incarcerated therein without any legal or justifiable cause; therefore,

Resolved, That we, as members of the House of Assembly of New Jersey, do hereby extend our heartfelt sympathy to the people of Ireland now engaged in the struggle for the overthrow of the pernicious and cruel system of landlordism which upholds it, and earnestly hope not only that the effort will be early crowned with success, but that Ireland ere long will have a government of her own, whose laws shall be the will of the people;

And be it further resolved, That we look for and expect on the part of our National Government prompt and vigorous action for the release of American citizens imprisoned as aforesaid, and to this end we invoke the aid of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, to whom shall be sent copies of this preamble and resolutions, duly authenticated under the hands of the Speaker and Clerk of this House.

Mr. Sisson then offered a preamble and concurrent resolution relative to the imprisonment of American citizens in British prisons in Ireland, and requesting our Senators and Representatives to urge upon the Federal authorities the duties of an immediate and zealous investigation into the cause of such imprisonment, and if the same are found to be illegally and unjustly detained, to take such steps as shall secure their prompt deliverance; and that a copy of these resolutions, when signed by the Speaker, President of the Senate and the Governor, be sent to each of said Representatives. Adopted.

Mr. Clarke offered a resolution which "recognizes with pride the sentiments enunciated by Representative A. A. Hardenbergh in his speech in the House of Representatives lately, delivered on the resolution of Hon. W. A. Robinson, of New York, calling the attention of the United States government to the cases of American citizens confined in British dungeons," and "that our said Representative, Mr. Hardenbergh, in said speech, pronounced the sentiments of this House in his sympathy expressed for a liberty-loving people struggling for their rights." Adopted.

Mr. Herr also offered resolutions, protesting in the most positive manner the action of the Russian Government in their persecution of the Jews in that country, which were adopted.

The Governor returned to the House without his approval, Assembly bill, No. 69, entitled "An act concerning the Grand Army of the Republic," which provides that whenever the Grand Army of the Republic shall go into a field encampment the officers in charge may make rules, regulations, &c., which would give power to make arrests and impose fines and penalties.

The Governor had signed 12 bills up to Tuesday morning.

The Republican members of the Senate and House of Assembly met in joint caucus Tuesday night, in the Assembly Chamber, at the State Capitol. After a session of an hour and forty minutes, they decided upon the following nominations for presentation to the joint meeting of the Legislature to be held on Tuesday next, the 28th inst.: State Treasurer, Geo. M. Wright, of Burlington; State Prison Inspectors, Barclay Griscomb, Andrew Kerr and John P. Post; Police Justice of Jersey City, David W. Lawrence.

The bill appropriating $3,500 annually for three years to promote propagation and growth and protection of oysters in the natural oyster beds of the State was passed in the Senate. The veto of the Grand Army bill was discussed at length in the House and laid over for one week. The bill to abolish the office of Law Judge of Warren county was defeated. Business of both Houses was of routine character generally. The Governor returned to the Senate, with his veto, the bill which increases the salary of the Chancellor from $10,000 to $15,000. He states that it is unconstitutional to increase the Chancellor's salary during his term.

Mr. James M. Brady, son-in-law of the late Silas D. Herring, whose family resides in this city, was recently appointed an Assistant District Attorney of New York city. On Monday last, in consequence of the sickness of Assistant District Attorney Fellows, while prosecuting a case in the General Sessions, Mr. Brady took up the calendar and carried it through. This was his first appearance in court as Assistant District Attorney since his appointment. Mr. Brady is a lawyer of well-known and acknowledged ability and is capable of ably filling the important position to which he has been appointed.

Life Insurance.

We publish in our advertising columns to-day, the thirty-seventh annual report of the New York Life Insurance Company, which is probably one of the most successful statements of the past year's business ever recorded by a like organization. The growth of this company has been most remarkable and evidences the business talents and careful direction of its management. Organized in 1854 it to-day presents a showing that by comparison places it in the front rank of life insurance companies. The assets have increased during the past year, over four million dollars, the premium receipts nearly a million and a half, and the interest receipts over a hundred thousand dollars. There has likewise been an increase of new insurance effected of over ten million dollars, and of insurance in force an increase of over sixteen millions. The surplus at four per cent. is $834,017.83 more than it was a year ago. The policies in force, too, show an increase of over 5,000.—The total income during the past year has been over ten million dollars and the payments to policy holders over five million. The total amount received from premiums since 1845 has been nearly a hundred million dollars, nearly a quarter of which has been paid in death-claims and over thirty-seven millions in endowments, annuities and for surrendered policies. The State Agent for New Jersey is Mr. A. B. Reynell of this city, whose business office is located at 781 Broad street, Newark.

The Alpha Circle.

The above title is that assumed by a society formed of the older scholars of Mrs. Austin's Craig place school, and devoted to the pleasures and instructive features of literary pursuits. It gave a most enjoyable entertainment of readings, dialogues and recitations in the school room on Tuesday evening last, at which was present the many friends and parents of those who took part in the pleasing programme. The success of the affair was most remarkable, and not only were the little folks loudly applauded for their praiseworthy efforts, but Mrs. Austin was the recipient of much deserved commendation for the tuition and training she had expended upon the scholars with such enviable results.

The No. 3 Hose Ball.

The First Annual Ball of Warren Hose Co., at St. Mary's Hall on Thursday night and Friday morning of last week, completely and thoroughly realized the fond hopes and bright expectations of the large attendance that gathered in spite of the storm. The music and all arrangements were first class in every particular and "the boys and girls" joined heartily in having a fine time throughout the entire night. The company deserves a big profit and the Committee under the care of which the affair was consummated, deserve great praise. It was composed of Messrs G. R. Schlereth, J. Loughlin, G. Whitely, P. Maag and M. Flynn.

Town meetings occur March 14th—two weeks from next Wednesday.

WHERE is the capitalist who will invest money in a paying venture—the erection of a suitable Opera House in Plainfield?

AN alarm of fire Wednesday night called out the entire department. No cause for the alarm as yet ascertained by our vigilant police.

IT is just twelve months ago to-day since the Supreme Court issued its first mandamus against City Treasurer Van Winkle for the arrearage of State and County taxes amounting to $9,295.65.

WASHINGTON'S Birthday was appropriately observed in the city of Plainfield, by the closing of most of the places of business, display of flags, and the firing of a salute of guns by the Plainfield Artillery Company.

THERE have just arrived at the New Brunswick sale stables of Mr. John W. Morris, as announced in our advertising columns, some first-class Western horses and young mules at specially low prices and of high grades.

ON this (Friday) evening, the friends of the festive Knights of Pythias have been invited to a reception in Castle Hall, whereat the pleasures of the mazy dance and the enjoyments of tempting edibles, will combine with social intercourse in an entertaining evening.

THE auction sale of stock and other material, in front of the Post Office next Monday, advertised by posters, deserves the attention of those desirous of procuring good bargains. "The Fort is to be Evacuated" and the property advertised will certainly be sold to the highest bidder.

THE City Hotel property, New Brunswick, for several years past under the proprietorship of Mr. Peter Bailey, has been purchased by Mr. Abraham Kershaw, now proprietor of the Mansion House, Morristown, for $14,000. Mr. Kershaw takes possession March 1st. Mr. Bailey removes to Somerville.

ONE day recently, Mr. George Lewis of Somerset street, sold to Mr. E. L. Clarkson of New York a four-day-old calf out of Densie, a three-year old, numbered 10841 on the Herd Book. The father of the calf is of Mr. John L. Holly's celebrated Polonius Stock, and the price paid Mr. Lewis was $200.

IN another column will be found an account of a C. R. R. brakeman who was struck by the Fanwood bridge on Monday, but fortunately did not lose his life thereby. Two days after another met the same accident at the same place, but was knocked from the cars by the shock and falling under the wheels was mangled and cut into pieces.

THE next "descriptive talk" of the Y. M. C. A. course of free entertainments, will be given in the lecture room of the First Baptist Church on Tuesday evening. The speaker is the Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, pastor of the M. E. Church, and the subject, "Three Months in the British Islands." Tickets may be obtained without charge, of the Secretary of the Association.

THE Somerset County Agricultural Society, at their annual meeting held Saturday last, elected the following-named gentlemen officers for the ensuing year:

President—Col. A. S. Ten Eyck.
Vice-President—Calvin Corle.
Treasurer—L. R. Vredenburgh,
Secretary—Wm. S. Potter.

The Secretary reported on hand about $500.

A RESIDENT of "Tinkerville," a suburb of this city, just beyond Battle Row, was attacked with the J. J's one day recently and played a full hand of poker on his wife's skull. Captain Dodd arrested the "combustious" individual upon the promise of the assaulted that she would prefer charges against him. As usual, she failed so to do, and the prisoner was subsequently released.

POSTMASTER Pope visited Washington last Tuesday and brought back with him his commission to "keep the Post Office" for the next four years. The future location of the office has not as yet been positively determined upon. The present location is certainly a desirable one, should a new and appropriate building for the use of the office be determined on. Mr. Pope takes possession of the office next Wednesday.

MESSRS. French and Stryker, Clothiers, announce in this issue that they will shortly open their manufactory for Military and other clothing, in this city. Mr. French is too well known as a manufacturer of first-class clothing to need any recommendation from us. He makes up the best in that line. The firm will manufacture Military Clothing in this city, having their business office in Bond street, New York.

THE owners or managers of a place of public gathering so difficult of egress as VanDeventer Hall, should establish a rule that no company giving an entertainment therein should under any plea be allowed to move forward the seats back of the usual opening that crosses the room, and thereby block up that means of reaching the centre aisle. It is very inconvenient for those having reserved seats situated on the side opposite the door, to be compelled to pass forward to the front of the Hall before it is possible to cross the room.

THE Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church held its regular monthly sociable on Friday evening of last week, with the usual enviable success. The entertainment for the body was after the prevailing enjoyable style, while that for the mind took the form of some very talented reading by Miss Julia Ketcham, pleasing solo singing by Mrs. Thos. B. Stillman and wonderful piano playing by Miss Stella Place. The latter proved herself a little lady of marvelous accomplishment as a performer, and one whose future is certain of being a career that many a professional artist may justly desire to achieve.

MICHAEL DOYLE, a well-known resident of Elizabeth, died at his residence in that city last Saturday in the 50th year of his age. It will be remembered that Mr. Doyle ran for the office of Sheriff of Union County twice a few years since, on the Democratic ticket and was defeated both times. He was at one time Street Commissioner of Elizabeth. He amassed considerable property in his business as contractor in grading streets, constructing sewers, &c., Financial reverses overtook him, however, leaving him a comparatively poor man at the time of his death. Mr. Doyle had many warm friends, and was himself a genial, whole-souled and honest man.

WE have visited the new industry in this city, known as the Plainfield Steam Carpet Cleaning, Mattress & Feather Bed Renovating Co., conducted by C. W. Whitney & Co., and were much pleased and instructed in viewing the modus operandi of cleaning carpets by the new process in comparison with the old method of shaking, beating and whipping by inexperienced persons. The machinery for performing the work is simple and effective. There is no danger of ripping or tearing the carpets, and they are cleaned perfectly. When you "clean house" send your carpets, mattresses, feather beds, &c., to the above firm for renovation. It will pay you. Read their advertisement in another column.

To Whom it May Concern.

Mrs. John Shay of North Plainfield, for herself and husband—who was given a benefit ball by the members of No. 2 Engine Co., recently—wishes to publicly convey their thanks for the many favors and services accorded by all who assisted on that occasion, and to express their appreciation of the substantial benefit that resulted.

Y. M. C. A. Course.

The postponed lecture by Mr. Benj. Taylor, that had been advertised in the Y. M. C. A., Course for the 9th inst. but omitted on account of that gentleman's severe illness, will be given in the M. E. church on the evening of Monday next. This will probably be the last opportunity our public will have this season to enjoy a thoroughly talented discourse, and will no doubt be largely attended.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

A Need Supplied.

In our advertising columns will be found the prospectus of "A General United States Land Office," established by Col. A. D. Hope so long exclusively connected with the C. R. R. of N. Dr. H. H. Lowrie's Address.

In the Y. M. C. A. Hall, last Thursday evening, Henry H. Lowrie, M. D., addressed a good-sized audience of men, on the subject previously announced, viz., "Some of the Causes of Nervous Disorders." It was an eminently healthful and helpful presentation of truths of prime importance. There are many things which ought to be said, very plainly, but which it is difficult for the press or even the pulpit to deal with. In plain terms, while certain false notions of propriety prevail. But a private talk, to men only, by a conscientious physician, affords an opportunity which has long been wanting.

A Narrow Escape.

On Monday morning, as train No. 174, Conductor John Long, was switching freight cars at the Fanwood station, brakeman Wm. McCall of Elizabeth was struck by the Terrill road bridge and narrowly escaped fatal injuries. The unfortunate man stood on top of one of the cars with his back to the bridge under which the train was passing, and although moving slowly he was struck with force sufficient to knock him insensible. A fellow brakeman saw the accident and rapidly jumping from one car to another, succeeding in seizing McCall just as he was about to fall off the edge where he had been jolted by the motion of the train. The victim was brought to this city and attended by the C. R. R. Co's physician Dr. J. T. Fritts. Although the head was badly cut it was discovered that the skull was not fractured, and unless inflammation sets in, there is no doubt of the man's ultimate recovery. He was removed to his home the same day.

A Successful Concert.

The Rutgers College Glee Club of thirteen voices, on Monday evening, at Van Deventer Hall, gave one of the most pleasing concerts that has ever been rendered in this city. The audience was not so large as the entertainment deserved, but its entire appreciation was sufficiently flattering to acquit Plainfield of any lack of intelligent judgment and discerning taste. The programme by a careful selection of varied compositions, not only allowed a display of the many styles, methods and accomplishments of the numerous voices, but was thereby calculated to please the fitful ears and fickle choice of the promiscuous attendance. In fact, the combined efforts of the Club were received with such sincere favor, that we are promised a reappearance at a very early date. Those who took part were: Leader, Loren Bragdon, '76; First tenors, J. S. Wight, P. G., H. M. Voorhees '82 and S. G. Smith '85; Second tenors, M. T. Scudder, '82, J. W. Scudder, '83 and E. K. Losee, '85; First Bass, W. S. Cranmer, '82, Irving Burdick, '82, F. S. Scudder, '85; Second Bass, A. B. Havens, '83, A. F. Skinner, '83, and F. F. Hill, '83.

Alert's Re-union.

Last Monday evening, the members of "Alert Hose Co., No. 1, of this city," held their Thirteenth Annual Re-union in the parlor of their hose house. A number of invited guests and representatives of the Fire Department were present, and enjoyed the festivities of the occasion, which as usual, were of great enjoyment. Deiter, of Brooklyn, N. Y., catered for the occasion, and it was the unanimous expression of all present, after partaking of the good things spread before them, that he was par excellence in his line of business. Over fifty members and guests sat down to the spread, with Foreman Augustus Saltzman at the head of the table, and ex-Councilman W. Rockhill Potts, a member, his vis-a-vis. After satisfying the appetite, there was a feast of wit, music and song. Each gentleman present was expected to say something, however bashful he might be. To record all that was said in the speeches made would occupy too much of our space. Excellent music was furnished on the occasion under direction of Franze. The "Alert" Company rank among its members some of our most influential and respected citizens. Their "Re-unions" are characterized by gentlemanly action and speech. May we be present at their Fourteenth Annual Re-union.

Telephone Company.

A telephone line, between this city and New York is now an established fact, sufficient names have been secured by the agent to insure the construction of a line of wires between the above mentioned two points. The line will be in operation in about one month hence.

Equine Hydrophobia.

Early in December last a valuable horse belonging to Mr. Isaac Randolph of this city was bitten in the nose by a large Newfoundland dog owned by the same gentleman. The dog showed no symptoms of hydrophobia, and although dying within a day or two thereafter, did so without a spasm. Dr. M. B. Long who told of the facts, thought that the horse might be attacked with dydrophobia and informed Mr. Randolph of such signs by which he might be warned in that case. The latter, although apprehensive at first, dismissed all thoughts of danger after a few weeks had passed, but on Monday last the dread disease made its appearance and it became necessary to shoot the horse.

Citizen's Building Loan Association.

The annual meeting of the above association was held at its rooms on Monday evening, with but a small attendance.—The usual report was read by the Secretary. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected without opposition: President, L. E. Barkalew; Vice President, John Harris; Secretary, Geo. W. Appleton; Treasurer, Jeremiah Van Winkle; Board of Directors, John Hickey, Andrew Zetas, Charles Austin, John H. Van Winkle, Gabriel Bachman, Chas. McCann, John Becker and Godfried Haberle. In the old series five shares were sold at 5 and one at 2. In the new series two at 1, four at ½ and three more offered for which there was no bid. The money sold was $2,000. to be paid by the "old Directors" as ordered in a recent decision of the Chancellor.

Personals.

Dr. Chas. S. McKnight of this city who succeeded to the practice of the late Dr. Chas. H. Stillman, was recently married to Miss Kate DuBois Lounsberry, at the house of the bride, Kingston N. Y. Mrs. McKnight is a daughter of ex-Congressman William Lounsberry formerly Mayor of Kingston and is a lady of great accomplishments. The newly wedded pair are spending a honeymoon in the South, during which the groom's patients are in charge of Dr. M. B. Long.

Mr. Wm. W. Reynell of this city has been appointed Officer Manager of the New Jersey State Agency of the New York Life Insurance Company, at Newark.

THE many friends of Foreman Doane will be glad to hear of his speedy progress towards entire recovery. That unfortunate victim to gratuitous duty was able to be out the other day and called upon us to report approaching restoration of health and strength.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

The Saengerbund Masquerade.

During the early evening of Tuesday last, the corners of North and Park avenues presented a scene somewhat unusual in the way of excitement. Carriage after carriage drove up to the entrance of the Saengerbund rooms and deposited their loads of fancifully dressed mortals who had come to attend the Second Annual Masquerade of that popular society. So continuous were the arrivals that by ten o'clock the large Hall was comfortably crowded with merry devotes of mimic impersonation, although the inclemency of the weather out doors undoubtedly influenced the absence of a great number.

The Grand March was certainly as gay and brilliant a scene as one need wish to gaze upon, and at least fifty couples took part in the intricate evolutions through which they were scientifically led by President Charles Mass, Floor Manager Charles Dressell, Assistant Edwin Bachman and the Committee of arrangements, Messrs. Charles Smith, George Bremer, Michael Koller, Otto Ebel and Rudolph Laurent. These gentlemen were unmasked but clad in costly velvet and gold costumes of foreign courtiers, which set off their manly forms and reflected great credit on the establishment of Mr. Jules Bontes from whence these and the majority of the other costumes were furnished. To attempt a description of the many dresses or even to make special reference would be beyond our reportorial power and extend without the boundaries of our available space. The decorations were as handsome as usual and probably more novel and varied than in the past. The music was of the best, and under the leadership of Prof. Franze the popular compositions of the day led the graceful couples through an order of dance judiciously selected and arranged.

It need not be said that the Ball was a successful affair throughout, and it was not until the dawn of Washington's birthday that the last couple left for home.

The Pleiades (?)

In spite of the presence of other attractions in this city at the same time, every seat in the Park avenue Baptist church was sold and occupied on Monday evening last, and the overflow of attendance necessitated the opening of the lecture room for its accommodation. So successful a sale of reserved seats for an entertainment was never before accomplished in this city outside of the Y. M. C. A. Course, and evidences the fact that a suitable opera house in Plainfield at which could appear with comfort and the necessary acoustic properties the higher class of entertainments, would be a financial success.

The occasion that brought together so large an audience, was an entertainment under the management of that able director Mr. Harry St. Ormond, in which appeared Miss Helen Potter and a remnant of the Pleiades that had but recently dissolved. Miss Potter as an elocutionist and impersonator has always been a Plainfield favorite, so that her success of the evening was but a repetition of a past achievement. Some disappointment, however, was felt that the programme did not include other impersonations besides her duplicate Gough, as in such line of business the lady displays the only talent of which she can justly claim a monopoly. Her admirers will be glad to learn that in future Miss Potter will travel as an individual planet unattended by subordinate satellites, and devote herself entirely to the personification of divers prominent characters familiar to the public.

Probably the most marked success of the evening was that attained by Mr. J. Williams Macy, the buffo-basso, who has appeared in this city before as a member of the Young Appollo Club. The enthusiastic reception accorded him and the appreciative applause that followed his efforts, were unusual expressions of favorable criticism. He was recalled after each appearance and another vocal obligation insisted upon, while his last selection was rewarded with that phenomenal indulgence of Plainfield audiences, a double encore.

Miss Anna Bing Greene as Pianiste, rendered Chopin's solo, op. 40, with much taste and effect, besides very efficiently managing the accompaniments. It is to be regretted that the piano was placed so much below the platform occupied by the vocalists, as it was evident that at times the latter were unable to hear the instrument. As a whole, however, the combination of talent achieved decided success, and a desirable share of financial profit was secured by the church committee which deserves so much credit for arranging the entertainment.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

While it is the province and duty of a minister of the gospel to denounce sin and wrong doing, yet it is not right, but on the contrary is wrong, unfair and unmanly to make personal attacks upon reputable citizens from the pulpit, because if for no other reason, the individual assailed has no opportunity for reply. The sermon of the Rev. T. H. Stockton, delivered on Sunday evening, Feb. 12th, and printed in the Central New Jersey Times of last week, is full of animadversions against two of our most respected citizens. Sermon it cannot properly be called, it should rather be classed as a stump speech, ostensibly on the license question, while in point of fact it is only an unmanly way of ventilating his wrath and disappointment, because the gentleman alluded to therein did not vote in the Council in accordance with his views upon the license question. Narrowmindedness and bigotry are, I am sorry to admit, sometimes found in the pulpit, and in all candor I must say that this is not the only instance of such fact in the career of the Reverend gentleman.

A suppression of the truth or the truth only half told, so that a false coloring or impression may be given of the acts or the views of any one, is about the meanest kind of conduct on the part of any honorable man when speaking of others that I know of.

I am particularly struck with this fact in the reference made by the Reverend gentleman to the report by one of the gentlemen alluded to in answer to the petition of 579 women against licenses, part of which he quotes:

He says, speaking of the six gentlemen of the Council who voted lately for licenses, that "one of them is a gentleman who is greatly respected, and even beloved, of whom much was expected, even in spite of his past record; very few of us imagined he would vote for license. This gentleman was a member of a former Council, and then gave his vote for license, &c., &c.," and then goes on to quote a portion of that report which he admits is excellent advice, but takes good care to entirely suppress such part of the report as shows conclusively why the gentleman referred to considered it wiser and more prudent to vote for [illegible] repugnant to him) to all; that on a careful investigation, the statistics showed that more liquor was sold and more drunkenness existed during the time when no licenses were granted (and ostensibly the saloons were closed) than during preceeding years when its sale was controlled by the license law, thus clearly depriving the gentleman of the effect of that part of the report which is all the vindication he needed in explanation of his course. It seems that the Reverend Mr. Stockton "expected much of this gentleman even in spite of his record." What he based such expectations on, with reference to the license question, I fail to see, and he certainly fails to tell us, for the gentleman had very clearly defined his position, both by the report mentioned and by his vote. The real fact is, that Mr. Stockton thought he and some of his radical temperance friends could bring sufficient pressure to bear on the gentleman, to force him to vote as they directed or urged, and he cannot conceal his displeasure because they were not successful.

The temperance question was not made an issue at the election. Mr. Stockton clearly admits this, for speaking of the "Independent ticket" he says, "there were those interested in this ticket, who wanted to make it an out-and-out temperance ticket, and would have been quite willing to fail with it, as such, as to succeed with it otherwise. It could not be however."

Why, I asked, could it not be? What good reason could he give for not putting in the field a strict temperance ticket? Only this, the certainty that the great majority of the voters of our city would not support it, and so they concluded to rest satisfied with trying to coerce such men as might be elected, to vote as they would dictate. Talk of cowardice! It is the temperance men who have shown it. Mr. Stockton says, "it is not absolutely known that there is no public sentiment to sustain an anti-license movement, &c., &c."

Why did he not use the only practical and certain way of finding out the fact, by submitting it to a vote of the people? The vote two years ago on the money question was clearly against the no-license movement.

If the refusal to grant licenses would stop the sale of liquor in our city, there is no one I firmly believe, who would be more earnest in advocating that course than the gentleman most prominently alluded to by Mr. Stockton.

But "facts are stubborn things," and [illegible] of the past. No-license alone will not stop the sale of liquor, will not lessen intemperance in our community.

In order to overcome this evil, there must be, in addition to no-license, unceasing vigilance on the part of the temperance men of our city every day and every night too. There must be those who will make it their business to watch and ferret out and prosecute those who would certainly sell liquor clandestinely and illegally. Money, and in no small amount either would be needed, for the liquor men will always contest every inch of ground in the Courts, and they will use money without stint.

At the close of his sermon he seems to realize the necessity of an active temperance movement from the present time until the next election, and if this is done effectively and earnestly the election of a temperance ticket is possible, in which case a no-license law might be successfully enforced, and no one would rejoice more than the writer, who is a temperance man.

FAIR PLAY.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

North Plainfield's Finances.

The Tenth Annual Report of the Township Committee of North Plainfield, about being published, shows a financial strength reflecting great credit upon the several officers. The Collector's report shows only a balance of $2,407.60 uncollected taxes due the Township and $145.71 due on School account. The amount in his hands due Districts No's 14, 36, 37 and 38 is $6,423.41. The total amount of outstanding bonds is $24,600 bearing interest at 7 per cent. and $19,000 at 6 per cent. The reduction of the debt during the past year has been $2,500.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Again is our public to be favored with the rendition of the old familiar drama of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and upon this occasion played by the celebrated Jay Rial combination, the best on the road. The press, wherever this company has appeared, concede its dramatization of the story as the most complete and artistic, and certainly the fact of its having given the performance for five successive years in the chief cities of the Union, to paying houses, proves its excellence. Seats can be secured at Dunham & Miller's pharmacy, and the play will be given in Van Deventer Hall on Thursday evening of next week.

AT about 3:30 a. m. of Wednesday last, the smoke house adjacent to Israel Lewis' residence on Somerset street, North Plainfield, and used in connection with adjoining slaughter houses, was burned to the ground before the arrival of any beneficial assistance by the Fire Department apparatuses. The cause of the conflagration is unknown.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

Fair Famed "Hazel Kirke."

The celebrated play of "Hazel Kirke" is advertised for representation at Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday next, March 1st, by a special company that have been producing it with such popularity throughout the country. The great play is to be performed here by the same fine cast and with the same magnificent scenic effects that have won for it such general renown. "Hazel Kirke" is, beyond question, one of the strongest productions ever placed upon the stage. It has received the unqualified endorsement of the press without a single exception, and fairly captures its audiences. The hold that it has upon the public heart will be readily appreciated by the many who contemplate witnessing it here on the evening above stated. The demand for seats is already very large. Early application should therefore be made at Dunham & Miller's Pharmacy.

THE STORY OF "HAZEL KIRKE."

Hazel Kirke is the daughter of a well-to-do miller, and has nursed back to life Lord Travers, whom her father saved from drowning. She is betrothed to Aaron Rodney, a wealthy neighbor, who nobly resigns her when he discovers the love which has grown up between her and Lord Travers. She marries the nobleman, and her father, whose intractable temper prevents him from understanding the situation, drives her from home. She is happy with her husband until his mother tells her that she is not his lawful wife, and that he must marry another woman, whose fortune his dead father has stolen. This, she says, is the only course to save the family honor, and Hazel, believing that her husband has deceived her, flies from the place. Her father has lost his eyesight during her absence, and as she opens the window of the old room on a wild and stormy night, she hears him bewailing his misfortunes and charging them to her. She enters and meets Rodney, her old lover, who again offers to marry her. The old man does not know of her presence, and when Rodney asks his consent, he refuses and says he would drive her from his door. After Rodney leaves, she resolves to drown herself and leaves the house. A moment later a shout that Hazel is drowning is heard, and the old man in his helplessness can do nothing for her. The stubbornness and cruelty that drove her to the attempt to take her own life, flashes upon him. In an instant, and in his misery, his senses leave him. Hazel is saved by Lord Travers, her husband, who has followed her. Her voice brings the old man back to the world again, and the play ends happily.

The Board of Directors of the "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" held a special meeting at the Mansion House, this city, Wednesday evening last, at which much important business was transacted of interest to sportsmen. The Legislative Committee presented certain bills now before the Legislature affecting the game and fish laws, some of which were approved and others condemned.—The subject of stocking certain sections of the State with quail the coming season, was thoroughly canvassed and it was decided to liberate none but Western birds. Mr. Thomas H. Smith's celebrated trotter, Rabond, well known in this part of the country, was accidently killed on Thursday night last. Mr. Smith kept Rabond in his stable on Orchard street, and on the night named the horse kicked himself astride of an upright post, and was unable to get off. The post pierced through the animal's belly, almost to the backbone, and must have caused the most intense agony. Friday morning the animal was found dead, his hind quarters hanging on the post, his head down. He was valued at about $1,200. For a genial gentleman like Mr. Smith, he seems to have unusual bad luck with his beautiful and valuable horses.—Elizabeth Journal.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Township Committee have completed and published their financial report for the year ending Feb. 17, 1882. It should be read and examined carefully by every person interested in the welfare of our Township. It shows the Township in a good state financially; the Collector having a balance in his hands of $1,817.46, and the Township Treasurer with a cash balance of $330.11, with the debts all paid. For all that, has been [illegible] in the way of gossip about the expenses of our Town Committee, in holding so many meetings during the past, although no more than were actually necessary to transact the business which was entrusted to them, it compares favorably with last year's report; less unpaid taxes and more cash in the hands of Collector and Treasurer. The total expenses of the Town Committee and Town Clerk are less than they were last year.

The death of Josiah Seymour Ferris, aged 94 years, occurred last Friday from old age. His funeral took place on Monday 20th inst, at 2 p. m., from the residence of his son, James R. Ferris, residing on Broad street. The funeral ceremonies were performed by the Rev. W. Hoagland of the M. E. church, of which the deceased had for a long time been a member. The deceased was born in St. Johns, New Brunswick; his business for a long time was that of a merchant. He was a resident of New York State for some time, and held several positions of trust there, he at one time holding the office of Sheriff. He removed to our town in the year 1856, and in the years 1856 and 1859, was elected and held the position of Township Clerk of our Township. The deceased and Aunt Phoebe Ross, being two of the oldest residents of the village. Aunt Phoebe's age being now 96 years.

At a meeting of the Health Board held Tuesday evening, Feb. 21st inst., the following communication was received from the Township Attorney, read and on motion ordered spread upon the minutes.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 20, 1882.

To Henry F. Alpers, Chairman of the Board of Health, Westfield, N. J.:

DEAR SIR:—With respect to your inquiry regarding the duties and liabilities of persons infected with contagious diseases, and of those having the care of any such person, and particularly regarding the duty of the Board of Health in such cases, I beg leave to advise:

1st. That it is the duty of any person infected with contagious disease to withdraw himself so far as he is able from association with other people.

2d. It is the duty of all persons in whose charge one so infected may happen to be to keep him in a secluded place away from the haunts of other men; and that at their own cost and at whatever cost.

3d. It is the duty of the Board of Health to act the policeman and see that these common law principles and the township health ordinances in furtherance of the same are strictly observed. Health ordinances are usually so wise that moral suasion is sufficient for their enforcement, but the law has provided a stronger weapon and enacts that for every violation of a Health ordinance a penalty of one hundred dollars shall be exacted and that the culprit shall be imprisoned until it is paid. But the violation of the common law principles above mentioned is a more serious matter. For one infected with contagious disease to carelessly expose himself in public to the danger of those whom he meets is to commit a crime for which he may be indicted and punished, and for those having the care or charge of one so infected to take him or maintain or keep him in a public place where people come and go, is to commit a common nuisance for which they may be indicted and on conviction may be sent to the State Prison. And more if one having charge of a person infected with contagious disease should carelessly expose him to others, or if one having charge of an infected house carelessly allow persons to enter it and any one in such way should contract the disease and died from its effects, the one in charge would be guilty of manslaughter. So jealous is the law of human life that if any one trifles with it and death results the crime is but one degree below murder. The case of the woman Alcorn at Elizabeth, who mixed poison for rats and carelessly left it where her husband got it to eat, and the case of the young man Wolfe of Paterson who pointed a loaded gun at his friend for fun until it discharged its contents in her abdomen, are exactly on a par with the case of exposure I have suggested. All are cases where death is assumed to result from no intent to produce it, but simply from careless regard of life. I write the above not because I have heard from you or any one else that there is any serious opposition to your heath regulations but because you asked me to state the whole law on the subject and because too it may be desirable in future for you to be prepared to deal with any case that may arise without delay.

I remain yours truly,
R. V. LINDABURY.

Dr. Smith answered the indignation of the Town Committee by presenting to them a bill of five dollars for removing the servant girl, Bridget Moloney, into the cellar. So says one of the Elizabeth papers under the head of "Westfield News," the truth of the matter is that Dr. Smith presented a bill of $39.00 for medical attendance upon the servant girl; among the items of said bill was one of five dollars for carrying the girl into the cellar, which was an outrage to commence with. The Town Committee were indignant over the whole bill, and immediately erased among other items the one of five dollars spoken of, in fact cutting the bill down to $16.00, considerable less than one half of the original bill. This sad affair was not the result of neglect on the part of the Health Board, but if any neglect at all it must have been on the part of the medical attendant and of the family where she resided.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

A Perfect Corset Secured at Last!
It is a well-known fact that a large proportion of the ills of female life are directly attributed to the unyielding pressure of the Corset about the waist of the wearer. This evil has been entirely overcome in this corset, by the introduction of ELASTIC SECTIONS, composed of A SERIES OF FINE, COILED WIRE SPRINGS.
These springs are warranted to retain their perfect elasticity until the corset is worn out; and, unlike rubber, will not heat the person or decay with age. This corset yields readily to every respiration, and is equally comfortable in any position assumed by the wearer. Will fit, perfectly, a greater variety of forms than any other.

MR. AND MRS. SPOOPENDYKE

THE 'EXPERT' QUESTION UNDER DISCUSSION.

'My dear,' said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she wiped the corner of the baby's mouth, and curled up a roll on the top of its head, 'Why don't you go and be an expert?'

'Expert in what?' demanded Mr. S. dropping his paper. 'What kind of an expert?'

'Don't you know? An expert who goes to court and yells right out what he thinks of hypothetical questions and heads, and knows by the almanac just when a man is crazy and when he isn't.'

'Anything particular the matter with your head this trip?' roared Spoopendyke. 'Been reading some old cook book lately? What're you talking about? What dress pattern have you got hold of now?'

'I was reading about Mr. Guiteau,' replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, 'and I thought how much better it must be to be an expert than to know anything about the case! That's why I asked. If a man knows anything they always prove that he don't, but if he is an expert, he just swears that a man who bothers him is crazy and that ends it.'

'I s'pose you think I've had so much experience in idiocy at home that I could make a fortune as an expert,' sputtered Mr. Spoopendyke. 'I tell you they are intelligent men. They make up their minds and swear to their opinions according to law. When the revised statutes at large provide for me as an expert, as they provide for idiots, lunatics, habitual drunkards and married women, I'll go into the business!' and Mr. Spoopendyke winked at himself triumphantly as he thought over the last shot.

'Well,' rejoined Mrs. Spoopendyke, bridling indignantly, 'if the revised statutes provide that way, they ought to be shut up. They're no business at large. I didn't know that these experts were legalized. I supposed they just went there to help their friends along.'

'No they don't either!' retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. 'They go to swear whether the man is insane or not.'

'But what do they want to drown him for?' argued Mrs. Spoopendyke. 'There they were all talking at once and getting along pleasantly, when all of a sudden Mr. Porkhill and Col. Corker and Mr. Savage threw Mr. Guiteau into the dock?'

'Drown your grandmother's hind leg!' howled Mr. Spoopendyke. 'What d'ye think a law dock is? Got a notion it's a pond with green scum on top of it? S'pose it's a two inch mud puddle with a fence around it, and a Congressional appropriation to make it navigable? It's a pen, I tell you; a railed pen in the Court room, where they put prisoners! Guiteau bothered the experts so that they had to put him in the pen. Think you understand it now?'

'Of course,' assented Mrs. Spoopendyke, 'but why did'nt they put Mr. Scoville and Reed there, too? They are trying to bother the experts just as much as Guiteau did. They won't let the poor men alone.'

'Don't you know the difference between a lawyer and a criminal?' ripped Mr. Spoopendyke, 'or is that too fine a distinction for you? Reed and Scoville are defending Guiteau; Porter, Corkhill and Davidge are prosecuting him. Of course his lawyer will cross examine the witness against him. But it's no use to explain anything to you.'

'I understand that much,' returned Mrs. Spoopendyke, 'but I don't understand what Judge Cox means by pitching into the lawyers and over-riding their questions. The first he knows the expert will swear that he is an asymmetical, and then he'll be put in the docks with Guiteau, where it will go hard with him. I tell you a Judge can't be too careful how he behaves,' and Mrs. Spoopendyke pinned the baby's skirts and smoothed out it's dress.

'Wow!' yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, unable for an instant to throw his feelings into any coherent form of speech. 'You have struck it! You're a whole barrel of canned judiciary! All you want now is a red label on your back and some marginal notes to be a dod gasted law library! If you'd change assistants once a month and win four cases during one term of office, you'd only need three deodands and a plug hat to be a district attorney! You've got the idea! There's nothing more to be said on either side! Give you a black petticoat with sleeves to it and a wart on your nose, and you would only want a restaurant in the basement and a lounge up stairs to be a United States Supreme Court! What d'ye suppose a Judge is for; a substitute? Think he sits around to ease the prisoner, turn and turn about? Got some kind of an idea that he is a work on etiquette, with mottled leaves and a yellow binding, and Tommy from Fannie, on the fly? I tell you he presides! And anybody but a half-witted woman who didn't think with her heels and reason with the rat-hole next door, wouldn't need to be told of it more times than she makes an idiot of herself!'

'If he presides, it's all right,' rejoined Mrs. Spoopendyke, with a sigh of relief, 'but I got the idea that he went there to feel the public sentiment, and then say those were his views, and he was only helping the prosecution to see the error of Guiteau's ways before his conduct was snapped up and used against him.'

Mr. Spoopendyde drew off his clothing solemnly, fired the pieces into different corners, and waded into bed with the stern reflection that 'some people only needed side whiskers and a note book full of bad lectures on repealed statutes to be a law school.'

'I don't care,' muttered Mrs. Spoopendyke, 'I like those experts, and I wish my husband would go in the business. They may not hang Mr. Guiteau, but they'll find the jury insane, and Mr. Porter will have to look up some other kind of a job, for this trial won't last forever.'

With which satisfactory solution of the national complication, Mrs. Spoopendyke undressed the baby, dropping the pins where Mr. Spoopendyke would be sure to find them the moment he stepped out of bed in the morning.

HOW PEOPLE SNEEZE.

Sneezing and the manner in which the sneeze is sneezed is an interesting study in itself. No two persons sneeze exactly alike. A two months' study of this spasmodic practice has fully demonstrated the fact that there is as much individuality in the sneeze of the average man or woman as there is in the laugh, the conversation, the walk, or the handwriting.

The little boarding-school miss trips jauntily along the street, and, in turning to note if she is attracting due attention, happens to inadvertently look at the sun. In a moment her nostrils begin to tickle, and burying her face in the folds of the neatest of cambric handkerchiefs, she contracts her shoulders and gives utterance to the daintiest "skick-skick-skick" imaginable.

The fat woman with a basket upon her arms halts suddenly upon the street, bows her head reverently, remains so for a few moments in wild expectation, and then, straightening up a little, inhales the air until she swells up like a balloon, then "ah h-chooooo! ah-h-hachooooo! ah-ah-ah skishtshoo, oh, my!" and wabbles along wiping her inflamed nose on her apron.

The tall, cadaverous man, whose every look indicates the presence of consumption, stops short on the sidewalk, nervously runs his hands into half a dozen pockets before he can find his handkerchief, throws his head backward until his nose points at the City Hall clock, and electrifies all within hearing with a spasmodic "witchoo wi witchoo witcho-o-o-o-witchoo-darn-the-luck!" then gives his peaked nasal organ a swipe or two and moves painfully along.

There are a thousand and one other styles of accomplished sneezing, and it will repay any one to note the variety and style of the various sneezers to be met with daily upon the streets.

CONSUMPTION.

IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Hall's Journal of Health, referring to Consumption, makes the following important statement:

"Consumption usually begins with a slight, dry cough in the morning, then, on going to bed, getting more and more frequent, with more and more phlegm, increasing debility, thinness of flesh, shortness of breath, and quickness of pulse. In fatal cases its average course is about two years; hence the importance of arresting the disease at as early a stage as possible, and the sooner rational means are employed for this purpose the greater the chance of success. The disease is owing to an irritation commencing in the throat and extending to the lungs, so that their action is interfered with, and the blood does not receive sufficient oxygen to purify it. The most marked sign of lung disease is emaciation; and the most positive indication of returning health is increase in weight."

So speaks Hall's Journal of Health, and we may add that in desperate cases, and, in fact, in all cases of Consumption, or troubles of the throat and lungs, immediate relief may be obtained and a permanent cure effected by the use of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, a medicine known for more than thirty-five years as an unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary and pectoral diseases. That the worst cases of Consumption have been cured by the use of Hall's Balsam has been attested to by the thousands who have used it, or have been cognizant of its wonderful remedial efficacy.

POETRY.

AN APPEAL TO THE HEART.

Is there one heart bowed down with care,
That needs scarce more to break it?
Oh, if one word that heart will cheer,
Brother, speak it!

Is there one soul pressed to the grave,
With death and sin to crave it?
Oh, if a helping hand will save,
Brother, save it!

Is there one wretch now hungering for
The bread that would relieve it?
When but a loaf will give succor,
Brother, give it!

Are there sad hearts now dimmed with tears,
That ask some one to clear them?
Does some soul cry, when pressed with fear?
Brother, hear them!

Is there some life that bears its cross,
And all too weak to bear it?
Count not the sharing all a loss,
Brother, share it!

Is there rewards for kind deeds done,
Vouchsafed by Love infinite?
O brother, while it may be won,
Brother, win it!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A RAILWAY EPISODE.

Not long after the war ended, a gentleman had occasion to go from Cleveland to Pittsburg, and went on board the night train leaving the former place.

It was a midwinter evening and intensely cold, the mercury having fallen to fourteen degrees below zero. The car Mr. Blank stepped into was well filled, and he sat down near the rear end, in a seat unoccupied.

The train had proceeded some time, running at express speed, before the conductor made his appearance and began to collect fares, and they were far beyond the city limits, in the open and sparsely settled country.

Suddenly the train stopped as if pulled up for unusual cause. Mr. Blank looked out through the thickly frosted window, and saw that they were in an extensive piece of timber with no house in sight.

He wondered at the delay in such a place, and feared some accident to the engine, which might keep them there to their serious discomfort. As he wondered, he looked down the aisle and saw the conductor coming toward him, leading a woman. She was poorly clad and weeping bitterly.

Almost without thought Mr. Blank asked:

"What's the matter, Conductor?"

"She can't pay her fare," was the angry answer, "and she must get off."

"On such a night as this and here?" was further asked, as Mr. Blank rose and stepped into the aisle in front of them.

"She'd no business to get on, and it's my business to put her off," the conductor answered again; "let us pass."

"Where does she want to go?"

"To Pittsburg, sir," sobbed the lady.

"What is the fare?" continued Mr. Blank.

"Eight dollars," said the conductor, more angrily yet, "but that is no concern of yours; stand aside!"

"But it is a concern of mine, sir," and Mr. Blank began to get a little excited himself. "If you put this woman off here she'll freeze to death." It's an outrage to propose it. I'll pay her fare myself."

Blank started to take out his purse.

"I'll not take your money, and I won't have your impudence. Get away!" the conductor shouted.

But Blank did not move.

"Have you no money?" he asked, the woman still sobbing and trembling at the conductor's side.

"Yes," she brokenly answered, "I have five dollars, and I offered him that but he wouldn't take it. It's all the money I could get. I live in Pittsburg, but went to Cleveland to take care of my husband, who had gone there to work and had been sick. This afternoon I got a dispatch saying my two children were sick at home of scarlet fever, and I must come to them at once. I took all the money we had, only leaving just enough to buy my husband one perscription, and started. We have no friends in Cleveland, so I couldn't get any more; and I hoped somehow to get through with this."

"So you shall, my good woman," Mr. Blank assured her. "Sit right down in this seat in front of me, and don't you get up until I tell you to."

She obeyed, and the conductor grew livid with rage. Here was his authority defied and over ridden, with a car full of curious spectators, and he would not brook it.

"You shut your mouth, young man," he cried; "if you say another word I'll put you off. I'm running this train, I want you to understand. Come!" and he made as if to lay violent hands on the woman.

"Don't you dare touch her!" Blank replied, in equally excited tones. "You are obliged to carry her as far as her five dollars will pay, anyhow. I'll see to the rest."

*By this time all were growing interest*ed, and many growing excited.

"I'll pay it all," added Blank. "Keep your five dollars, good woman; you'll need it when you get home."

"And I'll put you off now, for your blamed impudence," the irate conductor yelled.

He shouted for the brakemen. Blank grew pale, but more determined. He had been in the army, and still went armed, from habit. Without flinching he drew his revolver and cocked it. His blood was up.

"Bring on your train men," he said, and his word rang through the car: "you haven't enough to put me off."

There was a little delay, and some of the more timid women screamed. The conductor shouted again for his brakemen.

"I've paid my fare," said Blank, between the conductor's curses, "and I'll shoot the first man who endeavors to put me off. I'm ready to pay this woman's and I'll shoot the first man who touches her!"

As he stood there in the aisle, erect and defiant, his bearing endorsed his speech. A stalwart young Pennsylvanian, tall and powerful, with a head set on kingly shoulders, he was not the kind of a man to swallow his words, or submit to indignity. No wonder the conductor hesitated and the train men were slow to respond.

As the tableau lingered, a rough drover on the front seat rose and energetically threw off his coat.

"You're right, young man!" he shouted. "I like your pluck. If there's goin' to be any more trouble here, I'm with you."

"And I too," echoed half a dozen others drawing their pistols.

Men in the cars ahead hearing that there was an unruly fellow causing the delay, were hastening in to help overpower him, but found the situation perilous.

Encouraged by evidences of reinforcement, Mr. Blank passed from the defen*sive to the offensive.*

"I'll give you just two minutes to do what you choose in," he declared, "and if you want to try putting me off, try it, but if in two minutes you don't start this train, I'll put you off and leave you here to freeze!"

Still the conductor hesitated. He was furious with wrath, but he faced a man whose present mood was dangerous, and this man was not alone.

"And I give you fair warning," Blank went on, "that if you do run this train through, it is for the last time. I know the officers of this road well. I'll report you to-morrow and have you dismissed, as sure as the sun rises."

And still the conductor hesitated.

"In one minute more this train must move," Blank said, resolutely. "We've stood here long enough."

With an angry imprecation, the conductor reached up and pulled the bell rope till it snapped; and, turning on his heel, he walked forward, cursing.

The excitement subsided; the sobbing woman hushed her grief; and the usual half-quiet of a night upon the rail, ensued.

After an hour or two, the conductor paused, as he was passing Mr. Blank. Both had cooled their tempers somewhat.

"I want to beg your pardon," said the conductor. "I am willing to say now in the presence of these passengers, that I overstepped my duty, and did wrong. I shall learn a lesson from this experience that will do me good."

The man's voice trembled, and Blank saw he was sincere.

"I promise you, if you will overlook my conduct now, that such a thing shall never occur again. I can't afford to lose my place. You will do me a great favor if you will not report me."

"I have no desire to harm you," was Blank's answer. "There is my card. Send around to-morrow, and I'll pay the eight dollars, and we'll call it square."

"No," the man rejoined. "After what's happened, I would rather pay the money out of my own pocket, and I will."

So ended the affair, and in course of time it slipped entirely from my friend's remembrance. He never saw or heard of the woman again from that night.

But some months ago a lady said to him.

"You know Mrs. So-and-so, in Pittsburg?"

"No" he answered, "never heard of her."

He tried to think who Mrs. So-in-so might be, but failed.

"Did you ever have a fight on a railroad train?" asked his friend.

"No, never had any rows anywhere."

"Why, it was on a train from Cleveland to Pittsburg, and you took a poor woman's part, and wouldn't let the conductor put her off the train," persisted she.

Then it flashed upon him, and she saw he remembered.

"Her children lived, and her husband got well and went into the oil business and they are worth two hundred thousand dollars now. And they live in fine style in Pittsburg," his informant ran on; "and she told me to say, next time we met, that they all want to see you ever so much, and you must be sure to visit them when you come to Pittsburg again."

AN INCIDENT ON THE CAR.

"Cars stop twenty minutes for refreshments!" called out Conductor Richardson at Allen's Junction.

Then as the train came to a dead halt he jumped down upon the station platform, ran along to the front of the long line of passenger cars, where the engine was standing, said to the engineer:

"Frank, I want you to come back with me to the first passenger car and see a girl that I hardly know what to make of."

The engineer nodded without speaking, deliberately wiped his oily, smoky hands on a bunch of "waste," took a look at his grimy, dusty face in the narrow little mirror that hung beside the steam guage, pulled off his short frock, put on a coat, changed his little black, greasy cap for his soft hat—taking these "dress-up" articles from the tender box, where an engineer always has something stowed away for any emergency—and went back to the coach as requested

He entered the coach and made his way to the seat where the kind-hearted conductor sat talking to a bright looking little girl, about nine years old, oddly dressed in woman's shawl and bonnet

Several of the passengers were grouped around the seat, evidently much interested in the child, who wore a sad, prematurely old countenance, but seemed to be neither timid nor confused

"Here is the engineer," said the conductor, kindly, as Frank approached.

She held out her hand to him, with a winsome smile breaking over her pinched little face, and said:

"My papa was an engineer before he became sick and went to live on a farm in Montana. He is dead, and my mamma is dead. She died first, before Susie and Willie. My papa used to tell me that after he should be dead there would be no one to take care of me, and that I must get on the cars and go to his home in Vermont. And he said if the conductors wouldn't let me ride because I hadn't any ticket, I must ask for the engineer, and tell him I was James Kendrick's little girl, and that he used to run on the M—and G—road."

The pleading blue eyes were now full of tears, but she did not cry after the manner of children in general

Engineer Frank now quickly stooped down and kissed her very tenderly; and then, as he brushed the tears from his eyes, said:

"Well, my dear, so you are little Bessie Kendrick? It's my opinion that a merciful Providence guided you on board this train."

Then turning around to the passengers, he went on:

"I knew Jim Kendrick, the father of this little girl, well. He was a man out of ten thousand. When I first came to Indiana—before I got acclimated—I was sick a great part of the time, so that I could not work, and I got homesick and discouraged. I couldn't keep my board bill paid up—not to mention my doctor's bill—and didn't much care whether I lived or died.

"One day, when the pay car came along, and the men were getting their monthly wages, there wasn't a cent coming to me, for I hadn't been free from the ague, nor had I worked an hour for the last month.

"I felt so blue that I sat down on a pile of railroad ties and leaned my elbows on my knees, with my head in my hands, and cried like a great boy of sheer homesickness and discouragement.

"Pretty soon one of the railroad men came along, and said, in a voice that sounded like the sweetest music in my ears, for I hadn't found much real sympathy out there, although the boys were real good to me in their way, 'You've been having a rough time of it, and you must let me help you out.'

"I looked up, and there stood Jim Kendrick, with his month's pay in his hand. He took out from the roll of bills a twenty dollar note and held it out to me.

"I knew he had a sickly wife and two or three children, and that he had a hard time of it himself to pull through from month to month, so I said, half ashamed of the tears that were streaming down my face, 'Indeed I cannot take the money. You need every cent yourself.'

"'Indeed you will take it man,' said Jim. 'You will be all right in a few weeks, and then you can pay it back. Now come home with me to supper and see the babies; it will do you good.'

"I took the bank note and accepted the invitation, and after that went to his house frequently, until he moved away, and I gradually lost sight of him. I had repaid the loan, but it was impossible to repay the good that little act of kindness did me, and I guess Jim Kendrick's little girl will not want for anything if I can help it."

Then, turning again to the child, whose blue eyes were open wide enough now, said to her:

"I'll take you home with me, Bessie dear, when we get to Wayne. My wife will fix you up, and we'll write and find out whether those Vermont relations really want you or not. If they do Mary or I shall go with you. But if they don't care much about having you, you shall stay with us and be our little girl, for we have none of own. You look very much like your father; God bless his memory."

Just then the eastern train whistled.

"All aboard!" was shouted. Engineer Frank vanished out of the car-door and went forward to his engine, wiping his eyes on his coat-sleeve, while the conductor and sympathetic passengers could not suppress the tears this touching episode evoked during the twenty minutes stop at Allen's Junction.

ADVERTISING AGENTS.

WHAT THEY WANT AND HOW THEY GET IT.

In his address before the Michigan Press Association, Editor Hine, of the Lowell Journal, said:

There are a few things that I would like to see the country press resolved upon, for its own protection and profit, and, considering my subject already closed, permit me to make one or two suggestions for your careful and prayerful attention.

1. Invent some terrible but sure method of disposing of those advertising agencies which insist on advertising in your papers at their own rates. Don't murder them in cold blood until you have exhausted all other justifiable means to extinguish them, but get rid of them in some way. Why, if we had their united check at our disposal, we could put up a brass monument to their memory in every State in the Union, and have material enough left to start several bell factories. Let's see—that would be only thirty-eight monuments—Yes, I'll take in the Territories, too.

Not long ago I received from a well-known advertising agency a letter of instructions, which read as follows:

"You will please insert the inclosed advertisement in your weekly thirteen times, top of column, on second page, following copy as closely as possible, and charge us $5 gross. You will mail paper to our address regularly during continuance of advertisement."

It was worth $10 net to insert the advertisement that this agency wanted for $5 gross. My reply was as follows:

GENTLEMEN: Your kind favor of the 15th, inst., offering me the princely sum of $3.75 *for inserting for you a $10 ad*vertisement, is received and accepted—on the following conditions:

1. That you send me $6.25 to bind the bargain before the advertisement is set up.

2. That you remit the $3.75 at the same time to balance the account.

3. That you shall not lie to me by replying that you can get the same advertisement inserted in the best weeklies for $5 gross.

You will please remit by post office money-order or New York draft, paying exchange yourselves.

I haven't heard from that agency since. I rather think the correspondence will not be continued. Very likely the agency will withhold its patronage from my paper. If I can have my way it will, unless it pays reasonable rates and sends the "soap" quarterly in advance.

It is time the country press sat down on all advertising agencies that insult us with such propositions.

You go to a clothing store and select a suit of clothes worth $30 and say to the proprietor, "You please to do that suit up and charge me $15 for it," and you will probably continue to wear your old clothes.

The country press is independent of such advertising agencies, and I trust the time will soon come when their lack of business will compel them to shut up shop.

HAD A HALLUCINATION.

They were sitting beside the grate when all at once she looked up and said:

"Richard, do you believe that people ever labor under hallucination?"

"Of course they do," he replied.

"I was just reading of a husband who went to his bed supposing he had $90 in his wallet, but on awakening in the morning there was but $18. He at once charged his wife with robbing him, and a separation resulted. Wasn't it awful?"

"Yes, rather."

"If you should suspect me of getting up in the night and going to you wallet that would be awful, too, wouldn't it?"

"Not any too awful, for I haven't had a cent in it since I can remember," he said as he turned to his paper.

That was all she wanted to know. She got up that night and went through the blind pocket of his pants, and next morning he had a hallucination that he was $4 short.

POSTSCRIPT.

As we go to press a telegram from Trenton reaches us that Lewis E. Hyer was to-day (Thursday) confirmed as Judge and Kelsey for Secretary of State, the latter by a vote of 18 to 3.

THEN AND NOW.

There cannot be a doubt entertained as to the enormity of fraud perpetrated for years upon the National Treasury by a gang of conspirators plying their thieving vocation under the guise of star-route mail contracts.

The charges presented against them have resulted in the finding of criminal indictments, but whether merited punishment will follow, or a mere show of prosecution be allowed to suffice, remains to be seen. Be that as it may, the fact of dishonest action stands plainly forth, although the amount of money abstracted from the public chest may not have been fully stated.

The people do not know all.

What makes the matter more discreditable to the country is, that two of the indicted are zealous and prominent members of the Republican party, one recently holding a responsible official position at Washington, and the other being an ex-United States Senator (Carpet Bag) from a South Western State.

Were they Democrats, how the Republican press from Maine to California would howl about the awful depravity of Democracy?

Thank fortune, not a drop of Democratic blood circulates in the veins of either. They are blue blooded, genuine political Republicans.

During the last Presidential campaign, when extraordinary efforts were made to cut the Democratic moorings of New Jersey, one of the aforesaid money-snatchers and political cashiers established his head-quarters in Newark; and when newly printed greenbacks to the extent of thousands, and possibly millions, floated over Indiana for purposes other than religious, moral or patriotic, the same financial star-router was there in person superintending the important business.

The rightful Democratic vote of Indiana was lost.

From whence came the money and the men?

Another dark side of the story remains to be told. After the formal election of Garfield and Arthur had been secured, a Delmonico dinner was given in New York to that identical star-router in honor of his Indiana services. Men calling themselves respectable were present, frantic with joy, rubbing their hands ecstatically, drinking toast after toast in sparkling champagne to the health and wealth of the glorious party chief who carried Indiana. The editor of the Tribune was also there, and with words of eloquence complimented not only the deed, but the means used to accomplish it.

If those assembled gentlemen knew anything, they were fully aware that Indiana was carried by fraud, and that their banquet guest was smirched with it from head to foot.

No stronger evidence of partisan degeneracy can be produced than that single incident affords.

Truth now shows that the hero of that night, the self-same political corruptionist, had been for years, under Republican administrations, with both arms thrust into the people's treasury hauling out star-route plunder.

Will he be punished or again feasted?

A DESERVED COMPLIMENT.

It is with extreme pleasure to ourselves, and we know it will be also to the gentleman's many warm friends in this section, that we record a recent justly deserved tribute of worth and ability to Capt. Wm. H. Gill, formerly a resident of Elizabeth. Congress has paid him the unusual compliment, without a dissenting voice in either Committees or either branch, of passing the bill authorizing his re-appointment to the regular army as military storekeeper in the Quartermaster's Department. The Captain's intelligence, polished manners and congeniality have made him hosts of friends in Washington, of gentlemen both in and out of public life, and particularly among army officers of all ranks, he having been for over four years Clerk of the Senate Military Committee. He will probably select his old post in the discharge of his new duties, Schuylkill Arsenal, Philadelphia, and Union county will therefore lose a valuable citizen. Not only is the Captain to be congratulated on this new appointment, but also the army, in the acquisition of such an intellectual, genial and thorough gentleman to their ranks.

THE GOVERNOR'S VETOES.

The action of Governor Ludlow in promptly vetoing the bill to increase the Chancellor's fees, and the bill to authorize corporations to take up bonds and stocks, seems to meet with general approval if the tone of the press throughout the State may be taken as an expression. After urging a reduction of expenses in his message, and favoring the bill to economize in State expenditures, by reducing the number of papers authorized to publish the laws, it certainly would not have been very becoming in him to favor the Chancellor's bill. In the railroad bill the Governor seeks to protect existing rights of the many corporations of this State, which should be supported, by vetoing a measure which was rushed through the Legislature without the question being raised as to its constitutionality, which the Governor questions. Of one thing the people may rest assured, our Democratic Governor, having made no mistakes in vetoing obnoxious or unconstitutional bills in the past, is not very likely to do so in the future. Both branches of the Legislature have since re-passed the latter bill.

It is stated that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will abandon their recent policy in reference to employees, and will again carry them to and from work without charge. They will be furnished with monthly "passes" under such restrictions as to prevent their use except for work. They will not be good except on "work days," or on general trains; and if found in other hands than the proper one, will be taken up. Several hundreds of these passes will be issued with the first of the month and the half-cent a mile eight year commutation ticket will be abolished.

Both Houses of Congress have adopted resolutions reciting that it is charged that U. S. Ministers to Chili and Peru were improperly connected in their official capacity with certain commercial transactions, and ordering an inquiry. There's guano in the air.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Both branches of the Legislature met Monday evening. But little business was transacted beyond the introduction of several bills. Among them is three more reducing the rates of publishing the laws, etc. Poor, poor printer! When, oh! when will you be forgotten? Not certainly about election time.

Governor Ludlow, as it was generally expected, sent to the Senate his veto of the bill known as Senate 111, which authorizes railroad companies of the State to issue at par the additional stock necessary to retire their bonds. The Governor says the bill is unconstitutional. This bill was passed in the interest of the present management of the Central Railroad.

A joint resolution was introduced by Mr. Sheldon, authorizing the purchase of an oil painting of the late President Garfield by the Commissioners of the State Library.

At the joint caucus of the Democratic Senators and members of the Legislature held Monday evening last, the following were decided on as the party's nominees: State Treasurer, Edward F. C. Young, of Hudson; Inspectors of the State Prison, Charles Jordon, of Hudson; Robert McGowan, of Hudson, and Richard A. Donnelly, of Mercer; State Director of Joint Companies, William Patterson, of Middlesex; Police Justice, Jersey City, Martin M. Drohan.

Senate bill, No. 111, known as the railroad bill was passed by the Senate over the Governor's veto, on Tuesday, and in the House on Wednesday.

The Joint Republican meeting on Tuesday failed to elect a State Treasurer, Prison Inspector, &c. A number of Commissioners of Deeds were elected.

Considerable business of importance was transacted in both Houses Wednesday. The Senate passed a concurrent resolution to adjourn sine die March 17. The House failed to see it. The Governor sent in the names of several Prosecutors of Pleas, District and Common Pleas Judges, and other appointments. Among them was the name of Lewis E. Hyer, of Rahway, for Lay Judge of this County. The bill authorizing the Plainfield Fire Department to renew maturing bonds passed both Houses.

Among the other appointments made by the Governor on Wednesday last and confirmed by the Senate, was that of Lewis Hyer, editor of the Rahway Democrat, to be Lay Judge of Union County, vice Judge Mulford, whose term expires in April next. As a successor to so able a member of the Bench of Union County as the retiring Judge, Mr. Hyer will fill the bill exactly. Again has Governor Ludlow shown his good wisdom and discretion.

The President sent to the Senate on Friday last the nomination of Roscoe Conkling, of New York, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and A. A. Sargeant, of California, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Germany to succeed A. D. White.

Secretary Kelsey has been vindicated by the Supreme Court, that tribunal deciding that he was entitled to the fees he charged for sending slips of the laws to the newspapers. His charges for filing vital statistics were declared illegal, and he will return the money, amounting to $6,715.

The investigation into the frauds of the Philadelphia tax office has thus far revealed nine hundred cases in which taxpayers have been cheated by overcharges.

With Grant and Conkling shelved by appointments to high honor, other Republican aspirants to the Presidency in 1884, breath freer. Blaine now has the floor.

Congress has placed General Grant on the retired list, with a yearly salary of $8,000, and also given Mrs. Garfield a pension of $5,000 a year.

Eight persons have been indicted at Vienna for criminal negligence in connection with the Ring Theatre fire. The trial will begin in May.

It is believed that fifteen of the Nihilists now on trial at St. Petersburg, will be sentenced to death.

Germany and Austria are strengthening their Eastern fortresses.

The Knights' Reception Night.

A month ago Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P. of this city, dedicated their new hall, corner Front street and Park avenue; and last Friday night the wives and friends of the brethren met together by invitation, to "ratify" the dedication. The "ratification" took the form of a "grand reception" and sociable, preceded by an interesting musical and literary programme, the greater part of which had been gotten up on the "spur of the moment," as the committee of arrangements had been disappointed in securing the talent that they expected. They, however, did the best they could under the circumstances, with the most gratifying results. At 8:30 P. M., the rooms were filled by the brethren and friends of "74," and order was called by G. K., of R. and S., Bro. Eugene Lurton. The latter announced that the evening's exercise would open by singing the "Grand Rallying Song" of the order, which was sung with a will by the entire audience. After this, according to the improvised programme spoken of, Bro. J. B. Haskard sang in a very acceptable manner, "Barney McCoy." Miss Emma Adams (daughter of Bro. Adams) then recited "How he saved St. Michael's." This recitation recalled to mind a well-known reminiscence of the late rebellion, and Miss Adams' rendition was loudly applauded. Bro. P. Symons then sang and played, "There'll be joy bye and bye"; after which Bro. Adams was then called on and favored the audience with "How a Frenchman, a top and a backwoodsman applied for positions as Shakespearian [illegible]." "Baby's teeth" was then sung by Bro. Haskard, and he was followed by Bro. Benj. Force, who recited in good dramatic style, "Toussaint and the slave." It was very evident from the manner in which this recitation was given that Bro. Force had "been there before." Prof. Stone, of Jersey City, (a brother of Mrs. S. C. Linnemann of this city) then favored the assembly with a violin solo. It was evidently a surprise to nearly every one present, inasmuch as it was not even surmised that such beautiful and pathetic music could be produced from the much despised "fiddle." Prof. Stone's efforts were loudly applauded and most heartily appreciated. Miss Adams then recited a humorous piece entitled "Miss Maloney on the Chinese," with a true Irish twist on her tongue, and was well received. Bro. Haskard followed with a song—"Poor Little Joe," and Miss Scott finished up the programme by reciting "Putting on airs," after which all present mingled together in a series of congratulations, introductions, re-introductions and a general interchange of thoughts on various subjects of interest. Some organized themselves into a corps of "wall-flowers," while others strutted up and down—or rather backward and forward—on the floor of the hall, manifesting an undisguised and rather impatient hankering for a dance. These were soon given the opportunity to indulge in this "pastime," the music being furnished by Prof. Stone and a harpist. While dancing was in progress the "wall-flowers" used their conversational powers to the very best advantage. At 12 o'clock supper was announced, and a long table fairly loaded down with the most appetizing viands, greeted the eyes of the hungry ones as they filed out into the dining hall. Some of the dishes (or at least what was on them) are worthy of especial mention, from the fact that those who got them up were evidently afflicted with a severe attack of absent-mindedness. For instance, the writer of this article—forgetting that "all is not gold that glitters"—helped himself to a large "doughnut" that looked so sweet and tempting as if it might have come from Compton's. To the superficial observer, the "doughnut" was superficially correct, and yet one mouthful was enough to cast the deepest kind of a shadow over one's evening enjoyment, and to make life a burden almost unbearable. While the "doughnut" was being instructively dissected and enough cotton extracted therefrom to make a small bed quilt, a lady's face might have been seen peeping out of the "kitchen" through a crack in the door, taking the situation all in in a very suggestive manner. While this was transpiring a prominent Front street merchant had, in eager hungryness, or hungry eagerness, nearly devoured one of the "doughnuts," declaring that "mine ain't got any in," but spent the next five minutes in picking his teeth. The next dish that commanded attention and brought forth comment was an innocent looking iced "cake," which on close examination, proved to be plain bread. This fraud was too transparent to be very alluring, yet quite a number of eaters thought it was a new kind. After making sure that the sugar wasn't salt, and that the sandwiches were not made of leather, and that the vinegar wasn't "pepper sass," and the pickles made of soap, etc., etc., the meal was finally concluded without any further disturbance. Social intercourse was then indulged in until, from the lateness or "earliness" of the hour, people began to don their "fixins" and to say "Good Knight" to one another. And this very pleasant and enjoyable affair was at an end.

Humanitarian Cars and Improved Brakes.

A trial trip of new and improved cattle cars was made to this city on Monday (leaving New York at 1 o'clock p. m.,) for which it is claimed that they secure immunity from crowding and trampling; shorten the time of transit, and deliver the animals in better condition than the ordinary cattle cars. The cars are fitted with sliding partitions, so arranged as to give each animal a separate stall, and with improved appliances for feeding and watering. A new automatic brake, applied through the bumpers by reversing the engine, was also tested. It stopped the train of fourteen cars in 200 feet in eighteen seconds, being applied when the train was running at fair speed. A party of about 150 gentlemen interested in the subject of transporting live cattle witnessed the trial, and dined at the Park House with officers of the New York Live Stock Express Company.

The Treasurer of the Company is Mr. Seymour Hall of Union avenue; the President is Mr. S. P. Tallman of Dunellen, and the Vice President is Mr. Benj. Odlo, formerly a resident of North Plainfield. The inventor of the Brake is the Mr. Tallman mentioned above.

MR. John Lavine's Seventh Annual Concert will be given on Wednesday evening, April 12th, in Steinway Hall. A number of well known artists will take part in a very interesting programme.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

There was a large attendance at a pigeon shooting match in Metuchen last Saturday, between Mr. Wm. VanSycklen, of the above named place, and Nevius Apgar, of Plainfield. The match was for $25 a side, at 20 birds each, Hurlingham rules to govern, 21 yards rise, ground traps, trap and handle for each other. The day was fine and the birds a good and strong lot. Mr. Van Sycklen shot with a eleven pound Scott and Apgar a nine and a half Parker, breech loaders. The shot was limited to 1¼ ozs. Both parties were in good form for shooting, but disappointed their friends by the very small score made. Mr. V., as a veteran shooter, should have done better, while Apgar's friends claim that he can do better than he did. The following is the score:

Van Sycklen—[illegible]
Apgar—[illegible]
*Dead out of bounds.

There were 5 right quarterers, 2 left quarterers, 12 drivers and 1 incomer for Van Sycklen. His second barrel was used 15 times. For Apgar there were 5 right quarterers, 1 left quarterer and 14 drivers. Second barrel used 19 times. The referee was Mr. Thomas DeRussy, of New Brunswick.

At the conclusion of this match there was another between Daniel Terry, of Alton, and Lebeus Ayres, of Piscataway, at 15 birds each, 21 yards rise, single barrel. The following is the score:

Ayres—[illegible]
Terry—[illegible]

Another match between both parties is on the tapis, to be shot at Alton in a short time.

A bill has been introduced into the Senate of New Jersey authorizing an appropriation of $3,000 for the purpose of increasing the game production of this State. It names seven Commissioners who shall have control of the funds. All these gentlemen come from South Jersey, two from Burlington, one each from Camden, Atlantic, Ocean, Cumberland and Mercer Counties. Not a representative is given from other portions of the State. It is undoubtedly another of those "self-interest" schemes originating with that Philadelphia incorporation, known as "The West Jersey Game Protective Society," which claiming exclusive shooting privileges in seven of the West Jersey Counties would preclude any but members of that Society enjoying the privileges that would result by restocking that section with game. Did the provisions of the bill provide for a representation among its Commissioners from other parts of the State, it would be commendable for the object in view. As it is it looks like asking the Legislature to grant personal favors to a close corporation.

Mr. Percy C. Ohl, of "Willow Lake Farm," this city, owner of one of the most complete kennels of sporting dogs in this State, has recently had the misfortune to loose three of his most valuable animals by death. The first to succumb to an ailment baffling all Mr. Ohl's skill to cure, was "Lord Percy," a beautiful and valuable black and tan Gordon setter, for which he has refused an offer of $1,200. His death was quickly followed by two other of his kennel, the well-known setter "Tom," property of Dr. Chas. H. Thiers, and "Guy," owned by Assistant District Attorney Jas. Brady of N. Y., both valuable animals. An analysis of the stomach of the last named dog showed evidences of a deadly poison in it. Mr. Ohl is confident the dogs were poisoned. The dastardly wretch who would be so unmerciful as to poison a dumb brute, even though it were not of a valuable stock, deserves the whipping post as his punishment.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS EDITORS:—

Some one has sent me a copy of your last week's paper, with a certain article so marked that I could not fail to see it. The said article is signed "Fair Play," and contains what are intended to be, strictures, upon a sermon recently preached by me, on "The Triple Alliance." I presume the person who sent me the paper thought I would like to see it and perhaps make some reply. But of course you will understand that I am under no sort of obligation to answer everything that may be said about me. I care very little for such criticisms. So far as this article is concerned, I notice that toward the close of it, the writer says he is a "man." This I very much doubt, I rather think he belongs to the class known as Invertebrates. One thing more I notice, he says he is a "temperance man." I doubt this also. Evidently he cannot be much of anything, or else he would sign his name like a gentleman. I certainly have no use for such as he is, nor any time to waste on him.

Very truly,
Theo. B. Spooner.

SEC. 3. The police force shall consist of such number of regular and special policemen, each of whom shall be a resident and legally qualified voter of this city, as the Common Council shall from time to time deem necessary, and by resolution order to be appointed.

SEC. 4. The police force shall be under the general supervision and direction of the Mayor, and no person not a member of the police force, duly nominated and appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Common Council, shall at any time be permitted to exercise any authority or control over the City jail or any building used for police purposes, or over or concerning any person confined therein, or exercise any function of the Police force or to perform any police duty save as in this ordinance otherwise specially provided.

SEC. 5. Each of the regular policemen shall devote all his time to the duties of his office, and shall be vigilant in detecting and arresting all offenders against any city ordinance or any law of the State within said City and in preserving the public peace and protecting the rights of persons and property, and when on duty shall wear such dress or badge as the Board of Police may designate, but no service shall be required of special policemen excepting when called for by the Mayor or Board of Police save in cases of sudden emergencies requiring the performance of police duty, in all which cases such special policemen shall be ready for any detailed service required of them by the Mayor or the Board of Police or such member of the regular police as the Mayor may designate for the time being as Chief of the Police force.

SEC. 6. In case of riot or other sudden emergency, the Mayor, or in his absence any member of the Board of Police, may call into active service with full police powers, such number of extra special policemen as they may deem necessary to suppress such riot or meet such emergency; but the services of such extra policemen shall cease with the occasion which called them into service.

SEC. 7. The Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police Force," approved December 18, 1877, is hereby repealed, but this section shall not be construed to revive any ordinance which was repealed by the ordinance hereby repealed.

Adopted February 27, 1882.
Approved February 28, 1882.

SEC. 3. The Street Commissioner is hereby authorized to order to be removed any article or thing whatsoever which may encumber or obstruct any of the sidewalks, gutters or streets in violation of this or any other ordinance of this city, and in case the same shall not be removed within twelve hours after notice to that effect has been given to the offender then it shall be lawful for the Street Commissioner to cause the same to be removed to some suitable place.

SEC. 4. The Committee on Streets and Public Health of the Common Council shall have power to direct the Street Commissioner to do any necessary work or repairs on the streets, sidewalks or public grounds without the consent or direction of the Common Council, providing the expense of such work and repairs do not exceed the unexpended sums appropriated by resolution of the Common Council.

It shall be the duty of the said Street Commissioner under the direction and supervision of the Committee on Streets and Public Health, to attend to the execution of all the ordinances and resolutions of the Common Council for the regulating, grading, paving or otherwise improving the roadways, sidewalks or public grounds of the city, and he shall, when required by the Common Council, inquire into and report upon all applications before the Common Council in relation to any kind of work to be done in or upon the public streets.

SEC. 6. It shall be the duty of the Street Commissioner to present to the Common Council on or before the first Monday in each month an exact account of all indebtedness incurred by him in the discharge of his duties for the preceding month properly sworn to by him.

SEC. 7. All persons who shall obstruct, molest, disturb or in any wise hinder the said Street Commissioner, or persons employed by him, in the discharge of any duties mentioned in this ordinance, shall be liable upon conviction thereof to a fine of ten dollars.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, and ordered to a third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 27, 1882.

AN ORDINANCE

To provide for the Licensing and Regulation of Peddlers, Hawkers, Cartmen, Hack, Omnibus, Stage and Truck Owners and Drivers.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That licenses may be granted by the Common Council to such and so many persons of good moral character and otherwise qualified according to the provisions of this ordinance as the Common Council shall from time to time think proper, to carry on, wholly or in part, within the limits of the city, the business of peddler, hawker or cartman, to drive or keep for use for hire a hack, omnibus, stage, truck or other vehicle for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise, according to the provisions of this ordinance; and the city clerk shall keep a detailed record of all licenses so granted.

SEC. 2. That every application for any such license shall be in writing, signed by the applicant, stating his place of residence and the purpose for which such license is asked.

SEC. 3. That no person shall, by person, or in any manner carry on, as owner or as agent for another within the limits of said city, the business of peddler or hawker without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance; provided that no thing herein contained shall prevent farmers and gardeners from selling the products of the farms owned or occupied by them, or milkmen and butchers from carrying on their business in said city without a license.

SEC. 4. That no person shall drive, keep or use for hire or wages, or cause to be driven, kept or used for hire or wages, any cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for the transportation of passengers, baggage, or merchandise of any kind, wholly or in part within the limits of said city without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance (provided that none of the requirements contained in this section shall apply to owners or drivers of any livery stable vehicles, other than those vehicles kept by them for use of passengers solicited at the railway stations or elsewhere within the city limits.) One license and only one shall be required for each cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle; and no person shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this section for driving a cart, truck, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for or in respect of which a license has been obtained by its owner.

SEC. 5. That each license granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall expire on the first day of March next following the granting of the same, and shall state the object for which it is given, the name of the person licensed, the number of the license, and the date of its expiration, and shall be signed by the Mayor and attested by the City Clerk.

SEC. 6. That every person so licensed shall, at the time of receiving such license, pay therefor to the City Clerk, to be by him paid to the City Treasurer for the use of said city, the sum of five dollars for each license for one year, or unexpired portion thereof, and in addition thereto the clerk's fee of fifty cents for issuing such license; provided, however, that in cases where licenses were granted in 1880 under the ordinance in force in that year, after that ordinance was abrogated by the repeal of the law upon which the same was founded, the City Clerk may issue a license without exacting any fee therefor under this ordinance to any person who paid a license fee to the City Clerk under the said former ordinance, said license or licenses so issued to be for one year, or the unexpired portion thereof after the passage of this ordinance.)

SEC. 7. That no person licensed under this ordinance, and no driver or other person in the employ of any such person shall stand upon any sidewalk or in any street or other public place in said city, for the purpose of soliciting custom, or for any other purpose, in a way to obstruct travel or cause damage or annoyance to the owners or occupants of premises fronting on the public thoroughfares, or to any other person or persons; and any person believing himself aggrieved by a violation of this section may make complaint thereof before the City Judge, and the offender shall, upon conviction of such violation, be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offense.

SEC. 8. That every person so licensed shall, as soon as licensed, cause the number of his license to be permanently and conspicuously placed or painted upon the outside of both sides of each vehicle for which such license shall have been granted, and every person so licensed, and the driver of every such vehicle, shall wear in a conspicuous place upon his person while engaged in the business for which he is licensed, so as to be easily seen, a badge with the corresponding number thereon, and shall also keep fastened in a conspicuous place in the inside of his hack, stage, omnibus or other vehicle in such position that the same can be easily read, a card with the rates of fare or charges specified in the tenth section of this ordinance, written or printed thereon, and every person who shall violate this section of the ordinance shall on conviction thereof be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence.

SEC. 9. That every license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge for satisfactory cause, other than offenses elsewhere specially provided for in this ordinance; and every person who shall, during the suspension or revocation of his license, carry on his particular line of business, shall on conviction thereof be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence.

SEC. 10. That any person licensed under this ordinance to use for hire or wages any hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers, may charge therefor the following rates, but no more, that is to say: for the carriage of any passenger or passengers from any point within to any point within that part of the city included within the following boundaries, that is to say, beginning at a point where Farragut avenue intersects Green Brook, and thence following the line of Farragut avenue to Front street; thence, in the same course, in a direct line, to Hillside avenue, thence, through Hillside avenue to Prospect avenue; thence, in a direct line, to the point of intersection of Park avenue by the Randolph road; thence, through Randolph road to Plainfield avenue; thence, in a straight line, to the intersection of Spooner avenue and Eighth street; thence, through Eighth street, to Grant avenue; thence, through Grant avenue, to the northwesterly city line; thence, following the northwesterly city line, to Farragut avenue, the place of beginning, twenty-five cents for one passenger carried and fifteen cents for each additional passenger carried from the same point to the same point at the same time, and for the carriage of any passenger from any point within to any point without the aforesaid boundaries, fifty cents for one passenger and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger; provided, however, that after eleven o'clock at night and until five o'clock in the morning the charges may be double the said rates, and where for any such hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle shall be engaged by the hour the person licensed to use for hire or wages such hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle may charge one dollar for the first hour, and seventy-five cents for each additional hour.

SEC. 11. That the first applicant to any licensed hackman shall be entitled to conveyance to any point that the said applicant may desire to reach within the city limits; and any refusal on the part of the owner or driver of such licensed vehicle to comply with the request shall render liable said owner or driver to a fine of two dollars for the first offense, and five dollars for a second offense and the revoking of the license for a third offense.

SEC. 12. That every person licensed as aforesaid and the driver of every hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers who shall demand for any service mentioned in section ten more than the rates fixed therein shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five dollars for the first offense and by a fine not exceeding five dollars and by a forfeiture of the license which may have been issued for any offense subsequent to the first.

SEC. 13. That the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to license and regulate street venders of meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, patent medicines or other articles," approved June 17, 1878, and the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license cartmen, expressmen and hackmen," approved July 31, 1878, and the amendment thereto, approved December 22, 1879, be and the same are hereby repealed.

SEC. 14. All ordinances and parts of ordinances which were repealed or abrogated by any ordinance hereby repealed shall continue to be so repealed and shall be deemed abrogated.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

SUNDAY was pleasant enough to induce any one to attend church—or to take a stroll.

THE Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, meets on the evening of the 15th inst.

A NEW firm has been formed to carry on the business of butchers at No. 34 Park Avenue under the name of Ten Eyck & Co., a member of which is Councilman Wm. E. Gardiner.

Go look at the "American" Sewing Machines at Vanderbeek's Music Store, where they are for sale. They are pronounced "just elegant" by those who have them in use.

MR. NOAH W. PIKE, of this city, has sold to an Incorporated Company, the patent Pulsating Stencil Pen, for $10,000, and has been elected Vice-President and General Manager of the Company.

THE New England Monthly for February, a late addition to the ranks of medical periodicals, contains a rather eulogistic but not too flattering "editorial" on the Muhlenberg Hospital of Plainfield.

THE Republicans of the Second Ward are called, by Chairman T. H. Hamilton, to "meet at the Gas House" Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock. A Ward organization will be formed and officers elected.

EXTENSIVE improvements have lately been made in the interior of Mr. Rafferty's saloon on Park Avenue, by its proprietor, and the place is now as fresh and bright as new paint, paper and varnish can make it.

ON Thursday of next week at 1 o'clock p. m., there will be sold at Green Brook the personal property of the late Josiah Vail. The articles offered are specified in our advertising columns and many bargains may be secured.

As the "Boss-painters" of this city have refused to accede to the demands of the journeymen for a raise of wages, the latter are "on the strike" and looking for employment directly with those who need the services of their trade.

THERE has just been added to the many facilities of Mr. Geo. Demarest's Kindling-wood Yard on Somerset street, a steam chopper, which, with other improved appliances, enables the proprietor to fill his orders with greater dispatch and decreased cost.

THE two petitions presented at the last meeting of the Common Council, for permission to erect poles and maintain a line of telephone wires in this city, are not from different companies as appears by their titles. They both emanate from the same source—it having been intended to withdraw the last before presentation.

THE attendance at the Taylor lecture of the Y. M. C. A. Course on Monday evening, was not very extensive, and the orator failed in many ways to satisfy the critical tastes of his hearers. The author, however, was discernible throughout the discourse, and the speaker's abilities as an essayist were plainly apparent.

RECENT opinions of the N. J. Supreme Court in the following cases, are as recorded below: Flanagan v. The City of Plainfield. Held that the act of 1874 is unconstitutional and that the sole remedy to review is by appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Union county. Inhabitants of Plainfield v. Martin. Judgment on demurrer.

MR. S. A. Potter, of North Plainfield, and coachman were emptied into the street, on Wednesday morning, in consequence of their unruly horse overturning the buggy. No damage was done other than wrecking the vehicle, except a slight dislocation of the arm, that has confined Mr. Potter to his house ever since.

MR. Jacob R. Van Winkle, the Taxidermist, is the envied possessor of a copy of the oldest journal we have ever seen. It is the New England Review, published in Boston, Mass., and the number he allowed us to examine is dated April 8th, 1728, and contains a graphic account of the circumstances that led to the invention of the stocking-knitter.

MESSRS. Melbourne & Manning, builders of this city, have purchased a plot of ground on LeGrand Avenue, near Franklin Place, also one on Franklin Place, on which they propose to erect at once two fine dwelling houses. This firm recently sold the fine residence built by them on Park avenue, next to Mr. E. L. Roberts, to Mr. Stewart.

BY the Brooklyn papers we learn that at a recent literary entertainment in Music Hall of that city, Mr. Peter Bogert and Miss Laura Smith—well known, former residents of Plainfield—appeared in the farce of "Poor Pillicoddy," with great success. Says one account of the affair "The latter—to make no odious comparisons—being exceedingly clever."

AT a meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association of Trenton lately it was determined that the allowance for sick or disabled firemen should be four dollars per week for single men and five dollars for married men. In New Brunswick the Relief Association pays its disabled firemen $10 per week. In this city each member of the Relief Association is entitled to $3 per week for aid in case of disability.

AFTER heavy rains large quantities of water remain in the gutters on the north-east corner of Peace and Second streets, making it almost impossible for a person to alight from a carriage at this point without stepping into the water which overflows the sidewalk. The cause of this is insufficient drainage, the pipe which leads from the gutter across the street to the sewer being too small to admit of the water being carried away. We suggest to our new Street Commissioner the propriety of immediately remedying the cause of complaints made in the matter.

"The British Islands."

Rev. Thos. H. Stockton gave us a delightful descriptive talk (in the Y.M.C.A. Course) in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, last evening, on "Three Months in the British Islands." The tour through Ireland, Scotland and England, was made in company with a congenial boyhood comrade whose birthplace, in Ireland, they visited on their route. Dublin, Belfast, Blarney Castle, Killarney, Edinburgh, Loch Lomond, Abbotsford and other cities, lakes, etc., were described, and many personal incidents, sometimes humorous, sometimes pathetic, often instructive, were interwoven, and the entire address, about an hour and a half in length, was excellent.

PLAINFIELD needs an Opera House.

The Sixth Annual.

At St. Mary's Hall on the evening of Friday, the 17th inst., the Plainfield T. A. B. Society will give its Sixth Annual Sociable. The music will be "Cahill's band," and the Committee of Arrangements consists of Messrs. John Harding, John Walsh, Peter Flynn, Alexander McGuigan and Patrick Lynch. Don't miss it!

Chess Tournament.

The score in the tournament of the Plainfield Chess Club, stands as follows:

	won	lost
Thos. Lloyd,	12	0
Asa Collier,	11	5
Charles Opdyke,	9	3
Henry Bokee,	9	6
Geo. P. Suydam,	6	2
John H. Jackson,	8	8
Alex. Gilbert,	2	6
Geo. T. Long,	2	7
Geo. S. Hunt,	4	12
Chas. Depew,	3	12
Chas. E. Thiers,	3	14

Killed on the Track.

On Saturday of last week, Mr. Edwin Verity, a carpenter, formerly of this city, and a member of the special police force, was struck by a C. R. R. locomotive and instantly killed. The unfortunate man had been living with his son at Scotch Plains, and was on his way to Plainfield on some errand of his own. Just as he reached the Terrill road bridge, the 1:30 p. m. express from N. Y., due in Plainfield at 2:18, came rushing around the curve at full speed along the rails between which Verity was walking. The victim's back was towards the train and his age and a very severe cold in his head had so impaired his sense of hearing that he was entirely unconscious of the calamity that overtook him. The unfortunate man was literally dashed to death, and undoubtedly never knew of his fate.

The Post Office.

The "fort has been evacuated" and Mr. Wallace Vail, who so long served the City as its Postmaster, is succeeded by Mr. Elias R. Pope. While we, both personally and in a business way, have never had occasion to complain of any lack of efficiency in the service under Postmaster Vail, still there are being inaugurated under his successor a number of desirable reformations. Those purchasing stamps are now restricted to the side window, and the "evening mail" has been distributed from 15 to 30 minutes earlier than formerly. No decision is yet reached as to the ultimate situation of the "office," and it is still an open question as to whether it will be in the premises now occupied by Voorhees the druggist, or whether a new building will be erected on the present site or on Front street facing Park avenue.

Wrong, or Right?

The unprejudiced public will agree with us in our impartial opinion that the late action of the Common Council, in refusing to confirm the Mayor's nomination of Mr. Charles W. Kimball as Counsel to the Corporation, was ill-judged and discourteous. During the past year's service, Mr. Kimball has shown great ability as the city's legal adviser and attorney, and has almost universally conducted the suits of the Corporation to the conclusion coveted. Because, upon one point, his judgment differed from the opinion of the Council as a body, is no reason for the indignity placed upon him by the denial of a re-confirmation. It is not yet settled, by any means, which is correct in their estimation of the merits of the compromise with the Board of Freeholders; but, be that as it may, as the matter is finally arranged, no future action of Mr. Kimball's can effect it, and there is no just cause apparent for his retirement.

If, in addition, the Central Times is authorized in stating, and the statement is authentic that Mr. Kimball's re-nomination was endorsed by the Council in private caucus, the action of that body is, at the least, a breach of faith.

Wanted—An Opera House.

The large sale of reserved seats that was achieved upon the recent appearance of the Potter Pictures at the Park Avenue Church, evidences that our public is not backward in its attendance upon the at*tractions of superior and talented combinations.* But the auditorium that was thus filled, is not available—for good and sufficient reasons—as a first-class theatre. Our city is thus left without a suitable place for the representation of the many first-class plays, and an exhibition of the numerous superior dramatic and comedy companies that travel throughout the country. They would all engage dates here, if stage facilities, acoustic properties, etc., were to be had. We do not wish to condemn Van Deventer Hall, which is most comfortable and available, as far as it goes, for certain purposes. And the Park Avenue Church is undoubtedly an admirable place for lectures, concerts and readings, which can be made more desirable by keeping the lecture room closed and shutting the organ gallery entirely off—thus, to some extent, preventing the confinement and retention of the sound in those openings. But for the giving of light operas and the representations that require a large stage, serviceable scenery and convenient dressing rooms, some other place is needed and the public already so demand. Consequently the capitalist who shall first erect the building, and plan and finish it in the most desirable manner, will receive a large return on his investment.

The Last of the Course.

The last entertainment of the Y. M. C. A's very successful Course of 1881 and '82, will be given in the M. E. church on Thursday evening of next week. Although with regret that it would close the Course, it has been impatiently looked forward to by reason of its novelty and originality. From authentic sources we learn that "The Royal Hand-Bell Ringers" are preeminently the unrivalled exponents of the science of Campanology. They are true artists,—and each member is a musician of thorough training and experience. They have a magnificent collection of one hundred and thirty-four bells,—the finest in the world—manufactured expressly for them from their own original designs, and infinitely superior in tone, volume and sweetness to all others. Upon this immense collection of bells, tuned to perfect pitch, and varying in size from the great basso profundo of nearly twelve pounds' weight to the tiny treble of a few ounces, they play with matchless skill and in perfect harmony the most difficult and complicated musical selections from the grand operas, oratorios and symphonies, as well as the lighter and most popular melodies of the day, the national airs of all countries, and many unique and effective compositions of their own. With their great carillon, which is probably three times larger than that in the possession of any other Company, it is easy to see that a class of music can be performed and effects produced hitherto deemed impossible in this kind of entertainment. Remarkable as their success has been in bringing the science of Bell Ringing to a perfection never before attained, they have still another specialty,—the unique interest of their Glee Singing, a style of music which is just being introduced into this country by our leading vocal societies, and which promises to become as popular here as it has been in England for the past century."

Reserved seats should be selected from those left, at once as a "crowded house" is already assured. Tickets may be procured at M. P. Reynolds' Pharmacy.

Temperance Meeting.

There will be an open meeting held in the rooms of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, third floor of White & Stelle's building, corner of Front street and Park avenue, on Monday evening next, at 7:30 o'clock. The public are cordially invited. An address will be delivered by Judge Harper.

$100 Damages.

The trial of Sowden vs Harris before a jury, drew together a crowded audience in the Common Council Chamber on Friday last. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Harris, during the absence of their tenant, Mr. Sowden, forced open his room and removed his goods to the open door-yard, whilst a rain storm was in progress. Mr. Sowden sued the defendants for damages. Craig A. Marsh opened the case as counsel for Sowden, and City Judge Runyon represented the defendants. The jury deliberated about an hour and brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $100. It is stated that the defendants have appealed the case, and that plaintiff has lodged complaint for forcible entry.

Personals.

Among our death notices will be found that of a son of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. French, who died at noon yesterday, after a short illness.

Last evening at her residence on West Seventh Street, Miss Clapp entertained a number of her friends mystically masked and artistically attired.

Our thanks are due and tendered to Comptroller Anderson, Supervisor of State Prison, C. B. Moore, and other State officials for public documents.

We are indebted to Mr. Samuel C. Roney of North Plainfield for a file of the Carnival edition of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, containing interesting accounts of the progress of that celebration and accompanied by gorgeously colored supplements illustrative of the scenes.

Mr. C. A. Leveridge, one of the historians engaged on the works of Messrs. Everts & Peck the well-known publishers of Philadelphia, has almost completed his review of this section to be published in the forthcoming history of Union and Middlesex Counties. Those, however, in possession of interesting facts or old documents relating to past local events, are requested to forward such in care of this office for Mr. Leveridge, and thus assist the completion of as thorough a retrospect as possible.

From the Rochester Democrat's "Beyond the Sea" column, we clip the following: "A complete file of the Banner of Light, the Spiritualist journal, was some time ago advertised for sale by ex-Judge Peter P. Good of New Jersey, who now informs the editor that the purchaser was an agent of the late Czar of Russia, and that the volumes are now in the royal library in St. Petersburg. The collection of Spiritualist books and periodicals left by the Czar is said to be the largest in the world."

A Co-operative Store.

Arrangements are almost made and the manner of operation is now being perfected, whereby there is to be established in this city a grocery store for the benefit of the employees of the Potter Press Works. The members of that firm contemplate securing a lease of the premises occupied by Mr. Elmore D. Moffett at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue, and a purchase of the stock and fixtures contained therein. They will April 1st, lay in a large assortment of canned goods and all other edibles that come under the head of "groceries," and the workmen and their families, that are employed in the Press Works, will be given the privilege of buying all the necessaries of life for just what they cost at wholesale with the expenses of freight, etc., added. For the management of the store, there has been secured the services of Messrs. Elmore Moffett and T. F. Randolph, the latter of whom is now engaged with Mr. J. S. Cotter the Front street grocer. Messrs Moffett and Randolph have had a great deal of the very experience that is needful in their new position, and the selection is a fortunate one for all concerned. It is understood that the entire public is to be allowed the benefit of the advantageous prices of the new concern, and that a meat market run on the same principle, will shortly be established by the same company.

A Congratulatory Occasion.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, on Central avenue, during Thursday evening of last week, there was given by that lady and gentleman a reception to a large circle of friends and acquaintances that assembled to congratulate and express wishes of continued happiness to Mr. John W. Murray, Jr., and his late bride. The number of invitations issued was extensive, and between the hours of nine and eleven the parlors were uncomfortably crowded with a gathering of Plainfield's higher society. The bride—formerly Miss Amelia Dowley—was dressed in a rich blue watered-silk that greatly enhanced her acknowledged beauty, and carried a boquet of white roses that were no purer nor softer than her perfect complexion. The groom was looking—of course—unutterably happy, and accepted the overwhelming congratulations showered upon him, as just and due. During the continuance of the occasion, musicians from the N. Y. Seventh Regiment Band filled the rooms with a pleasant harmony, the echoes of which reached even the adjacent dining-room where Dieter, the popular caterer of Brooklyn, had spread a bountiful and well-assorted supper. In the hall above leading to the dressing-rooms, were placed the bridal presents of great number and value, consisting of tokens of love, admiration and esteem; from friends and relatives. Among them was a magnificent engraving; handsomely framed and labelled, "from The Boys"—which sobriquet designated the chosen companions of the groom's bachelorhood. At eleven o'clock—after the attendance had materially lessened—dancing was commenced and continued until the the succeeding morning. The ushers were Messrs. William Montgomery and W. DeWolfe Heyniger. Among those present, were Rev. and Mrs. John C. Bliss, Rev. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. Elias R. Pope, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Halt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Fraley, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Erickson, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brower, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Struthers, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Suydam, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. M. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Heyniger and Miss Heyniger, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Miller and Miss Miller, and the Misses Anna Titsworth, Florence Potter, Anna Bolen, Mary Mosher, Kittie Kaufman, Josie Knowland, Allie Yerkes, Eleanor Demarest, Laura Rushmore, Lizzie Underhill, Emma and Annie Dunn, Etta Gavett, Mamie and Belle McKeage, Lizzie Van Winkle, Anna Montgomery, Minnie Miller, Clemmie Yates, Emma McGee, the Miss Brewsters, and Messrs. Mr. Ginna, from Laws Com., presented the official guarantee of the Board of Freeholders, signed by the County Attorney and others, agreeing to cease all legal proceedings in the mandamus suits for the present. Rec'd and placed on file.

Mr. Livingston, from License Com., reported on the petition of P. Lynch for a liquor license, that the majority of the Com., recommended that such be not granted, and returned it without approval.

On motion of Mr. Newhall, the report was received and the application refused. Messrs. Gardner and J. Simpson voting against the motion.

Mr. Lindsley, from the Sal's Com., reported that it was unable to proceed in certain matters until the Finance Com., should act.

Mr. Ginna moved the adoption of the following resolution:

WHEREAS, By agreement with the Board of Chosen Freeholders, the city of Plainfield is now permitted free use of all city moneys now in her treasury, be it

Resolved, That the Treasurer be and he is hereby directed to pay the following judgments: That of Andrew Onderdonk, amounting to $1,662 82 with costs $84.15 and interest from Jan. 1st, 1880, and that of Manning Steele for $135 15 with interest.

Resolved, That the Treasurer be and is hereby directed to make application to the authorities of North Plainfield, for their proportion of the amount assumed by them of the judgment of Andrew Onderdonk—say one thousand dollars ($1000) with interest from July 11th, 1881, as per agreement entered into with a Committee of the Common Council of 1881.

Seconded by Mr. Lindsley and carried; all aye.

Mr. Ginna moved the adoption of a resolution to the effect that the Treasurer be directed to pay all warrants outstanding against the Poor fund, and all against the General fund to the amount of $5,000—not to include in either case, warrants now in suit. Carried; all aye.

Mr. Thompson called from the table certain bills audited at last meeting, and moved that warrants be ordered drawn for the same. Seconded by Mr. Livingston and carried, all aye.

Mr. Kaufman call from the table the name of Mr. Charles W. Kimball as the nominee of the Mayor for the office of Counsel to the Corporation, and moved its confirmation. He thought it was due the gentleman that action in the matter should be taken; and although the speaker was aware that the officer had not been in accord with the Council in certain matters, still, as such were now finally arranged, he, (Mr. Kaufman) would favor his continuance in office.

Mr. Lindsley seconded the motion but spoke against the candidate's confirmation. If Mr. Kimball was retained in the position he could only act with the Council by implicating his past; and the speaker would not vote for a Corporation Attorney that was so encumbered.

Confirmation was denied by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs Kaufman, J. Simpson and Thompson.

Negative—President Rushmore and Messrs Gardner, Newhall, Ginna, R. Simpson, Livingston and Lindsley.

Mr. Ginna stated that since the passage of a resolution reducing the rate of interest on taxes paid prior to March 1st., a large number of delinquents had seized the advantageous opportunity to settle. He then moved that the time be extended to March 20th. Carried, all aye.

Mr. Kaufman asked if the Finance Com.; had employed an expert to examine the Collector's books since the incorporation of the City, as authorized to do by a recent resolution of the Council. Messrs Newhall and Lindsley of such Com., knew of no action regarding the matter.

Mr. Ginna, for the information of the Council, read a memorandum of the progress of just such an intention in the past. On Sep. 23d, 1878, a resolution was passed requesting the late Town Committee to turn over all books, papers, etc., in its possession, relating to the collecting of taxes. On Oct. 14th, 1881, the then Finance Com., reported that it had met with the Clerk and received such books, etc. On Jan. 4th 1879, it reported that the Collector's accounts were so complicated that they should be left to the incoming Council for its examination. On Feb. 13th, 1879, the matter was called up and referred to the Finance Com., of that year. Since then nothing in relation is recorded. Mr. Ginna closed by requesting permission to insist that the present Finance Com., act at once in the matter.

On motion of Mr. Livingston, the Laws Com., was empowered to employ such counsel as it might desire. All aye.

The following were taken from the table, and after a third reading, passed:

"An Ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police Force."

"An Ordinance to provide for the erection of barriers to prevent accidents."

"An Ordinance relating to the Street Commissioner of the City of Plainfield."

The "Ordinance to provide for the Licensing and Regulation of Pedlers, Hawkers, Cartmen, Hacks, Omnibus, Stage and Truck Owners and Drivers," was put back to its second reading and after some amendments, ordered engrossed and to a third reading.

On motion of Mr. Kaufman, seconded by Mr. Ginna, the Janitor was directed to take up the torn matting on the stairs leading to the rooms.

The Council then adjourned.

TEMPERANCE AMONG THE YOUNG.

Report of the Beginning and Progress of a Good Work.

A number of the ladies of Plainfield desirous of promoting the principles of Temperance and moral growth of the youth in this city, under due notice from each other, decided to form themselves into an association. Accordingly a meet*ing was held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A.* on Dec. 19th.

A committee having drafted a constitution to govern the association, said constitution was read and accepted. Then the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. Vanderbeek; Vice President, Mrs. Wade; Secretary, Miss Mary Mosher; who has since resigned; Treasurer, Miss Clemmie Yates; Class Sup't, Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond; Pianist, Mrs. Utter.

We have also a Board of Managers. Mrs. Haviland, Mrs. Yates, (who has since resigned), Mrs. Bliss filling that vacancy, Mrs. Lamson, Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. S. F Dunn. Our Advisory Board consists of the following named gentlemen: Rev. A. H. Lewis, Mr. James Perrine and Rev. K. P. Ketcham.

Our first public meeting was held Jan. 4th, this being the day appointed for the Christmas entertainment, which was held in the Holly Tree Inn. After the pleasing address from Mrs. Baldwin of Newark, Mr. Perrine gave a few words of welcome to teachers, scholars and their friends and opened the door for that which to the boys and girls was the chief feature of the entertainment—the refreshments. Each class was waited upon by its teacher so that no one should be slighted, and that all things might be equally distributed. The refreshments consisted of sandwiches and cake; or oranges and cornucopias of candy were taken from the Christmas tree and given to the children to carry away with them.

Our meetings are held on Wednesday afternoon of each week commencing at half-past three. The first half hour is spent in learning and singing songs from our new book called "Ripples of Song." The children who are able to be present at this hour enjoy it very much.

The regular exercises do not begin until 4 o'clock. This is done so that the members who attend school may be able to get there in time for the lesson. Our school of about one hundred and fifty members is divided into twenty one classes, each class having a teacher.

Some may ask what do we want of teachers and what do they teach? We have a catechism called "Alcohol; Its Use and Abuses." Each week certain portions of this are explained by the teacher to her class, then the pledges are to be committed and explained in order that the smallest child may understand what is expected of him. This work is given in charge of the teachers. Collections are taken, each teacher and officer contributing five cents each week, and scholars a penny if they are able.

Each boy or girl in order to become a member of this "Band of Hope" is expected to sign the first of the three pledges for a specified time; when this is done they are entitled to a badge. But any member subscribing to all three of the pledges shall have his or her name placed upon the "Roll of Honor."

The meetings are well attended, the scholars seeming to take considerable interest in them.

We have a band of earnest temperance Christian teachers who have entered into this work realizing how important it is that these boys and girls may be trained that they may be a power in the future, and creditably take the places of those working in their interest and in the interests of the commonwealth.

SARAH D. JONES,
Secretary.

FIRE MATERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, met in regular meeting on Wednesday evening. Present—President VanWinkle and Messrs Gilliss, Depew, Morris, Jones and Fialz. The minutes of the last regular and previous adjourned meetings were read and approved. Mr. Morris from Com. on Repairs and Supplies reported that having been notified that the new Truck was on its wheels and ready for inspection, the Com., on Tuesday visited the Works accompanied by two experts and made a thorough examination of the apparatus. They found that in some particulars the Truck was not according to the specifications of the contract, and they informed the Contractor that unless every provision was conformed to, the work would not be accepted. The Committee's objections were allowed and the Contractor promised to fulfill the demands. In consequence there will be a further delay, and the Truck will not arrive until about the middle of April. Mr. W. W. Coriell was unanimously confirmed as a member of Zephyr H. & L. Co., and Messrs L. J. Scott, James Hunt*ington and Charles Ward as members of* Gazelle Eng. Co. The following bills were ordered paid: Gutta Percha Mfg. Co., $44.98 and expenses of Com. on R. & S., 11.50. Mr. Morris presented the following resolutions which were adopted:

Resolved, That the next election for two members of the Board of Managers to fill vacancies that will occur on the third day of May next, by the expiration of the terms of office of J. Van Winkle and Wm. E. Jones, also for one Assessor, be held at Laing's Hall on Monday April 10th 1882. Polls to be kept open from 2 to 7 o'clock p. m.

Resolved, That the President and Secretary of this Board be and hereby are instructed to give the proper legal notice, as required by the Charter of the Plainfield Fire Department, of the annual election to be held April 10th, 1882, as provided for in the resolutions; also for power to raise by taxation $7,000 for fire purposes.

Resolved, That a vote be taken at the next election of the Department to authorize the Board of Managers to pay the Assessor his fees for the years 1879 and 1880, amounting to $252.64; also for authority to pay said Assessor his fees for the present year.

Also the bills of Assessor Hubbard for fees of 1879 $126.12, 1879 $126.44 and 1880 $124.20—total, $378.76. On these was a credit of $126.12 received from L. E. Clark. Mr. Hubbard agreed to charge no interest on his bills if no interest was charged on his fire tax. Bills laid on the table. Chief Vail stated that as the Warren Hose carriage was broken and useless, he had ordered Alert Co., to supply Warren Engine with the hose it might need in case of a fire. The President requested the Com., on Repairs and Supplies to report at next meeting the cost of a new jumper. The Chief reported that No. 3 Engine was again in working order. The President presented a communication from Mr. C. E. Hartshorne, claiming a balance due him of $250 on the present Truck in use by the Department. Ref'd to Com., of Repairs and Supplies. The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

Township Reports.

In reviewing in our last issue the annual financial report of the Township of North Plainfield, we had occasion, in justice, to commend the efficiency of its officers. In giving below a retrospect of other reports, it is plainly shown that the same finesse and capability for their respective offices, are possessed by the Collectors and Treasurers of these other Townships.

FANWOOD.

Collector Wm. Hatfield reports the amount of taxes uncollected as only $47.29 for 1880, and $476.73 for 1881. He paid to the County Collector during the past year, $4,633 24; to the Township Treasurer, $1,548.89; and to the several School Districts, $2,516.94; leaving a balance in hand of $1,953.48. Treasurer L. W. Miller Jr., reports all bills as paid and a balance in his hands of $600.48.

WESTFIELD.

Collector W. W. Connoly paid to the County Collector, during the past year, $5,614 05; to the Township Treasurer, $5,135; to the School Districts, $3,747.14, and Bond and interest $1,292 13. The uncollected taxes for the past six years amount to $2,024.69. All bills have been paid and the cash balances are: Collector $1,817.46; Treasurer James Moffett, $339 11.

WARREN.

Collector H. H. Punison reports as paid to County Collector $2,131 81 to School Districts $2,024 80 and a balance in hand due the latter of $1,716 20. The balance in the hands of Treasurer J. J. Long is $290 59 after paying all claims. The uncollected taxes amount to only $76.19.

THE Ball that was to have taken place at Blimm's Hall, at Mount Bethel, on February 21st, has been postponed until Monday evening next, March 6th.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Rev. Dr. Vermilyea of New York City, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on last Sunday.

Edward S. Brokaw has purchased one of the three houses on Broad street belonging to Joseph S. Clark, a former resi*dent of our town.*

J. Wallace Corey, who recently sold his house and lot to John Ingram, will remove with his family about April 1st, to Philadelphia, Pa.

Robert Fairbairn, Esq., has rented a residence in Plainfield, and will remove there about April 1st. His residence on Mountain avenue is to let.

Thomas H. Clark, brother of ex-Surrogate Clark, removed on Monday last with his family to Jersey City, where he expects to engage in business.

Smoky Hollow is all alive over the question as to who shall be Overseer of the Road for the coming year. Several candidates are in the field—let the best man win!

William Stitt, Esq., has started on a two week's trip to Virginia, and from there to Ashtabula County, Ohio, to visit a brother of his who was here last summer.

Charles Lee, son-in-law of Joel Moffett, removed with his family on Monday last to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he intends to keep house. Mr. Lee is engaged in business in New York city.

There is quite a feeling in our town, among some of the residents, regarding the case of Bridget Molloney. A portion of the people think in justice to all concerned, there ought yet to be an inquest held, so that the entire facts of the case could be brought out and the responsi*bility placed where it properly belongs.*

The Collins vs. Collins case, has agitated the upper portion of our township for over a month past, there having been five different juries to pass upon the case before a verdict was arrived at. A change in the usual programme, occurred on Saturday last, however, when Mr. Isaac Collins, the defendant in the case, went to Trenton and secured a writ of certiorari to stay the proceedings until the next term of the Supreme Court to be held at Trenton in June next. This is a case of brother against brother, fighting over possession of real estate left by their father.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

"MY TORMENTED BACK!"

Is the exclamation of more than one poor hard working man and woman. Do you know why it aches? It is because your kidneys are overtasked and need strengthening, and your system needs to be cleansed of bad humors. Kidney-Wort is the medicine you need. "It acts like a charm," says a well known physician, "I never knew it to fail." Liquid or dry sold by Druggists.—Boston Post.

RHEUMATIC DISEASES.

These ailments follow from torpid liver and costive bowels; the skin, bowels and kidneys failing in their proper work, an acrid poison is formed in the blood, which is the occasion of these acute diseases. Kidney-Wort produces healthy action of all secretive organs, and throws off the rheumatic poison. Equally efficient in liquid or dry form.

BLUE birds, red-wing black-birds and woodcock, have been seen in this vicinity the past week. All of which is a sure sign that the "back-bone of winter" is being broken and Spring approaching.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 14, 1880.

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

MRS. JULIA G. CUSHING.

EASILY PROVEN.—It is easily proven that malarial fevers, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgic ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm always.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

A Perfect Corset Secured at Last!
It is a well-known fact that a large proportion of the ills of female life are directly attributed to the unyielding pressure of the Corset about the waist of the wearer. This evil has been entirely overcome in this corset, by the introduction of ELASTIC SECTIONS, composed of A SERIES OF FINE COILED WIRE SPRINGS. These springs are warranted to retain their perfect elasticity until the corset is worn out; and, unlike rubber, will not heat the person or decay with age. This corset yields readily to every respiration, and is equally comfortable in any position assumed by the wearer—Will fit perfectly a greater variety of forms than any other.

JACK HOWARD'S INHERITANCE.

HOW HE LOST IT.

'You can 'ave her for the asking.'

'I shall not ask.'

'You will not?'

'I will not.'

John Howard, uncle, short, corpulent, irascible, confronted John Howard, nephew, tall, clean-limbed, imperturbable.

'Why?' demanded the former angrily.

'She is a woman for whom I have no respect. She is a hard, scheming woman of the world.'

'She is no worse than any society woman.'

'God pity the class,' was young Howard's sole reply.

'Who are you that you should judge this girl?' demanded his uncle, pacing the floor with short, rapid strides. 'You with your dissipated habits and the reputation of being the fastest man in your set. What if she be called 'fast?' It would puzzle the worst of her sex to keep the pace you have been going for the past five years! Who are you, I say, that you should judge her?'

'Merely the man whom you would have her marry,' said his nephew, twisting his heavy moustache caressingly. 'Similarity of tastes in the pursuits you have so aptly mentioned ought certainly to render us mutually forbearing, but would hardly conduce to the moral improvement of either. At all events I respectfully decline to put the matter to the test.'

'You are ungrateful, sir!' exclaimed the old man, pausing in his walk and confronting his nephew. 'Have I no claims upon your gratitude, after all the care and money expended upon you these years?'

A slow flush rose to the young man's cheek, and the sleepy, dark eyes gained a slumbering fire as he drew himself up to the full height of his six feet. 'I admit my obligations, sir; but, believe me, had I been aware that you were simply enhancing my value as a salable article, I would have declined your generosity. In any way consistent with my manhood I am ready to attest my gratitude for your kindness. But what you ask is absolutely impossible.'

'Then you are no nephew of mine.' The old man was purple with rage. 'I disown you, sir! an ungrateful dog, sir! an ungrateful dog! I shall alter my will at once, sir!'

And, muttering maledictions on the youth who stood so calmly under the tirade, the old gentleman moved to his secretary, and almost immediately returned with a parchment roll in his trembling hands. 'I disown you, sir; my home is yours no longer. There are your hopes and expectations.' And the old man pointed to the parchment, crackling and writhing in the open grate.

'You have relieved me of a great obligation, sir. The rest of my debt I hope to discharge soon,' said Jack, carefully examining the end of his cigar. 'Your wish regarding our separate establishments shall be attended to at once. Have you any other suggestions to make?'

'Out of my sight, sir, at once!' shouted the old man.

'Explicit, though unkind,' laughed Jack, as he sauntered from the room.

* * * * * * *

'Kendal, can you tell me the sum-total of the bills my uncle has paid for me during the past ten years?' inquired Jack, a few hours later, as he stood by the old book-keeper's desk in his uncle's office.

'Why, yes, in a little while,' answered the old man.

'Be so kind, then.' And Jack became immersed in the stock columns of the morning paper.

For half an hour there was silence between the pair. Then the old clerk handed the young man a slip of paper.

'You are sure it covers all?'

'Yes. Mr. Howard always had your account kept separate for some reason, and I had only to run over the totals.'

Howard sauntered into his broker's private office, the slip of paper in his vest pocket.

'Mr. McElbry, sell out my Chrysolite at once, and place the proceeds, less brokerage, to my credit at Brown Brothers.'

'But, Mr. Howard, stocks are rising, and Chrysolite is at the head of the list and steadily going up. I would advise holding on.'

'I want the money to-day, and prefer to sell,' said Jack, briefly, and sauntered out.

Going through a rapid mental calculation, he muttered under moustache: 'About a thousand. Better than I hoped for.' And then a voice sounded at his elbow:

'Hello, Jack! What are you muttering about in that melancholy way?'

'My fortune, Charley,' laughed Howard.

'Well, if I had such a fortune in prospect as you have, I wouldn't look so solemn about it.'

'And how much do you think it does or will amount to?'

'Rumor, with its hundred tongues, hath not one tongue that puts it less than fifty thousand a year.'

'Humph! truthful rumor,' said Jack.

Charley Grant looked at his friend inquiringly. 'Jack, something is the matter. You have had a row with the old gentleman as usual, I suppose.'

'As usual,' calmly assented Howard. 'Dine with me at Delmonico's at six, Charley.'

'All right, old fellow,' and they separated.

At the door of the banking office of Brown Brothers, Jack paused for a moment, looking contemplatively at a slip of paper bearing a number of five figures. 'You have kept the pace famously, my boy,' was all the reflection called forth.

Howard entered the bank as the chimes of old Trinity struck two, making his way to the rear office with an air of accustomed privilege. Half an hour later he reappeared, accompanied to the door of the office by one of the firm.

'Very well, Mr. Howard, the sum shall be placed to the old gentleman's credit. A very pleasant surprise for him.'

On his way out Jack paused and drew a check for $1,008.48. It was promptly paid and leisurely pocketed.

'Quite a fortune,' was Jack's mental comment.

HOW HE FOUND IT.

The 8:20 morning train on the Denver and South Park Railroad, detained by a heavy fall of snow in Platte Cañon, toiled slowly up to the low board structures that served as passenger depot at Weston, Col., time, 11:30 A. M., Dec. 21, 1879. The multiplicity of saloons, in the one long row of shingled tents and slab shanties stretching along the side of the track, proclaimed the place of no little importance. Piles of freight, heavy wagons, long mule trains and swaggering bull-whackers marked the then terminus of a railroad.

The weary passengers turned to the stage office to book their seats. 'No coaches till to-morrow, gentlemen. Last train delayed also. Coaches left at daylight, crammed inside and out. Heavy fall of snow in South Park. New roads to break. Good accommodations at the International, fourth shanty to right of office. Nine and a half to Buena Vista, sir. Next gentleman.' And the agent, callous alike to curses or prayers, calmly repeated his formula to another group of unfortunates.

'Jack, what do you think of the International?' queried Charley Grant, as the friends passed the long, low, shabby edifice so-called.

'It is a disgrace to the borders of civilization. Let us see whether there are any private conveyances to be had.'

Recourse to the agent developed the fact that but one available vehicle remained in the station. It was immediately hired.

'Bill, put the sorrel and gray in the buckboard, and tell Ed to stop for two fares to Leadville. Send baggage to-morrow, gentlemen. Very busy season and roads bad from the snow.'

A few minutes later the buckboard rolled along in the deep ruts of the frozen ground.

An hour had passed. The uneven road had given place to a snowy trail, over which the wheels crunched.

The wind came rushing over the plain with a hoarse, vindictive scream, and the air was white with snow that cut the face savagely. The horses were laboring heavily through the low drifts which had begun to fill the trail. The west range had disappeared from view. The driver's face was dark and troubled.

'By George! one deserves a fortune for overcoming the difficulties he meets with in reaching Leadville, setting aside those that await him there,' growled Grant.

'But when the El Dorado is reached, and the fortune won, and that little home and sweet Kate Sheldon gained, how slight the hardships will seem then,' said Jack cheerily.

His companion brightened visibly.

'That is pretty well assured already, Jack. I go into the firm when I return, and Kate told me when we parted that she didn't think she would let me go away again. So, Leadville or no Leadville, happiness awaits my return. I wish that I could feel that the same good fortune was in store for you, dear old fellow.'

'The flood-tide will come in good time, Charley,' said Howard, quietly; and again there fell a long silence.

The wind was rushing over the plain in fierce gusts, and the snow was driving along blindingly. It had grown piercingly cold. The horses, almost blinded, turned their heads this way and that to escape the pitiless blast. Charley, wrapped in happy dreams, had almost become oblivious to the wild storm which had burst upon them. Not so Howard. His face grew more and more grave. At last he leaned forward and laid his hand on the driver's shoulders. The man turned and his eyes met Jack's. In the troubled expression Howard read 'danger.'

'How far is it to the station?'

'Five miles, if a foot.'

'Can you keep the trail?'

'I can't! See! this cursed wagon drags eternally through the drifts. If we cut loose from it and make a break with the horses—'

The driver paused and looked in his listener's eyes, as if seeking resolution to go on. Howard's dark eyes were thoughtful and almost sad.

'You think the only chance for safety is in the horses?'

'Yes. We can run them for all that's in them, and perhaps make the station. But it will be a close call at the best, and'—bending his head nearer Jack, and glancing nervously toward Charley—'only two can go! So long as there is a shadow of a trail I can follow it, but it's going fast in this gale. For God's sake, decide quickly!'

The dark eyes had lost their look of trouble. The handsome face was pale, but calm, as was it's wont.

'Cut the horses loose,' came the answer short and sharp. 'Charley, we must leave the wagon. Tumble out, old man.'

Jack was already on the ground, removing with rapid, skillful hands the harness from the crowding horses. Charley came back from dreamland, from the bright little home of his fancy, and climbed bewilderedly to the ground.

'What are we leaving the wagon for? Are we going to camp here? What's all the row?'

'The row is, my dear boy, that the wagon sticks in the drifts and we are going to push on for the station on horseback.'

'All ready, sir?' said the driver, looking at Jack.

'All ready. Here, Charley, up you go! Now ride hard, and stick close to your guide.'

The driver paused in astonishment.

'But what are you going to do, Jack?' And Charley looked from his companion to the driver perplexedly. Something in their faces struck him as with a blow. He grew deadly pale.

'My God! Jack, what is this? Can't we all go?'

'No, old fellow, we cannot,' said Jack.

'But why should you be left? This man—what right has he more than either of us—'

'He is the only hope of one of us. He alone can find the station.'

'Great God! This is horrible. I will not leave you. I cannot Jack.'

'Charley, you must, and at once. Every minute is precious. Your life is not your own. Think of Kate. You must go, dear old fellow. Good-bye.'

Jack's warm, firm hand held Charley's in a clinging grasp for an instant, and then let it fall.

'By Heavens! I will not go.'

The driver sat nervous and impatient. Jack moved to his side and whispered, 'He must go—do you understand?' and nodded toward the heavy wagon whip that lay beside the heap of harness.

'Yes, be quick about it.'

The driver grasped Grant's rein, that hung loosely on the horse's neck. The long lash cut through the crisp air savagely. Both horses sprang forward with a single impulse.

Jack Howard stood alone in the whirling snow. His skeleton was found there in the spring.

At 1 P. M., December 22, 1879, the telegraph operator at Leadville received the following dispatch:

NOTHING TO BRAG OF.

'Sir,' began a creditor who met one of his victims on Grand River street yesterday. 'I sent you a bill in June.'

'Yes sir.'

'And again in September.'

'Yes sir.'

'And again in December.'

'Yes sir.'

'And I presume you received one the other day?'

'I did, sir.'

'Well sir—well sir?' flustered the creditor.

'Well, you needn't feel so stuck up over it,' replied the other as he lit a twenty cent cigar. 'There are firms in this town who send me bills every two weeks in the year, and they never stop me on the streets to brag about it either. I detest such egotism, sir. Good day.'

A Home Protection Party.

TRENTON, N. J. Feb. 22.—The Temperance Home Protection Party of New Jersey met here to-day and effected a permanent organization and perfected arrangements to carry their organization into every voting district of the State. The principles of the organization are constitutional prohibition of liquor traffic; civil service reform; protection from oppression by monopolies; compulsory education of children; amelioration of child labor; preservation of the sanctity of the Sabbath; abolition of polygamy; the ballot for woman as a means of home protection. A mass-meeting was held to-night.

A $20.00 Biblical Reward

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly in the prize puzzle department of their Monthly for March offer the following easy way for some one to make $20.00:

Should two or more correct answers be received the prize will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner March 15th, 1882. Those who try for the prize must send 20 cts. in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer for which they will receive the April number of the Monthly, in which will be published the name and address of the winner of the prize, with the correct answer thereto. Cut this out; it may be worth $20.00 to you. Address, RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING CO., Easton, Pa.

The Jolly Five.

Of five of New Jersey's late eminent Republican financiers, Trenton dispatches give us tidings as follows:

Keeper Laverty of the States Prison has made Oscar L. Baldwin, former cashier of the Mechanics' National Bank of Newark, keeper of the gate at the west end of the prison. Visitors enter by another gate, and only men who take in provisions and other supplies can see Baldwin. His head has been closely shorn, and he wears the customary suit of blue and red cloth. James A. Hedden, who was formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Newark, was for a long time keeper of the same gate. Keeper Laverty says Hedden appears to be weak in both body and mind. At times he shows considerable flightiness. His cell and Baldwin's are at different ends of the south corridor, and at least 175 feet apart. Hedden has Comptroller Leggett, of Elizabeth, for a cell mate, while Baldwin's companion is Leeds, the former clerk of Leggett. And Berry, of Hackensack Bank notoriety, is the prison librarian.

Col. Freese's five years in prison expired last week. Ex-Congressman Voorhees has got another chance to escape State Prison, most of the indictments being drawn defectively by the U. S. prosecuting attorney, and three of the jury which tried the only correct count last week standing out against conviction.

The Metropolitan of Moscow having written to the Czar urging him to appear among his subjects instead of entombing himself in his palaces, the Czar inquired from his officers whether he could dismiss the Archbishop.

A woman in New Orleans found her husband in a state of intoxication in an alley. Instead of being exasperated she gently turned him over into a comfortable position and, running her hand into his vest pocket she extracted a twenty dollar bill, and remarked: "I reckon I've got the dead wood on that new bonnet I've been sufferin' for?" and she made a straight streak for the nearest millinery shop.

At a happy spot where a number of negroes reside, an old negro was heard calling to his wife: "Manda! is you got dem chickens shut up in de smoke-house, like I told yer?" "No, an' I likter know what de matter wid you, dat you's so mighty tickler' bout dem chickens at once?" she replied. "Neber you mind, I know what's de matter, and dat's nuff till dem chickens is housed.—When I hears dat dem niggers over dar in the next yard is gwine to hab a party to-morrow night I want to be shur dat my chickens don't tend it; you hear me?"

We are glad to announce that The Scientific American came out of the late fire in New York, like the fabled Phœnix, with renewed life. The subscription lists, account books, patent drawings, and correspondence was preserved in massive fire-proof safes. The printing of The Scientific American and Supplement was done in another building; consequently the types, plates, presses, paper, etc., were unharmed, and no interruption of business was occasioned. The new Scientific American offices are located at 261 Broadway, corner of Warren street, a very central and eligible situation. The new building fronts towards the City Hall, the Court House, and the New Post Office.

Thomas Maley, of Ogdensburg, and Frederick A. Canfield, of Morris county, mining contractors, have brought suit against the owners of the Tilly Foster Iron Mines, near Brewster's Station, New York, for an alleged breach of contract. In 1878 Messrs. Maley and Canfield entered into a contract to mine the ore to a certain depth at $1.50 per ton. The following summer the owner desired to annul the contract, and sent a force of men from Scranton with arms, who drove the workmen from the mine and took possession. The damages are placed at $85,165.41. The case was called in New York courts last week, and ex-Judge Joseph S. Bosworth, was appointed referee to settle and determine the matter.

For "The Constitutionalist."

BIRTHDAY OF WASHINGTON.

Hail natal day of Washington;
None fame has more than he.
Our country's pride, his country's son
And father will ever be.

He took his life within his hand
When he the stars and stripes did raise,
For cause of freedom in the land
And British rule to raze.

The want of raiment, arms and food
Pressed sore by hostile foe;
Yet daily raised his prayers to God.
To bless his cause and country too.

History scarce gives a parallel
Of such unequal strife.
One fought for the oppressor's rule
Others, for home and life.

The God of battles saw the cause,
The justice and the right;
And so decreed his righteous laws,
The oppressed to win the fight.

THE STOLEN LETTER.

All through the long, pleasant summer on the Williams farm the two girls had been rivals—almost to the death. Society has its restraints—well for many of us that it is so! For, on the last evening of her stay at the farm-house the heart of Kate Jervis was full of a cold and deadly anger as she reviewed the events of the campaign and knew that it had failed.

She had come to that lonely and secluded place only because Charles Edwards, the handsome and wealthy widower from Australia, was to be there. Throughout the cold days of autumn and the hazy beauty of the Indian summer she had lingered on, hoping continually that she might win him away from Lily Melville, whom in her secret heart she stigmatized as "a dark little thing, with not an atom of style about her."

But to the end of time the question, "Why does a man love one woman and not another?" will never be satisfactorily answered.

Miss Jervis, large, tall, stately and fair, devoted to dress, and with social talents of the very highest order, had only received from the gallant widower the ordinary attentions which every gentleman is bound to pay to the ladies near him.

While Lily Melville who was poor and unnoticed, who toiled daily with her pencil for her daily bread, and who was utterly unable to follow the shifting fashions of the day, even if she did wish to do so. Lily Melville had won the widower's heart, and need only say the word to receive the offer of his hand.

Kate Jervis did not deceive herself. She had watched their parting only two days previously, and had read her own in Charles Edward's face.

"May I write to you?" had been his last words to Lily.

For Kate, he had only the conventional regrets at parting, mingled with his adieu. Not one word of hope as to any future meeting!

Yes, she had failed—utterly and ignominiously failed—and now she must pack up the useless finery which had cost so much and go back to the city boarding-house—to the narrow, pinching consideration of ways and means, from which by the capture of this man and his fortune she had hoped to have been forever freed.

"If I could only spoil her happiness, I would not so much mind giving up my own," she thought, as she walked along the road that led from the farm to the village, on the third evening after Mr. Edwards' departure. "But how? And how disgustingly self-satisfied she looks! I hate her! I hated her from the first day of her coming, though I did not then know why."

At that moment she saw the boy who was employed at the farm to run on errands to the village. He was running up the road at a great pace with a countenance black with discontent.

"Have you seen farmer Williams, miss?" he asked, anxiously.

"He came home from the village half an hour ago," said Kate.

"Just my luck!" whined the boy. "I wanted to hand him these, and now I must go all the way with them. And the minstrels are up in Tesson's Hall. They'll be half through before I can get back."

He held out two letters as he spoke with an appealing look at Kate, one for herself, the other sealed with a seal and directed to Lily Melville in a hand that she only knew too well.

"I'm going back. I'll take them for you," she said, mechanically.

The boy gave her the letters, thanked her, and tore back to the village whistling.

"Shall I? Shall I not?" thought Kate, standing still in that lonely place.

She opened her own letter. It contained only the dressmaker's bill for those pretty summer toilets which had been of so little use to her. How was she to pay that bill, now that the rich husband on whom she had so securely counted had turned out to be a myth?

"It is too hard!" she exclaimed, aloud, in sudden passion. "Why should this good fortune come to her and not to me? She shall never have the satisfaction of triumphing over me. I wonder what he has written?"

Crack went the seal as she trifled with it. But in her frenzy of jealous anger and hatred only an "iron-clad" envelope could possibly withstand her hand. The next moment the letter was opened out before her. With a sickening heart she read the manly, straightforward proposal of marriage. But her fair, proud face brightened at the concluding words:

"I had not courage to say this while we were together. Nor have I courage to meet your refusal, even though it be a written one. So I will beg of you, if your heart is otherwise engaged, not to pain me by the knowledge. If you do not answer this letter I shall understand that it is for that reason. If you do answer it, you will make me the happiest of men. Yours faithfully,

CHARLES EDWARDS."

"There is the answer!" said Kate, spitefully, tearing the letter across and across, and thrusting it deep into the hedge in its envelope.

Then she walked back to the farm. That night the first snow of the autumn fell and the farmhouse was deserted the next day by the last of its summer guests, good Mrs. Williams writing down the city address of Lily Melville and faithfully promising "to forward any letters that might arrive," while Kate Jervis looked quietly on.

* * * * *

Two months went by. Lily toiling away at her paintings found time to wonder, sadly, why the hoped-for letter from Charles Edwards never came. Not for his fortune did she love him, but for himself.

It was a mild, open winter, and when the holidays drew near she took the few dollars she had so painfully saved and went back to the old farmhouse where she had first met him.

Since she was to see his face no more it would be some consolation, although a sad one, to visit the places where she had been so happy by his side.

The secluded road that led to the village had been one of their favorite walks. There Lily lingered through a whole sunny afternoon—the last of her stay that year as her purse was nearly empty.

Some bitter tears were in her eyes as she turned to go. A carriage was coming from the station, and not caring to be seen there weeping she drew back with her face toward the barren hedge.

At her feet something white gleamed. She picked it up mechanically, and to her astonishment saw a torn and stained letter, with her own name upon the envelope.

Under the ice and snow of the past autumn it had lain waiting for her coming. She could still decipher it, and as she read a mountain of snow and ice seemed to be lifted from her heart.

"Thank God! He did love me!" she exclaimed.

"Lily—Miss Melville," said a familiar voice.

She turned. The carriage which she had seen stood waiting in the road, and at her side was Charles Edwards, looking from her happy face to the torn letter in her hand with a questioning gaze.

"I was coming back for a few days to the dear old place," he said. "You made me very unhappy last autumn. Yet I am like the moth with the candle—not wise enough to keep away, even after getting severely burned."

"I only found it this moment, under the hedge!" stammered Lily, giving him the fragments that she held. "It must have been lost and hidden under the ice all this time."

"You would have answered me, then, Lily?" he asked.

Her shy, happy eyes looked gently up at him.

"Drive on to the farm, my man. We will walk," he called, to the staring man.

And drawing Lily's little hand within his arm they began their life-journey happily together.

A boy was sent by his mother to a neighbor's house for a cup of sour milk. On being told that there was none but sweet milk to be had, he helped himself to a chair, and said: "Well, I'll wait till it sours." He secured the championship for laziness.

A tidy young lady, short of stature, married a man six feet four inches tall. She explained to her friends that he would be so handy to have in the house; he could light the chandeliers in the parlor and hang pictures without getting on the chairs and soiling them with his boots.

"How is it, Mr. Brown," said a miller to a farmer, "that when I came to measure those ten barrels of apples I bought from you I found them nearly two barrels short?" "Singular, very singular; for I sent them to you in ten of your own flour barrels." "Ahem! did, eh?" said the miller, "well, perhaps I made a mistake."

The signal service report shows Milwaukee to be the windiest city in the country. In a year the wind traveled 90,482 miles in that city, while in the big city of New York it only traveled 88,621 miles in that period. We can't understand how the wind could travel so many miles in a little city like Milwaukee. It must have traversed not only every street but every alley and byway, besides racing up and down all the halls and stairways.

Bob: "I say, Jim, didn't I lend you a quarter last month?" Jim: "Yes, Bob, you did, and I meant to have paid you before this; but that Union Generale failure over in Paris cleaned me out completely. Then, you know, there has been a big advance in the rate of interest on discount and advances by the Imperial Bank at Berlin, and when you remember also the steady upward tendency in the Bank of England rate, you must know that it bears awfully hard on us moneyed men. You see how it is, Bob." Bob was convinced.

A WANT OF ANCESTRY.

Mr. and Mrs. Boggs were sitting by the evening fire. Mrs. Boggs was busy with her sewing and Mr. Boggs was reading about the reception of the Steubens, in the Commercial. "Pshaw!" exclaimed Mr. B., throwing the paper aside with an expression of extreme dissatisfaction.

"Why, what is the matter, Mr. Boggs?" asked his wife, raising her eyes from her work, with wild surprise.

"Matter enough!" returned Boggs. "Why couldn't some of my ancestors have done something?"

"Done something! Didn't they do something? I never knew that your ancestors lived without doing something. There was your great, great grandfather I've heard you tell about; they had him in jail in England for doing something, I've forgotten precisely what."

"That ain't what I'm talking about," said Boggs, testily. "I mean if my ancestors had distinguished themselves in some way I might have been of some account now instead of being plain Boggs."

"But ain't you of some account, Mr. Boggs? Ain't you invited every day or so to sign some petition or another, and haven't you been secretary of a primary meeting in your ward?" asked Mrs. B., in a little glow of pride.

"Well, that don't count," said Boggs, waving these honors aside with a sweep of the hand, "it's a renowned ancestor that I want; a Boggs that has done something to make his descendants famous through all time; a great General, or something like that."

"But, my dear," said Mrs. B., a bright idea striking her, "your family is distinguished, come to think."

"The Boggs distinguished? Nonsense."

"No nonsense about it. Didn't you tell me once there was Irish blood in your veins?"

"I believe there is a little."

"Well, then," said Mrs. B., triumphantly, "can't you trace your pedigree to the Boggs of old Ireland?"

Boggs went off to bed without saying another word.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

COATS OF ARMS.

Coats of arms were used to distinguish the different chiefs or lords and their followers in battle and abroad, before the common people had learned to read. They were necessary as the uniforms and badges are now to distinguish the various regiments and State officers. The figures of lions, dragons, eagles and other creatures, the rose, lily and palm, could be recognized when embroidered on the surcoat or garment worn above the armor to protect it from tarnishing, and soldiers could know at a glance when they met to what duke or prince they belonged. At first only sovereigns used these distinctions; afterward all families of noble birth chose badges and figured shields, every design on which was a sign of some trait of which they were proud, their loyalty, courage or ambition. Or the figures recalled some notable event in the fortunes of the family, as the spider, which Robert Bruce watched mending its web in the cave, while he was hiding from his enemies, was placed in the royal arms after he became King of Scotland.

"WITH THE AUTHOR'S COMPLIMENTS."

When Professor Aytoun was wooing Miss Wilson, daughter of Professor Wilson, the famous "Christopher North," he obtained the lady's consent conditionally on that of her father's being secured. This Aytoun was much too shy to ask, and he prevailed upon the young lady herself to conduct the necessary negotiations.

"We must deal tenderly with his feelings," said glorious old Christopher. "I'll write my reply on a slip of paper, and pin it to the back of your frock."

"Papa's answer is on the back of my dress," said Miss Jane as she entered the drawing room. Turning her round, the delighted professor read these words: "With the author's compliments."

THEY DON'T SPEAK.

They were engaged to be married, and called each other by their first names, Tom and Fanny, and he was telling her how he had always liked the name of Fanny, and how it sounded like music in his ears.

"I like the name so well," he added, as a sort of clincher to the argument, "that when sister Clara asked me to name her pet terrier, I at once called it Fanny, after you, dearest."

"I don't think that was very nice," said the fair girl, edging away from him. "How would you like to have a dog named after you?"

"Why, that isn't anything," answered Tom, airily; "half the cats in the country are named after me."

They don't speak now.

When a man makes his will he is preparing for a dead give-away.

A coal fire is a grate comfort, but a nutmeg often suggests a greater.

A book with a loose leaf should be bound over to keep the piece.

"Are you feeling very ill?" asked the physician; "let me see your tongue, please." "It's no use doctor," replied the patient; "no tongue can tell how bad I feel."

"Will you please insert this obituary notice?" asked an old gentleman of an editor. "I made bold to ask it because the deceased had a great many friends about here who'd be glad to hear of his death."

A Philadelphia sneak thief stole a pound of butter from a boarding-house the other day, and the butter was so scared by the incident that a policeman who caught the villain says its hair actually stood on end.

Her gentle hint: Young lady (suddenly starting)—"My goodness!" Young gentleman (late stayer)—"What's the matter?" Young lady (glancing at the clock)—"Nothing; I thought I heard the milkman."

The members of the country debating society that decided last Winter that capital punishment should be abolished, must feel greatly discouraged when they reflect that nearly 100 hangings have taken place in this country since their decision.

At a trial of a criminal case the prisoner entered a plea of "not guilty," when one of the jurymen at once stood up. The judge informed him that he could not leave until the case was tried. "Tried," repeated the juror in astonishment. "Why, he acknowledges that he is not guilty."

"Mary," he asked, "why am I like butter?" He expected her to say it was because he was the genuine article, and he was completely crushed when she promptly replied: "Why I guess it's because the hotter it gets the softer you act."

Everything depends on punctuating a sentence properly. A "personal" advertisement appeared as follows: "If the gentleman who keeps the shoe store with a red head will return the umbrella of young lady with whalebone ribs and ivory handle, he will hear of something to his advantage."

A Texas clergyman was absorbed in thought a few Sundays ago, just before divine service began, when he was approached by the organist, who asked, referring to the opening hymn, "What shall I play?" "Lead trumps if you have a good hand," responded the absent-minded clergyman.

Very kind drug clerk to little girl—"Now, be sure you tell your papa to take this medicine according to the directions on the bottle; an over dose might effect his brain." Little girl—"Oh, I guess there's no danger of that, for I've heard mamma tell him lots of times he never had any brains."

"I love my wife," young Mr. Osculus, who has been married only six weeks, was saying; "I love my wife as no other man does." And the the rippling smile of approbation went around the company and died away in whispering giggles in shadowed window-seats and dimly lighted corners, and the the young man felt that he had failed to make himself understood just as he wished to be.

"Deacon," said the widow, as she gently stroked, in a feline manner, the Maltese tabby that evidently lay in her lap for that purpose, "don't you long for spring, with its balmy breath, its warm sunshine, and its gentle showers, which awakens nature, and puts life into everything that has laid cold and dead during the long winter, and brings everything up out of the cold, cold, ground into light and life?" "Well, hardly, widow," responded the old deacon, "you know I buried my second wife last fall."

An amusing incident occurred the other day. A gentleman who had been absent for a considerable time, and who during his absence, had raised a pretty luxuriant crop of whiskers, mustache, etc., visited a relative, whose child, an artless little girl of five or six years, he was very fond of. The little girl made no demonstration toward saluting him with a kiss as was usual. "Why, child," said the mother, "don't you give Uncle John a kiss?" "Why, ma," returned the little girl, with the most perfect simplicity, "I don't see any place."

The Constitutionalist.

Published every Friday by
W. L. FORCE and A. L. FORCE.

WHAT DID IT.

The recent election of a Democratic Senator in New York to succeed the late Webster Wagner, and from a district where the Republican majority has heretofore been overwhelmingly large, has created no little political consternation.

The Half-Breeds charge the Stalwarts with partisan disloyalty in that particular case and the Stalwarts hurl back the reproach on the Half-Breeds.

We think the real cause rests not there. It is of greater moment.

The present Legislature of New York was supposed to have Democratic majorities elect in both branches. Upon assembling organization was long delayed, because a few mercenary traders, enough for the purpose, wearing the badge of Tammany Hall, although elected as Democrats, refused to support the regular party nominees.

Finally a bargain was struck between certain Republican leaders and the Tammanyites, by virtue of which both branches were mainly officered in the mutual interest of the contracting parties, to the exclusion of regular Democrats fairly entitled to be chosen.

Political sharpers may imagine such a deal fine strategy, but the voting masses are generally honest, however the reverse some of their representatives may prove, and furthermore, they esteem honor and abhor duplicity.

It is stated that a very large number of Republicans in the Senatorial district named, disgusted with the corrupt alliance between their party chiefs and the henchmen of Tammany, openly cast ballots for and elected the Democratic Senator.

That did it.

There is an important lesson thereby taught.

Honest voters will rebel.

No party can afford to abandon the pathway of political rectitude.

DEATH OF JUDGE F. S. LATHROP.

Hon. Francis S. Lathrop died at his residence, at Madison, Morris county, on Friday night last. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

Judge Lathrop was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, in 1806. He went early in life to New York and engaged in the dry goods trade. In 1835 he was in business for himself in Maiden Lane, the firm name being Lusk, Lathrop & Co. Throughout his entire life he maintained a character for integrity. After leaving the mercantile profession he was President for many years of a New York insurance company, and he was at one time President of the Board of Underwriters.

About the year 1845 Judge Lathrop removed with his family to Madison, Morris county, and from that date he has been identified with the politics and the improvements of this State.

The public positions held by the Judge were of an unobtrusive, yet useful, character, and in all he distinguished himself by his energy and thorough business habits. His title was gained from his position as Lay Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals, a position in which he showed a clear comprehension of its duties. He was the originator of the Riparian law, the passage of which has given millions of dollars to the State. This was done through Mr. Cutler, ex-Congressman, employed by Mr. Lathrop, and the latter was appointed on the first Riparian Commission. He took the place of Charles E. Elmer, as Commissioner for the building of the new Lunatic Asylum at Morris Plain, and was at his death one of the Board of Managers. Before the Morris and Essex Railroad passed into the hands of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company, Judge Lathrop was a Director.

On the 14th of February, 1877, Judge Lathrop was appointed Receiver of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and last year he was elected President of the company. When he took the road the stock was quoted at $6 per share and its bonds at $15; the stock is now worth more than $90 in the market and the bonds $110. He improved the road in every respect and had plans for the future which meet with the approval of the exceptionably able directors and officers with whom he was associated.

His liberality and his enterprise have done much to make Madison one of the most beautiful of our interior towns. In every work of improvement he took an active share, and he probably exercised a large influence in the location of the Drew Seminary at that place, his wife being a relative of William Gibbons, whose estate was sold to Mr. Drew, the old Gibbons mansion being the main college building. As a friend to the poor, and an active promoter of all worthy objects he was a model.

His wife was Caroline Gilmore, of North Carolina, who survives him. They celebrated their golden wedding a year or two ago. There were three children in the family, one son and two daughters. The son died in 1869. Both daughters are living. One is the widow of Edward Hopkins, the other the wife of Joseph A. Dean, of New York. The Judge was a member of Grace church, Madison, one of the prettiest rural edifices in the State, and there the funeral took place on Tuesday.

The depots and trains of the New Jersey Central road were draped in mourning after his death.

Chancellor Runyon has appointed Mr. Henry S. Little, ex-Clerk of the Court of Chancery and President of the New York and Long Branch Railroad, Receiver of the Central in place of Judge Lathrop. It is stated in authoritive circles that Hon. Frederic A. Potts will succeed Judge Lathrop as President of the Central road.

The Supreme Court of the United States justly decides that Secretary Sherman had no right to make an arbitrary enactment, outside of a law of Congress, relative to duties on sugar. The Treasury will have to refund importers a large amount of money in consequence.

Eight pastors of the New Jersey Conference have died during the year since March last. Their names are George F. Brown, Samuel Vansant, Daniel McCurdy, Francis Morrell, Calvin E. Eastlack, John W. McDougall, Joseph C. Summerill and D. W. Bartine.

Stephen S. Condict, one of the directors of the Mechanics' Bank of Newark, has been arrested for aiding and abetting Cashier Baldwin.

The reason why General Hancock lost the States of Indiana and New York is now well understood; Open bribery in one and false friends in the other did the work.

THE QUEEN SHOT AT.

The "cranks" are abroad in England. One of them, named MacLean, fired at Queen Victoria on Thursday evening last, but missed her. Congratulations poured in upon the Queen Friday for her escape from a would-be assassin's bullet. She was in no way affected by the attempt upon her life. At the examination of the prisoner MacLean two letters written by him were read. In one he said that he was compelled to commit a crime against "bloated aristocracy" because of the insufficiency of relief offered him. In the other he said that he did not intend to hit the Queen. The evidence, however, was to the opposite effect. He was remanded for a week. The bullet which he fired has been found. It is said that MacLean's antecedents show that he is eccentric and addicted to drink. It has been learned that recently he has been an inmate of several lunatic asylums.

A TRUE POLITICIAN.

Every citizen of the United States ought to be a politician in the legitimate meaning of the term. Not a low bred, unprincipled schemer for mere partisan success, nor a corrupt and professed seeker after the spoils of office, but a man honestly allied to principles, anxious to understand and uphold the true science of government, and ambitious to enhance the public good.

To be a politician of that character is to fill an honorable and useful position in a country where sovereignty dwells with the people.

We want more such politicians.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Both branches of the Legislature did a considerable amount of business on Monday evening. Among the most important bills introduced was House No. 305, by Mr. Farrier, act to prevent members of the Legislature voting themselves into office. Provides that no member of the Senate or General Assembly shall, during their term of office, be appointed or elected by the Legislature in joint meeting, to any civil office.

No. 317, by Mr. Baker, act relating to legal holidays. Provides that Good Friday shall hereafter be observed as a legal holiday.

Mr. Bond offered a concurrent resolution setting forth that millions of dollars are annually spent by the United States for the improvement of lakes and rivers, much of which is spent fruitlessly upon the Kiskiminitas and other trout streams of Pennsylvania, and that a great water way extends along the entire western boundary of our State, upon the upper part of which not one cent is expended for improvement; therefore,

Resolved, (the Senate concurring) that the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of New Jersey be requested to use every effort to secure an appropriation for the improvement of the navigation of the Delaware river above Trenton, so as to furnish an outlet to the vast products of the northern and western portions of the State; and that a copy of these resolutions be engrossed and forwarded to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State. Adopted.

Mr. Robertson offered a preamble and resolutions, as follows:

WHEREAS, It has pleased an all-wise but inscrutable Providence to remove from our midst, by death, the Hon. Francis S. Lathrop, who for many years occupied a prominent and honorable position in the public affairs of our State; and whereas, by his constant and unfaltering devotion to duty, his integrity, his tireless energy and eminent and commanding abilities, as illustrated by the discharge of his arduous and manifold duties in the offices of Riparian Commissioner, Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals, and member of the Board of Directors of the State Lunatic Asylum, and as exhibited by him in every private trust confided to him, Mr. Lathrop conferred upon the people of the State at large benefits of the most substantial and lasting character; and whereas, it is at this time peculiarly fitting that the people of this State, through their representatives, should by some public act, testify to their sense of loss at the death of such a man, and give evidence of the high esteem in which they held the deceased, as well on account of the high moral standard by which his life was governed as for the rare wisdom and executive ability which characterized his management of the many difficult and burdensome public trusts given into his keeping by the State; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Hon. Francis S. Lathrop, the State of New Jersey has sustained a great public loss;

And be it resolved, That as a mark of respect to the deceased that the House when it do adjourn be to Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of allowing those members who desire so to do to attend the funeral of the Hon. Francis S. Lathrop;

And be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions suitably engrossed be forwarded to the family of the deceased. Adopted.

The resolutions were subsequently amended by Mr. Moore to the effect that when the House adjourn it be to Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Smith offered the following:

WHEREAS, The people of this State have heard with horror and indignation of the late attempt upon the life of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria; and whereas, it pleased an all-wise and overruling Providence to frustrate and bring to naught the dastardly attempt of the would-be assassin; now therefore be it

Resolved, (the Senate concurring) that the people of the State of New Jersey, through their representatives in Senate and General Assembly convened, congratulate Her Majesty, the Queen, upon her happy escape from the bullet of the miscreant who attempted her life, and rejoice with the people of Great Britain upon the preservation of their Sovereign.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions, duly engrossed and signed by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey, be transmitted to the Minister of the United States to England, to be by him communicated to the Government of Great Britain. Adopted.

The Governor sent to the Senate his veto of Senate bill, No. 21, entitled "An act authorizing the refunding of a State assessment"; also Senate No. 126, entitled "An act to provide for the indebtedness incurred in excess of appropriations made to any city board having control of the improvements and construction of streets and sewers." He claims it is a special bill.

In the Senate on Wednesday the bill authorizing the United Railroads to improve their property at Kill von Kull was passed. In the House the bill empowering City Councils and Boards of Aldermen to establish systems of sewerage and drainage passed and went to the Governor for signature. A bill establishing the boundary lines of Union and Essex Counties was passed. The bill known as the Water bill which provides for the general incorporation of companies to conduct waterworks, was considered. It is said by its opponents to be of such a nature as to allow a combination of capitalists to obtain control of all the water supply in any section of the State and create a monopoly of water in that section. A bill of a similar nature was before the Legislature last winter and was defeated. It is particularly opposed from the northern part of the State, where there are charges of a design on the part of capitalists to obtain control of the water supply of the Passaic water shed, and carry into effect a scheme not only to hold a monopoly of water for the cities of Paterson, Newark and Jersey City, but also to furnish water for New York City by extending mains across the North River. After a long debate amendments were added to the bill which virtually kill it, and it was ordered to a third reading. The vote on the amendments was 30 to 23.

The Constitutional Amendments have been agreed to by the Senate. They favor biennial sessions of the Legislature and fix the term of office of Senators and Governor at four years. The Court of Error and Appeals will consist of the Chancellor and four judges. The House has yet to pass upon the amendments.

At Albany on Wednesday last, Mr. Baker's nomination as Superintendent of State Prisons was confirmed, the three Tammany Senators voting with the Republicans. It is reported that Spinola (Tam.) will be appointed Warden of Sing Sing and that Kearney (Tam.) will control the supplies of that prison.

State Prison Keeper Laverty took the oath of office on Thursday, in the Executive Chamber, and was complimented by the Governor for his excellent management of the State Prison during the past year.

Mr Conkling has declined the appointment of Supreme Court Judge, which keeps him on the Presidential race-track to the displeasure of many Republicans.

A number of Congressmen from the Southern States, now suffering from the floods, met Saturday and decided to ask for an additional $400,000 to relieve the distress.

It is alleged that important evidence touching Guiteau's mental condition prior to July 2 has been discovered, and that General Butler will take charge of the case.

The Superintendent of Foreign Mails has been informed that the Chilians have control of the entire Peruvian coast.

Senator Mahone was at the Capitol on Wednesday for the third time this season.

The Grand Jury at Washington on Saturday last, found indictments for conspiracy against Brady and other Star-route men.

Rumor in Washington has it that a successor to Secretary Hunt will soon be nominated.

The destitution resulting from the Mississippi floods is increasing.

LOCAL ANNEX.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of Mr. E. P. Thorn, proprietor of the Mansion House, which will be found in this issue. The German Spring Water advertised is recommended by physicians and others as the best table water known. Its properties are beneficial to the system and is a delightful drink. Mr. Thorn's liquors are of the purest brands.

Messrs. Melbourn & Manning, builders, are progressing finely with their new building on La Grande avenue, near Franklin street. Since purchasing the land on which this dwelling is being erected several other plots of ground in the vicinity have been sold, and buildings will be erected on them shortly. Real Estate is booming in Plainfield and Melbourn & Manning are taking advantage of it.

Y. P. U.

A regular meeting of the "Young People's Union" of the M. E. Church was held in the church parlor last Monday evening. It was well attended and highly interesting, partaking of a business, literary and social character. After the business of the evening—reading of minutes, nomination and election of new members, etc.—had been concluded, the subject of the literary portion of the entertainment was announced as "George Eliot," when Miss Annie McGee read a very interesting essay upon the character and writings of this distinguished authoress, showing that while she was a woman endowed with peculiar gifts as a writer, she passed away from earth under a dark cloud that her best friends could not drive away. The close of her life contrasted strangely with the dying Christian.

Criticisms on the essay were invited by the President of the Association; and a few were given, being mostly favorable to the essayist. Criticisms on the character and writings of the authoress were then given. Some opined that a number of her books were admirable literary productions, but the conclusion was reached that the writings of an authoress could be no better than the authoress herself, any more than a stream could rise higher than its head waters; so it was decided that the young and inexperienced should not read her works.

A young man sitting at the rear of the assembly wanted to know "which was the sensible and which the absurd side of æstheticism?" This Wilde sentence was promptly smothered down and the speaker kindly invited to take the next 'os-car' for North Plainfield.

At the conclusion of the literary part of the exercises, nearly all present engaged in social converse, introducing and re-introducing one another and talking about —— a half an hour, and then departed for home feeling that the time had been well spent together.

EXECUTOR'S sale of Real Estate, to close the estate of the late G. W. Dunham, on Grove street, near Park Place, North Plainfield, Tuesday March 14th, at 4 o'clock, p. m. This property is known as the David Coon property, and is well worth the attention of those desiring valuable real estate.

THE death of a well-known former resident of Plainfield is reported, that of Mr. Mauriac, who once taught school here when Plainfield was but a small village. Many of our readers, who were then boys, will remember him well. Mr. Mauriac died at his home in Flushing, L. I., last week at the advanced age of 63 years.

THE funeral of Mr. Edward Verity, the unfortunate man who was killed on the railroad near Fanwood last week, was quite largely attended. Mr. Verity had many warm friends in this section, where he had long been a resident. He was an honest man and a good citizen. In his political faith he was a staunch Democrat. His sad and terrible death was a great shock to his fellow workmen whom he had left in the enjoyment of his usual health a short time before.

THERE was a narrow escape from serious injury in consequence of a runaway on Monday afternoon last. A passing coal train frightened a horse attached to a phaeton standing in front of Boice's coal office, belonging to Mr. T. M. Theirot, of North Plainfield. The animal turned short around, upset the carriage, and threw the occupants out, Mr. T. and coachman. Turning in towards the police station, the top of the carriage came in contact with a telegraph pole and stripped it from the running gears. The horse was captured before going far, and was uninjured. No serious results happened to the occupants from their tumble.

A Sad Case.

Mr. Wm. Steele, residing near Fanwood station, has had the misfortune to lose three of his children from malignant diphtheria within a week of each other. Another child is lying very low with the disease. The case is a sad one, and deserving of sympathy and assistance from the public, the family being in needy circumstances.

The "Rock House."

The well-known "Washington Rock" property, situated on top of the mountain back of this city, has again changed hands. The Messrs. Staats have exchanged the property for that of Mr. E. W. Runyon, on Second street, near Park avenue, this city, and other real estate. The exchange is advantageous to both parties. Mr. Charles W. Hodges was the party effecting the trade between the parties.

Sudden Death.

Our community were greatly shocked on Monday evening last to learn of the sudden death of a well-known and respected citizen, Mr. Nelson W. Gardner, who resided with his family on the cor. of Deer St. and Mercer Ave., North Plainfield. Mr. Gardner had been to New York the day in question, returning home during the afternoon. As he was sitting down to the supper table with his family, he complained of feeling unwell, and went up stairs to his room and to bed. Less than ten minutes after he was a corpse. Mr. Gardner was a son of the late Alvah Gardner. For years he has been engaged in the meat business in this city. He was a member of the First Baptist church and its Treasurer. He leaves a wife and one grown up daughter.

An Attempt at Burglary.

When the office of Thickstun's coal yard, on Madison avenue, was opened on Saturday morning, it was found that burglars had been at work inside of it between the time of closing the office Friday night and its opening the morning in question. From appearances the burglars had effected an entrance by breaking a sash of one of the windows. They had then turned their attention to the safe, the knob of which they broke off after fruitlessly endeavoring to open the door. An attempt was then made to drill holes in the top and sides of the safe. One of their drills was broken off in the hole on top of the same. A thorough ransacking of the room had taken place, drawers opened, &c. Nothing of value was taken. No clue as yet to the perpetrators of the crime.

Chess Tournament.

The score in the tournament of the Plainfield Chess Club, stands as follows:

	won	lost
Thos. Lloyd,	14	0

Charles Opdyke,	9	3
Henry Boice,	9	6
Geo. P. Suydam,	6	2
John H. Jackson,	8	8
Alex. Gilbert,	2	0
Gen'l Long,	4	9
Geo S. Hunt,	4	14
Chas. Dewey,	3	12
Chas. R. Thiers,	3	14

Our Opera House.

"According to the CONSTITUTIONALIST of that city Plainfield needs an opera house. Better pay your city debts, neighbor, before indulging in such a luxury."—Somerset Gazette.

Don't owe any city debt. If we did, that has nothing to do with a needed want of the city. It is not intended as a luxury.

"Plainfield wants an Opera House, and the CONSTITUTIONALIST says it would prove a paying enterprise. Yes, it would have to be a more modest structure than the elephant we have got here, which cost over a million, but won't to-day bring $75,000. We advise Plainfield capitalists to cut their coats according to their cloth."—New Brunswick Home News.

We don't want an "elephant." Neither is there any need of it. What we want is a comfortable Opera House of sufficient capacity to warrant first-class entertainments being held within it. Such a building would be a paying investment in the city. It is a needed want, and we predict will become a reality before many months roll around.

Vandalism.

One day last week, five persons, apparently intoxicated, were observed by a lady, roaming through the M. E. Church cemetery on Plainfield avenue. Subsequently it was found that these parties had deliberately and maliciously overturned nearly every headstone over the graves in the cemetery. Some of them were defaced and broken. One, in particular, that over the grave of Mr. Richard Carr, was broken into seven pieces, evidently done with a hammer, while that over the grave of Mr. John Clark's son, was taken up and thrown over the fence into an adjoining yard. As yet no clue to the names of the parties have been ascertained, but it is hoped, in the interest of justice and humanity, that the dastardly wretches who committed the vandalism may be apprehended and dealt with as the law directs.

Dog Poisoners.

We last week made mention of the death by poisoning, of three valuable hunting dogs out of Mr. Percy C. Ohl's "Willow Lake Kennel," near this city. Since then we are reminded of a case of dog-killing happening in Monmouth County in 1878 where the killer was made to pay dear for his pastime. (?) A gentleman there owned a valuable setter dog, who while "nosing around" on the farm of a dog-hater, was deliberately shot by him. Suit was at once commenced by the owner for $1,000 damages, $500 being value put on the dog and $500 for exemplary damages on the grounds that the killing was malicious, as the killer had publicly stated he would shoot all dogs found on his premises. The case came up before Judge Scudder. His Honor charged on the occasion that a dog which cost money was property as much as a cow or horse, and its value was its value for whatever useful purpose it was put to, besides what had been expended for its education, &c. The jury were out about thirty minutes and brought in a verdict for plaintiff for $300, besides costs of court. The whole sum amounted to $525, which the defendant had to pay. Mr. Ohl only desires the chance to prove what a Union County jury would do in the case, if he can find out the name of the scoundrel who poisoned his valuable animals.

Telephones for Plainfield.

The New Jersey Telephone & Telegraph Co., with headquarters in New York, propose to establish a "Telephone Exchange" in Plainfield similar to those already in operation in New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Hoboken, Elizabeth, Newark, Paterson, Orange, New Brunswick and other cities. It is proposed to make the Plainfield Exchange one of the best. A direct wire will be run from this city to Jersey City which will connect with New York, thus avoiding the delay of connecting through the Elizabeth Central office. In addition to this there will be another wire connecting with Elizabeth to enable Plainfield subscribers to talk with Newark, Paterson, Orange and all other New Jersey Exchanges.

There are two prices for the Telephone in Plainfield. A "circuit" wire with two or more stores or residences connected on it, is $3 per month. A "direct" wire with but one connection is $4 per month; the latter is by far the most desirable, as it insures privacy and is subject to less interruption. These prices are for distances within one mile of the "Central office," and entitle the subscriber to Plainfield connections only, and conversations can be carried on as frequently as desired without interruption.

Any Plainfield subscriber desiring to talk to a New York subscriber can do so by paying 25 cents for each conversation of five minutes duration, but the wire cannot be occupied more than 5 minutes where another subscriber is waiting. A proportionate toll is charged to other cities. The Central office will be open day and night and also on Sundays. Contracts are made for one year; the company run the wires, connect the telephone, and keep all in repair without additional charge.

It is expected that the Plainfield Exchange will be in operation in April. The company have now about 70 subscribers. *Many of our leading citizens are connect*ing their private houses. We also notice on the list the Potter Printing Press Works and Messrs Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., who will have connection with their New York offices. 7 of our leading physicians have subscribed; 4 drug stores, 2 livery stables, 2 hardware stores, 2 plumbing establishments, 2 coal and lumber firms, 1 meat store, a leading grocery store and a real estate office at the depot. The Fire Department is also to be connected on a "circuit" wire, so that an alarm is given simultaneously at each engine house. The office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., at the depot, will also be connected, so that telegrams for all parts of the world can be sent by telephone from our private houses or stores, without the annoyance of sending direct to the office by messenger. It is also expected that the Police station and Hospital will be connected.

Mr. Chas. Wann, General Agent of the Mutual District Messenger Co., 29 Murray and 33 Warren street, N. Y., and of Willow avenue, this city, has been the means of inducing the company to extend its system to Plainfield. He agreed to secure 100 subscribers, which was demanded for the outlay in putting the system in operation. When the list reached 60 it was decided to build the line.

Gen. C. H. Barney, the General Agent of the Telephone Co., was in Plainfield on Tuesday, with a view to picking out a route for the subscribers already obtained and for the purpose of selecting a building for the "Central office."

About 30 more subscribers are needed to complete the number required, and those who desire to subscribe or wish any further information on the subject, can communicate with Mr. Wann through the Plainfield Post Office. He has the subscription list; and his New York business interferes with his seeing many of our citizens who no doubt would be glad to subscribe.

Balance due State on County, $6,423 30, with accrued interest.

Mr. J. Simpson, from Aud. Com., re*ported as correct the following claims:* Lyon & Vail, $20; Ann Flynn, 5; Spencer Conway, 5; P. Langenbahn, 6; C. Thorp, 6; J. Ulrich, 7 50; W. Peterson, 12; John Flynn, 8. Warrants were ordered drawn for same. All Aye.

Mr. Ginna from Law & Ord. Com. reported back the bond of Street Commissioner Meeker, as being correct. Accepted.

Mr. Ginna presented the claim of Cross, Bergen and Noe, $460.59, cost of Court expenses incurred in litigation by a previous Council. He stated that it had been ordered paid by the last Council, but not returned to this body.

Mr. Lindsley thought the bill was irregular as presented. A new bill should be presented.

Mr. Ginna explained that at last meeting of Council this bill had been examined, found correct and ordered paid.

After considerable talk upon the subject, it was finally upon motion of Mr. Kaufman decided to defer action on the bill until the next meeting of the Council.

The Street Committee through Mr. R. Simpson, recommended that the petition be granted to lay a crosswalk across Liberty street at Seventh street.

Recommendation adopted.

Mr. Newhall offered a resolution that warrants Nos. 2374, 2360 and 2369 be paid.

Referred to Law & Ord. Com.

Mr. Kaufman offered a resolution that the sum of $5 be appropriated to the Treasurer, for stamps and incidental expenses. Adopted.

Mr. Ginna called up from the table the claims of Assessor Hubbard, $453.05, for assessing taxes of 1881; also claims of the late Collector, Clark, $220, for collecting such taxes, both of which were tabled by last Council. On motion Ref'd to Salaries Com.

Mr. Livingston moved that when Council adjourns, it do so to meet Monday evening, March 13th.

Mr. Depew moved to amend by making it the 20th. After some conversation on the subject the date of adjournment was fixed for the 13th, Messrs. Gardner, Depew, Kaufman, Newhall and Thompson voting nay.

Mr. Depew offered a resolution authorizing the further payments of outstanding warrants to the amount of $2 500. Adopted.

Mr. R. Simpson offered a resolution designating the Daily Bulletin as one of the official papers of the City. Adopted. Messrs. Gardner, Kaufman and Thompson in the negative.

The rules were suspended to allow Mr. Gardner, from Police Com., to report on certain bills. He reported correct the following claims: C. W. Dodd, $58.34; R. Randolph, $23.59.

Referred to Auditing Committee.

Mr. Depew offered a resolution authorizing the expenditure of $500 on the public streets, by the Street Committee. Adopted.

Mr. Ginna called up the matter of examining the late Collector's books, also the Township books, and for a time there was a lively interchange of opinion between himself, Mr. Depew, Mr. Lindsley and Mr. Kaufman. While the explanation of Mr. Depew regarding the matter was clear to himself, he failed to impress his views satisfactorily upon the minds of the others. He stated that Clerk Leonard had been appointed by the Finance Com. to make the necessary examinations *as called for in a previous reso*lution of Council, and called for the reading of that gentleman's report, presented at a previous meeting.

Mr. Lindsley claimed he had not been consulted in the matter of appointing Mr. Leonard by the rest of the Finance Committee, and desired to be relieved from serving further on such Com. Mr. Depew finally offered a resolution that the whole matter of examination be placed in hands of Law & Ord. Com. Which was lost 9 to 3. Mr. Depew then thought those who had voted nay should take the matter in hand. Mr. Lindsley was of the opinion that Mr. Depew should be appointed a Committee of one to investigate the Township books. That gentleman said he decidedly desired to resign his position as Councilman before he would do that.

Mr. Depew offered a resolution that a safe be purchased wherein to keep the City's books and documents at a cost of not over $55. Adopted.

Council then adjourned.

Mr. Louis A. Dunn, senior member of the firm of Dunn Bros., Central Railroad news agents, started Wednesday last for a three weeks' trip through southern Colorado, for the recuperation of his health, which has become impaired by too close attention to business.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Isaac W. Pangborn has sold his handsome residence in Washington Park to Mr. Bejamin Day.

It has not as yet been decided whether the Democrats will place in nomination a ticket for Township officers.

Mr. J. Newton Spencer has laid in a large stock of fresh garden seeds at his store on Somerset Street.

Candidates for the various township officers among the Republicans are numerous. Lively times may be looked for at the Primary.

Arnold & Van Nostrand, the Somerset street grocers, desire the attention of the public to their fine stock of new goods. Fresh garden and other seeds now ready.

The Republicans of North Plainfield Township have called a Primary meeting for Friday evening, March 10th, to nominate candidates for the various township officers.

Sheppard, Johnson & Godown's new steam saw and moulding mill is run to its utmost capacity to meet the wants required by constant orders for building by the firm.

Stephen Pangborn, and old and well-known resident of Pearl street, died on Tuesday afternoon last, after a long and painful illness. He leaves a widow and several children. Mr. Pangborn was highly respected by the community in which he lived.

At last there seems to be a feeling among the citizens to provide a long needed want—a new public school building. Many who opposed the building of a new school house a year or so since, are now in favor of the movement. At the Annual School meeting to be held at the School house on Tuesday evening, March 21st, it is hoped that a free discussion upon the subject will take place, and a unanimous vote be given to erect a suitable school building, to meet the wants of a growing community.

Mrs. S. J. Hickok, residing on Clark street, having leased her residence for a term of years, intends selling her furniture on Friday the 10th inst.

The Lecture on Bunyan's Pilgrims Progress, illustrated with oil paintings, will be delivered in Lyceum Hall on Monday evening March 13th inst, by the Rev. Adam Chambers. Proceeds for the benefit of the Westfield Athletic Club.

The record of vital statistics for the month of February in Westfield Township, show seven deaths, divided as follows:—five scarlet fever, one typhoid pneumonia and one of old age. There were also four births, two males and two females.

The proprietor of the Turf Exchange, John L. Roulston, has made decided improvements in the interior of the building the past week in scrubbing and cleaning the walls preparatory to painting and papering, which is to be done under the skillful hands of our artist Jerome McNeil.

On Tuesday evening last an unknown woman was run over and killed about 1 mile east of Westfield, by the passenger train that leaves Westfield at 7:12. She was walking on the track and seemed to pay no heed to the cars. Her body was picked up, it being terribly mangled, and taken to Elizabeth to Ford & Stiles Morgue, and has not yet been identified. The authorities could not find anything upon her to give any clue to who she was.

The Greenback Primary was held on Tuesday evening, March 7th, at the residence of Henry Dougherty on North Ave. Before proceeding to nominate a ticket the meeting was addressed by H. J. McFarland, of Elizabeth, and citizen Henckle. Charles F. W. Wittke was chosen chairman and John Burke, Secretary. After considerable discussion and exchange of opinions, the following is a portion of the ticket agreed upon to be supported at the ensuing town meeting which occurs on Tuesday the 14th inst: Town Clerk, L. M. Whitaker; Chosen Freeholder, S. S. Mapes; Collector, Wm. W. Connoly; Town Committee, John S. Irving, Oliver M. Pierson and Evert M. Pierson; Overseer of Poor, Matthias Clark. Support of poor, $1,800; repair of roads, $1,200.

On Sunday, Sept. 4th, 1881, our hotel keeper, A. W. Moffett, hired a horse and buggy to a man named John Stewart to go to Springfield, about 5 miles distant. He was to return by noon of that day. Mr. Moffett waited until six o'clock in the evening before he made up his mind that the horse was stolen. He placed the case in the hands of officer Marsh and ex-Chief Keron, who succeeded in tracing Stewart to Newark and Orange, where he had sold the whole establishment and left. It was recovered and returned to Mr. Moffett. Since that time the officers have kept a sharp lookout for him. Having traced him to his wanderings around the country, he was finally captured on Monday last by officers Keron and Marsh, at Loganville, Morris county, and brought to the Union county jail. He was brought before the Court on Wednesday last and charged on an indictment found at the October term, 1881, for grand larceny of the horse, buggy and harness. Stewart plead guilty and was immediately sentenced to State Prison for three years.

James W. Cox purchased last week of Mrs. Harriet Downer, her house and lot on Central avenue. Mr. Cox intends moving into the same on or before April 1st.

Robert French is making a decided improvement in formerly the Savings Bank building, corner of North avenue and Elm street, by putting in a new front, painting the building, and erecting a close picket fence around the same.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wesp, aged 79 years, widow of Henry Wesp, died on Friday last from old age. Her funeral occurred on Sunday March 5th inst. The burial services were delivered by the Rev. Fred E. Schlieder of the Lutheran church of Plainfield, N. J.

The careless use of fire-arms shows the necessity of the passage of the law now before our State Legislature in relation to the carrying of concealed weapons. On Friday evening last while one of our citizens was walking along North avenue, some person across on Broad street discharged a revolver, the bullet from which passed very close to the party on North avenue and imbedded itself in the side of the dwelling near him. If the careless use of fire-arms is not stopped, we no doubt will have to record some serious accident sooner or later.

There is quite an excitement over the election for an overseer of road district, No. 8, which includes the main portion of our town. Several candidates have already announced themselves in the field. This is one of the most important offices in our township, there being a large amount of money expended on roads and sidewalks. Each candidate has his friends, who are working hard for their election. The election occurs on Thursday, March 16th. Every voter on the road district ought to turn out to the meeting, as the persons present have the right to vote to be raised by tax such sums as they may deem necessary for repair of sidewalks.

On Friday evening last at about 10 o'clock Mr. Isaac Ammerman, who resides on Central avenue, adjoining John S. Irving's lumber and coal office, was awakened by the noise made by one of the window blinds on the side of his house towards the coal office. Upon going to the window to shut and fasten the blind, it being a very bright moonlight night, he discovered four or five persons standing by one of the windows of the coal office. He raised the window and shouted at them, asking them what they were doing there, when they immediately left, one of the number jumping out of the window, which they had forced open by breaking the fastening. Mr. Ammerman came down stairs and went and aroused his adjoining neighbor, Mr Townly, and they immediately went to the office and discovered that it had been entered and an overcoat stolen. They also discovered that the thieves had removed all the books and papers from the top of the safe and no doubt when discovered, were preparing to drill into the same. The next morning, Saturday, the men on going to work in Mr. Irving's sash and blind factory, across the street from the coal office, found that the building had been entered through the blacksmith shop, and that the thieves had taken several files, two braces and bits and several augers and a cold chisel. The files taken from blacksmith shop were found in the coal office the next morning, as also were the brace and bits and one auger along the railroad track near the depot. It was probably the same gang who went from here to Plainfield the same night and attempted to break into one of the coal yard safes there, but broke their drill in the at*tempt.*

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 14, 1880.

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

MRS. JULIA G. CUSHING.

EASILY PROVEN.—It is easily proven that malarial fevers, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgic ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm always.

Messrs. Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego, N. J.—About a year since a gentleman from [illegible], Pa., called my attention to your Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure, (himself having been cured by it) that I was induced to purchase a stock. I must say that the Balm has met my best expectations, having already effected a number of cures in this locality. I am using it with beneficial effects. Respectfully, P. F. HYATT, M. D., Bordentown, N. J. Oct. 26, 1880.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

A Perfect Corset Secured at Last!

It is a well-known fact that a large proportion of the ills of female life are directly attributed to the unyielding pressure of the Corset about the waist of the wearer. This evil has been entirely overcome in this corset, by the introduction of ELASTIC SECTIONS, composed of A SERIES OF FINE COILED WIRE SPRINGS. These springs are warranted to retain their perfect elasticity until the corset is worn out; and, unlike rubber, will not heat the person or decay with age. This corset yields readily to every respiration, and is equally comfortable in any position assumed by the wearer.—Will fit, perfectly, a greater variety of forms than any other.

BALL'S HEALTH PRESERVING CORSET. By a novel arrangement of fine coiled springs, which yield readily to every movement of the wearer, the most PERFECT FITTING and comfortable corset ever made is secured. Is Approved by the Best Physicians. Give it a trial and you will wear no other. For sale

THE CULTIVATION OF CARP.

At the meeting of the Michigan Sportsmen's Association held last month the Secretary read the following paper by Fish Commissioner Miller, of Richland Mich., on the introduction of European carp into American waters, and especially those of Michigan, by the U. S. Fish Commission:

In the United States report on fish and fishing for the year 1872-3, Prof. Baird first called the attention of the public toward the introduction of the European carp. "In the fact of the great advantage this fish possesses over most of our American species, of its being a vegetable feeder, and adapted to shallow waters, where other fish cannot live."

He also says in regard to the edible qualities of this fish, "It is a great mistake to compare the flesh with our ordinary fish—such as suckers, chub and the like—their flesh being firm, flaky, and in some varieties almost equal to the European trout." His report for 1874-5 briefly states, "Another fish to which it is proposed to devote the efforts of the commission is the European carp, a species eminently calculated for the warmer waters of the country, especially the mill dams and sluggish rivers and ditches of the South. This fish has been domesticated for thousands of years, and it is one of the species which furnishes the principal food of the Chinese, living on vegetable matter, instead of animal, and it can be multiplied at very little expense in very limited waters."

The professor in his report for 1876-7, after speaking of the introduction of this fish as having been a favorite object for years with the commission, announces the gratifying fact of the arrival at New York, May 26th, 1877, of 345 carp of three varieties in charge of Dr. Rudolf Hessel, who was sent by Prof. Baird expressly for them, he having had great experience in carp raising in Germany, and who reports these to be of the choicest varieties known in Europe. As the national carp ponds at Washington are not yet constructed, these fish were temporarily accommodated with a home at Druid Hill, Baltimore, by the fish commissioners of Maryland. In the meantime, upon application of Prof. Baird, Congress gave authority for the use of the ponds at Washington monument lot, in Washington City, and made an appropriation of $5,000 for the construction of ponds adapted to the purpose of carp culture, by Col. Casey, superintendent of the public grounds, under the direction of Dr. Hessel, whom large experience in the old country admirably qualified for the work.

These ponds were completed in the Spring of 1876, and a large portion of the fish were brought on to Washington and placed in their new homes—the several varieties placed in separate ponds—that each might remain true to name. From the product of these fish a small distribution was made in 1879, Michigan receiving twenty pairs on the 5th day of November, 1879. These were from the hatch of the preceding Spring, from one to two inches in length. They were placed in a pond of less than a quarter of a acre in size at the Pokagon Hatchery, had no extraordinary care or feed, but at the age of thirteen months some of them measured 17 inches in length, 13 in girth, and weighed 3½ pounds, and in the Fall of 1881, when they were removed from Pokagon at less than 30 months of age, weighed 7½ pounds. Of course our commission were anxious to secure an additional supply of a species which promised so well, and accordingly made early application at Washington. We were consequently exceedingly disappointed upon the receipt of intelligence from Prof. Baird early in 1881, that in consequence of a gorge of ice in the Potomac below Washington, the entire ponds, with the surrounding grounds were six feet under water. It was here that the peculiar habit of the species came to the rescue. The carp were gathered together in their kittles (so called) at the bottom of the ponds, and so were preserved entire. The hatch of the Spring of 1881, at Washington, was very large, and when the ponds were drawn in the Fall we were notified that we could have 1,000 if we would come for them. At this time Mr. Portman, our superintendent, and in fact all of our working force, were exceedingly busy in securing the spawn of the brook trout and whitefish. Accordingly a member of the board was detailed for the carp, 1,200 were secured, and the greater part planted in small lakes, which were free from predatory fish, in different parts of the State. Arrangements were made by Mr. Miller at Washington for a further shipment by express of 2,000, which arrived at Kalamazoo, December 1st, in perfect condition, and were placed in the vacant ponds at Pokagon for distribution in the Spring, where suitable ponds, free from destructive fish, are found.

Prof. Baird has also sent this Fall to Michigan in charge of Frank N. Clark, Esq., of Northville, Wayne county, an additional 3,000 for distribution, making a total of 6,200 received in the Fall of 1881, for the plant of the State.

The paper elicited an interesting discussion as to the relative value of fish as food. President Holmes inquired if any one present knew anything about the carp.

Mr. Clark said he did not breed carp but had some in his ponds. He had seen some in Washington weighing as high as sixteen pounds, and Prof. Baird pronounces them a very fine flavored fish. The fish grew in a sluggish pond formed of water from the Potomac, which was sometimes as warm as 90 degrees, and they were finer eating than any fish in the Potomac. The carp at Northville weighed ¾ pound when 16 months old, which he considered a slow growth, and attributed it to the cool water, which was seldom warmer than 50 degrees, and believed that in water at 80 and 85 degrees they would grow rapidly. President Holmes said he made the inquiry because considerable was being said in favor of the European carp, and we do not want our waters occupied with anything that is not an improvement over what we have that will live in the same waters. Mr. Miller's testimony was general. Inasmuch as the Potomac contained the black bass, he considered Prof. Baird's praise of the carp very high commendation.

Belief is not in our power, but truthfulness is.

WOMEN'S SILK CULTURE EXHIBIT.

We clip from the Phila. Public Ledger a description of the award of the Premiums offered through the Women's Silk Culture Association, for the four best specimen pounds of cocoons raised in the States of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey. The same offer is renewed for the present year, and can be competed for by any of our readers in the States mentioned, who will raise one pound of cocoons and send it to the Association. Instructions for raising silk worms, and the rules governing the competition for the premiums can be had, free of charge by addressing the Women's Silk Culture Association, Philadelphia.

"The fair of the Women's Silk Culture Association, St. George's Hall, nightly attracts large and interested audiences. The hall is artistically decorated with flags and embellished with growing plants, while an orchestra in the gallery at the southern end at times enlivens the scene with choice musical selections. Mrs. John Lucas, the President of the Association, and the other lady managers are quite enraptured with the success thus far, and which promises to continue until the close.

Last night was called 'Strawbridge & Clothier's night,' from the fact that the four prizes of $200, $150, $100 and $50, aggregating $500, were to be awarded for the four best specimen pounds of cocoons exhibited.

Mr. Clarkson Clothier, who read off the report of the judges awarding the premiums, gave an explanation of why his firm had offered them, as follows:

Dealing largely in silk goods of all kinds, it is but natural that we should take a great interest in any movement of this kind. We recognize it as a germ of a great national industry, the development of which is not only a matter of financial and mercantile interest, but one of patriotism, as well. We also desire to acknowledge the courage, ability and enterprise of the ladies of this Association. Their self-appointed work is a great one, and their efforts deserve that success which they will undoubtedly attain. Our land is preeminently adapted to the successful manufacture of silk; and to develop this interest, intelligent and systematic efforts, such as these ladies are making, are essential. It is an industry that will give employment to thousands of workers in the preliminary stage as well as in the weaving of the fabric. It will build factories, erect looms, and, like all new industries, gather to itself towns and villages of active operatives; thus, in many ways, largely contributing to our national wealth.

Especially important is this industry in the fact that it opens a congenial and profitable field for women at home, in the propagation and rearing of the worms, the preparation of the cocoons and the reeling of the fibre; and it thus supplies, to a marked extent, a want that has long been felt in the community. Interest them in it by making it worth their time and attention by giving to them a market and a paying price for all the cocoons they may produce, and the plan becomes a great public benefactor, pouring wages if not wealth into the hands of an army of workers.

But as yet the industry in this stage and the advanced one of the weaving, is comparatively in its infancy, and needs time and attention to grow to its destined importance. I may say we stand to-night by the cradle of an infant giant, who will, in the coming years stand head and shoulders with the other giant industries of this wonderful land.

I desire to announce that we duplicate this offer of $500 for premiums for 1883, the contest to be subject to such rules as may be adopted by the Women's Silk Culture Association.

There were 26 contestants for the Stawbridge & Clothier premiums, which were awarded as follows:

1st premium, $200, to Mrs. Rebecca Taylor, Kennett Square, Chester Co., Pa., for best specimen pound of cocoons which averaged 157 to the quarter pound, and yielded 1¼ ounces of silk, and 2¾ ounces waste. Mrs. Taylor is the mother of the late Bayard Taylor, the poet and statesman, and is over 82 years of age. It was stated that she is a sufferer from paralysis, or she would have exhibited her interest in the work of the Association by being present last night.

Second premium, $150, to Mrs. H. M. Button, 330 Mickle street, Camden, N. J., her cocoons averaging 198 to the quarter pound, and yielding 1 7-32 ounces silk, and 2 25-32 ounces waste.

Third premium, $100, to Charles Krauss, Egg Harbor city, N. J., for cocoons averaging 157 to the quarter pound, and yielding 1 1-16 of silk, and 2 15-16 ounces waste.

Fourth premium, $50, to Miss Lillie Titus, Camden, N. J., for cocoons averaging 205 to the quarter pound, and yielding 1¼ oz. silk, and 2¾ oz. waste.

ASSOCIATION AWARDS.

Fifth premium, $25, to Mrs. Joseph Lennig, Bridesburg, Pa., for cocoons averaging 225 to the quarter pound, and yielding 1 3-16 oz. silk, and 2 13-16 oz. waste.

Sixth premium, $15, to Miss Hannah Taylor, Cambridge, Burlington county, N. J., for cocoons weighing 166 to the quarter pound, and yielding 1 oz. silk, and 3 oz. waste.

Seventh premium, $10, to Mrs. J. B. Kemmerer, Bethlehem, Pa., for 200 cocoons, yielding 1¼ oz. silk, and 2¾ oz. waste.

WISE WORDS

Borrowing money is a bad habit; and borrowing trouble is no better.

As fire is discovered by its own light, so is virtue by its own excellence.

The only sin which we never forgive in each other, is difference of opinion.

To correct an evil which already exists is not as wise as to foresee and prevent it.

We understand death for the first time when he puts his hand upon one we love.

If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.

No man can be brave who considers pain to be the greatest evil of life, nor temperate who considers pleasure to be the highest good.

Pleasure is not always found where it is sought. Our brightest blazes of gladness are commonly kindled by unexpected sparks.

The importation of potatoes from Great Britain and Germany has been steadily increasing of late until the United States are now receiving from 2,000 to 3,000 tons per week. Potatoes cost in Liverpool from $15 to $20 a ton, and are sold here at 90 cents or $1 a bushel, leaving a profit of about $5 a ton. Cabbages are also largely imported from Germany this winter. This has never been done before in the history of the country.

NEW JERSEY STATE PRISON.

From the Annual Keeper's Report of the New Jersey State Prison, up to Nov. 1, 1881, made to Governor Ludlow by Keeper Laverty, he reports:

On November 1, 1880, there were 836 convicts confined in this institution. During the year there have been 438 convicts received; 461 have been discharged, and there are 803 confined here at this date.

The maximum number of convicts, namely, 844, confined in this institution during the last year was reached on November 17, 1880, and the minimum on September 29, 1881, when only 763 convicts were confined here.

Last year the daily average was 830, while this year it is only 794, an average decrease of 36.

It has cost the State for the maintenance of the convicts per capita, 9 cents and 1 mill per day; per annum $33.25; cost of maintenance, including clothing, per day, 17 cents and 7 mills; per annum $64.60. The total cost to the State for each convict per capita, per day, was 41 cents and 3 mills, or $150.62 per annum. This includes officers' salaries, necessary repairs and amounts paid to convicts when discharged.

The increase for the maintenance of the convicts over last year (3 mills per day) is accounted for by the fact that we are now compelled to pay higher prices for all articles of subsistence, clothing and other material used in the conduct of this institution.

The earnings per capita during the year were $63.86, against $82.62 of the year preceding. The reasons for this falling off is accredited to the fact that the last Legislature passed an act in the interests of the mechanics of the State, to place some restriction upon the industries carried on in the institution, so that convict labor might not enter into competition therewith.

Twenty-three deaths have occurred in the prison from various diseases the past year, principally from consumption. The general health of the prisoners at the present time is very good.

Hamlet. Prince of Denmark.

The illustrious bard of Avon is being honored with still another edition of his works, and this time it is one that will delight not only the rich, who are pleased to adorn their libraries with beautiful books, but also the millions of book-buyers, to whom the possession of a handsome edition of Shakespeare has heretofore been impossible, on account of the high cost. We have received from The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company a charming little volume containing "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark;" 148 pages, beautiful leaded type, excellent paper, and tasteful cloth binding, which they sell for only 20 cents! They are issuing his complete dramatic works in 10 handy "Elzevir" volumes, uniform with this, for the amazingly low price of 25 cents per volume, and will also publish a "Red-Line Elzevir" edition, gilt edges, richly ornamented in black and gold, in ten volumes, all for $4.50. This company announces a large number of standard and exceedingly valuable publications, excellent in quality in every way, at prices such as the world has never before seen. Specimen pages and catalogues will be sent, upon application by postal card to the Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 162 William Street, New York City.

That Child Whipping Case.

The Mount Holly Herald is guilty of an apology which is one with a vengeance. It is as follows:

"A man came to Mount Holly on Saturday breathing threatenings and slaughter on the newspapers. He was of medium height, wore a crisp whisker around his face and had a fierce eye. It was David C. Wall and he wanted satisfaction for being slandered. He denied putting pork pickle on the girl or trying to steal $20 from her; and said the story about the letter was a lie. We will do him justice to say that the report about the pork pickle being put on the girl's back has not been substantiated, although the girl herself is reported as having said so. But since Mr. Wall claims to be such a humane man perhaps he will explain what the feeling was that actuated him to whip his own mother with a carriage whip some time since, or caused him to ram a fork in the eye of one of his bulls because something went wrong. Several years ago Wall made a savage attack on John W. Eldridge, of New Egypt, between Head-of-Wood and Manchester, where he was lying in wait for him, because Eldridge had been subpoenaed to Mount Holly to testify in a certain case in reference to Wall's reputation for truth and veracity. Wall has spirited the girl away in order that she may not be used to testify against him, but her father whose name is Layton, living at Windsor in this State, was at Mount Holly on Saturday armed with a sword-cane and revolver and told the story of the girl's wrongs to an eager crowd of listeners."—Ex.

The State Lunatic Asylum Near Trenton.

According to the report of Dr. John W. Ward, Superintendent of the State Lunatic Asylum, near Trenton, presented to the Legislature, last week, the following statistics are ascertainable:

The number of patients in the asylum at the date of the report was 577, which was credited as follows: Atlantic, 12; Bergen, 4; Burlington, 37; Camden, 9; Cape May, 9; Cumberland, 51; Essex, 14; Gloucester, 34; Hudson, 18; Hunterdon, 40; Mercer, 113; Middlesex, 75; Monmouth, 70; Morris, 2; Ocean 14; Passaic, 1; Salem, 21; Somerset 40; Union, 9; Warren 2; from other States, 4.

There were 36 convict patients in the institution, 32 males, and four females.

The garden and farm is managed with great care, and economy, and the value of their products are estimated at $8,798.98. The expenses being $5,447.69, leaving a clear profit of $3,351.29. There were 27,597 gallons of milk secured from the dairy, which at 17 cents per gallon was valued at $4,691.49. The expenses paid, left a balance of $474.02. The grist mill netted a profit of $18.26. A large number of daily and weekly newspapers, books, pictures, were donated to the institution, which is now in a better condition, both financially and as to management, than ever before.

IN LUCK.

He sat on a window sill in the post office and jingled forty cents in change; and when another boy asked him if he was going out to look for presents he replied:

"No, I hain't. I'm in luck this year."

"How?"

"Well, my sister is down with the measles, and she can't expect anything but medicine. Ben run away two weeks ago, and I won't have to get him anything. Ma pulled my hair yesterday and she knows she's gone up for any present."

"But there's your father?"

"Oh, yes. I expected I was stuck on the old man, and was kinder looking around for a nice pipe, but this morning he gave me one on the ear, and that settled his goose in a second. These 'ere forty cents are going to be used to buy a good boy a heap of peanuts, taffy, chestnuts and candy, and the good boy is jist my size and age."

Impatience dries the blood sooner than age or sorrow.

SEC. 6. In case of riot or other sudden emergency, the Mayor, or in his absence any member of the Board of Police, may call into active service with full police powers, such number of extra special policemen as they may deem necessary to suppress such riot or meet such emergency; but the services of such extra policemen shall cease with the occasion which called them into service.

SEC. 7. The Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police Force," approved December 18, 1877, is hereby repealed, but this shall not be construed to revive any ordinance which was repealed by the ordinance hereby repealed.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council and ordered to a third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 27, 1882.

AN ORDINANCE

To provide for the Licensing and Regulation of Peddlers, Hawkers, Cartmen, Hack, Omnibus, Stage and Truck Owners and Drivers.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That licenses may be granted by the Common Council to such and so many persons of good moral character and otherwise qualified according to the provisions of this ordinance as the Common Council shall from time to time think proper, to carry on, wholly or in part, within the limits of the city, the business of peddler, hawker or cartman, to drive or keep for hire a hack, omnibus, stage, truck or other vehicle for the transportation of passengers, baggage or merchandise, according to the provisions of this ordinance; and the city clerk shall keep a detailed record of all licenses so granted.

SEC. 2. That every application for any such license shall be in writing, signed by the applicant, stating the place of residence and the purpose for which such license is asked.

SEC. 3. That no person shall, as owner, or in any manner carry on, as owner or as agent for another, within the limits of said city, the business of peddler or hawker without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance, provided that no [illegible] shall prevent farmers and gardeners from selling the produce of the farms owned or occupied by them, or milkmen and butchers from carrying on their business in said city without a license.

SEC. 4. That no person shall drive, keep or use for hire or wages, or cause to be driven, kept or used for hire or wages, any cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for the transportation of passengers, baggage, or merchandise of any kind, wholly or in part, within the limits of said city, without being first licensed therefor, according to the provisions of this ordinance (provided that none of the requirements contained in this section, shall apply to owners or drivers of any livery stable vehicles, other than those vehicles kept by them for use of passengers solicited at the railway stations or elsewhere within the city limits.) One license and only one shall be required for each cart, truck, hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle; and no person shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this section for driving a cart, truck, omnibus, stage, or other vehicle, for or in respect of which a license has been obtained by its owner.

SEC. 5. That each license granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall expire on the first day of March next following the granting of the same, and shall state the object for which it is given, the name of the person licensed, the number of the license, and the date of the expiration, and shall be signed by the Mayor and attested by the City Clerk.

SEC. 6. That every person so licensed shall, at the time of receiving such license, pay therefor to the City Clerk, to be by him paid to the City Treasurer for the use of said city, the sum of five dollars for each license for one year, or unexpired portion thereof, and in addition thereto the clerk's fee of fifty cents for issuing such license; provided, however, that in cases where licenses were granted in 1882 under the ordinance in force in that year, after that ordinance was abrogated by the repeal of the law upon which the same was founded, the City Clerk may issue a license without exacting any fee therefor under this ordinance to any person who paid a license fee to the City Clerk under the said former ordinance, said license or licenses so issued to be for one year, or the unexpired portion thereof after the passage of this ordinance.

SEC. 7. That no person licensed under this ordinance, and no driver or other person in the employ of any such person shall stand upon any sidewalk or in any street or other public place in said city, for the purpose of soliciting custom, or for any other purpose, in a way to obstruct travel or cause damage or annoyance to the owners or occupants of premises fronting on the public thoroughfares, or to any other person or persons; and any person believing himself aggrieved by a violation of this section may make complaint thereof before the City Judge, and the offender shall, upon conviction of such violation, be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence.

SEC. 8. That every person so licensed shall, as soon as licensed, cause the number of his license to be permanently and conspicuously painted or pasted upon the outside of both sides of each vehicle for which such license shall have been granted, and every person so licensed, and the driver of every such vehicle, shall wear in a conspicuous place upon his person while engaged in the business for which he is licensed, so as to be easily seen, a badge with the corresponding number thereon, and shall also keep fastened in a conspicuous place in the inside of his hack, stage, omnibus or other vehicle in such position that the same can be easily read, a card with the rates of fare or charges specified in the tenth section of this ordinance, written or printed thereon, and every person who shall violate this section of the ordinance shall on conviction thereof be punished by fine not exceeding two dollars for each offence.

SEC. 9. That every license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge for satisfactory cause, other than offenses elsewhere specially provided for in this ordinance; and every person who shall, during the suspension or revocation of his license, carry on his particular line of business, shall on conviction thereof be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence.

SEC. 10. That any person licensed under this ordinance to keep for hire or wages any hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers, may charge therefor the following rates, but no more, that is to say: for the carriage of any passenger or passengers from any point within to any point within that part of the city included within the following boundaries, that is to say, beginning at a point where Farragut avenue intersects Green Brook, and thence following the line of Farragut avenue to Front street; thence, in the same course, in a direct line, to Hillside avenue; thence, through Hillside avenue to Prospect avenue; thence, in a direct line, to the point of intersection of Park avenue by the Randolph road; thence, through Randolph road to Plainfield avenue; thence, in a straight line, to the intersection of Spooner avenue and Eighth street; thence, through Eighth street, to Grant avenue; thence, through Grant avenue, to the northwesterly city line; thence, following the northwesterly city line, to Farragut avenue, the place of beginning, twenty-five cents for one passenger carried and fifteen cents for each additional passenger carried from the same point to the same point at the same time, and for the carriage of any passenger from any point within to any point without the aforesaid boundaries, fifty cents for one passenger and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger; provided, however, that after eleven o'clock at night and until five o'clock in the morning the charges may be double the said rates, and whenever any such hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle shall be engaged by the hour the person licensed to use the hire or wages such hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle may charge one dollar for the first hour and seventy-five cents for each additional hour.

SEC. 11. That the first applicant to any licensed hackman shall be entitled to conveyance to any point that the said applicant may desire to reach within the city limits; and any refusal on the part of the owner or driver of such licensed vehicle to comply with the request shall render liable said owner or driver to a fine of two dollars for the first offense, and five dollars for a second offense, and the revoking of the license for a third offense.

SEC. 12. That every person licensed as aforesaid and the driver of every hack, omnibus, stage or other vehicle for the carriage of passengers who shall demand for any service mentioned in section ten more than the rates fixed therein shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five dollars for the first offense and by a fine not exceeding five dollars and by a revocation of the license which may have been issued for any offense subsequent to the first.

SEC. 13. That the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to license and regulate street venders of meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, patent medicines or other articles," approved June 17, 1870, and the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license cartmen, expressmen and hackmen," approved July 22, 1873, and the amendment thereto, approved December 30, 1879, be and the same are hereby repealed.

SEC. 14. All ordinances and parts of ordinances which were repealed or abrogated by any ordinance hereby repealed shall continue to be so repealed and shall be deemed abrogated.

POETRY.

For The Constitutionalist.

FORCIBLE COLLOQUY.

I fain would climb Parnassus's height
 And court the Muses aid,
To weave in verse my thoughts aright,
 A forcible trade.

Much force is used by all mankind
 In most the ways of life,
There's force of matter, will and mind,
 That oft prevails in strife.

Where force of will, mind and skill,
 Are shown to vantage best;
Is in the movement of the quill
 Of T' Constitutionalist.

So paradoxical is a name
 We often find it true;
A Mr. White, from Africa came
 And Mr. Black, of us.

There's the suggestive name of Force,
 From whom we much expect,
But I'll forbear comment, of course,
 To personal, the text.

Bill boards stare us in the face,
 Each corner of our city;
These were put up and raised, per force;
 At least, so runs my ditty.

CRANK.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

IN THE MABERLY MINE.

"John Wallace!" call the mine superintendent through the speaking pipe, "some visitors are coming down in the cage. You will be kind enough to show them through the tunnels."

"Visitors!" I repeated to myself. "I must be lackey, too, as well as drudge. Well, so be it. It is only another straw to the load I am carrying. If it breaks my back, so much the better. I shall be done with it."

The world has little respect for those whose code of honor leads them aside from the broad highway of common place.

When, at my father's death, finding his estate heavily incumbered, I had deemed it my duty to place it at the disposal of his creditors, I found myself, socially speaking, in iced water. Those who had known me in my happier days knew me no longer, and houses where I had once been a welcome guest were now as impenetrable as their owners' ignorance of my existence.

I could have borne all this well enough had only one home remained open to me—the house of Eve Guion.

In the days when her wealthy father looked with favor upon the intercourse of his daughter with the landlord's son, I had some wild hopes about her.

She was a beautiful girl—young, and as I had believed, sympathetic. I had believed, too, that I had seen glimpses of something in her face that proved my hopes not to be so wild as they seemed.

But that, too, was over. A polite note from her father informed me that his daughter could henceforth dispense with my attentions; and, as I received no intimation to the contrary from Eve herself, I concluded she, too, had declared my ostracism. After this I lost hope, and made no attempt to better my worldly condition.

I left the village, and after two years of wandering, often in destitution, I stranded myself on the Maberly coal mine as gang-master in the pits.

Our mine had a doubtful reputation, having been the scene of several distressing accidents. Consequently we were rarely troubled by visitors from the upper earth.

This was a godsend to me. I could manage to endure the life I was leading only on condition of not being too frequently reminded of the life from which I had been exiled. The idea, of encountering persons whom I had known in better times, was a constant terror to me.

It may be imagined, therefore, with what feelings I awaited the descent of the visitors who had been signaled from above.

As the cage stopped upon the level where I stood with my lamp in my hand and the passengers alighted, I recognized them with feelings of downright misery. I saw before me the two persons whom of all humanity I had least wished to meet—Eve Guion and her father.

Had they heard of my whereabouts and come to witness my degradation? No. As cold and worldly as I believed Eve to be, I could not imagine her capable of such mean malice.

Who could identify the name of gang-master John Wallace Grover, ci-devant gentleman? Besides, I remembered that Mr. Guion was a shareholder in the Maberly mine. It was merely a sight-seeing tour, after all.

Two years of hardship and the growth of a heavy beard had changed my appearance so that I was sure that the father nor daughter could possibly recognize me.

With strict controle over myself, I could show them through the mine and dismiss them none the wiser. Now that they had come, too, I was glad of the opportunity of seeing the women I had loved—still loved—once more.

I stepped confidently forward, therefore, and introduced myself as the guide, John Wallace. Eve looked at me closely, but, I thought, only with an expression of curiosity as to the looks of a man whose life was spent underground.

My head swam and my heart beat thick and loud as I stood before her—more beautiful, because more serious and womanly that when we had been intimate two years before.

I noticed that her face was a little paler and that there was look of sadness in it that was new to me.

The season I had spent in wretchedness, then, had not been wholly free from sorrow for her. Not, of course, on my account; such a notion never entered my head.

"Have you been here many years?" she asked, as we were preparing to descend into the galleries.

"Years enough, madam, to know the mine thoroughly," I answered evasively.

Mr. Guion looked at me inquiringly.

"You speak like a man of education, my good fellow," he said. "Do they put men of your stamp into such positions as this?"

"Men of stamp have few claims which the world is bound to respect," I answered, gruffly. "You are here to see the mine be kind enough to follow me."

"My father will have more than enough to do to guide his own steps," said Eve, coming to my side and quietly placing her hand on my arm. "I must trust to your gallantry, Mr. Wallace."

I made no reply, but wondered if, woman as she was, she had no far away hint of the raise of, that sledge-hammer beating of my heart under her round arm.

We remained in the galleries two hours—more than twice as long as was necessary to their thorough inspection. The old man was growing impatient, but the gloomy pits and chambers seemed to have an unaccountable fascination to Eve Guion. She loitered on one pretext or another, until I began to fear that I must have betrayed my identity to her quick eye.

Her face had grown strangely sad and anxious. I saw, too, that when she thought herself unobserved she watched my face intently. Had she detected me and was she seeking an opportunity of making her discovery known without betraying me to her father?

I determined that she should not accomplish her design. I knew very well that I should lose my self control and all of my love, bitterness and despair would burst out in a torrent.

I therefore was careful to avoid being alone with her for a moment. And I soon saw that I had guessed aright. She was endeavoring to separate me from her father that she might speak to me.

But I foiled her quietly but skillfully, and after the galleries had been explored twice over and there was no longer the shadow of a pretext for remaining, she finally prepared to depart.

As we entered the upper level we passed the dark opening of a disused chamber, which I had deemed unsafe to be visited.

Eve's eye caught sight of it.

"Here is a chamber we have not seen," she said.

"No, madame," I interposed. "It is no longer worked. The water has broken into it twice, and it is considered dangerous."

"I mean to see it, at all events," she replied. "Father, wait for us here. Mr. Wallace will not refuse to guide me, I am sure."

She cast a strange, significant look at me, which said almost as plainly as words:

"I know you Wallace Grover, and I mean to speak to you in spite of your caution."

Then she entered the chamber.

But she had miscalculated my tact. I turned to her father and requested him to enter with me in order to dissuade her from the rash adventure, and we followed her together. She gave me a reproachful look as we entered, and I heard her sigh.

The moment I put my foot in the chamber, my senses, trained by long experience to note the varying phenomena of the under world, detected a hint of the coming danger.

There was a faint rumbling in the bowels of the earth. The air was close, and had a taint of electricity in it similar to that which precedes a thunderstorm. There was surely peril in the mine, but how and whence it would come I could not guess.

As I turned to urge my visitor to a hasty retreat I caught sight of some small fragments of wet earth dropping from the wall near at hand, followed by a jet of water. Then I knew what was coming.

"Out! out for your lives!" I cried, springing toward the wall. "The water is bursting into the mine. Ring for the cage and give the alarm!"

The old man needed no second warning. With a cry of terror he sprang out of the chamber, and the next moment I heard him give the alarm. Then followed the shouts and trampling of the escaping men. I knew if I could hold the water in check for ten minutes I could save the lives of every one of them. As for my own—well, one life, and that a useless one, seemed a good exchange for a hundred fathers of families.

When I first saw it the jet was no larger than a man's finger; but in a moment it had enlarged to the size of my arm, and a heavy stream of water began to pour into the chamber.

There was no apparatus at hand, neither clay nor sand-bags to check it, as I well knew.

A happy inspiration came to me. With a Titanic effort I managed to thrust my arm into the fissure, and for the time being I succeeded in checking the leak.

Then, with my arm in the wall, I turned half around toward the opening in the chamber, and there, to my horror, still stood Eve Guion. I saw that her face was very pale, but firm and self-possessed.

"What are you doing here?" I cried. "This place will be full of water in five minutes."

"What are you doing here?" she asked quietly.

"My duty," I replied. "I am trying to hold this stream in check until the men escape."

"Then you will be drowned," she exclaimed.

"What of that? Better one than a hundred. But go," I entreated. "I tell you you have only a bare chance to get out as it is. The water is pressing harder every moment. It will soon be too much for my strength."

"Then I will stay and help you, Wallace," she said, in a strangely gentle voice.

"Ah, you know me!" I cried.

"I have known you from the moment I entered the mine. I came here to see you."

"To taunt me with my poverty!" I cried. "When your father turned me away from your doors, when I became outcast and wrecked, I thought I had the right to hide my misfortunes from your eyes."

"It is because my father used you so cruelly that I am here," she said. "I was not to blame, Wallace. I knew nothing of it until you were gone. Since then I have tried to learn of your whereabouts in order to let you understand my feelings. It was only yesterday that I heard of John Wallace in the Maberly mine, and on the bare chance of identifying him with Wallace Grover, I influenced my father to bring me here."

"Well," said I, sorrowfully, "it is too late to think of the past now. Go, Eve. Go and keep poor John Wallace's secret. It will soon be over with him."

"You persist in remaining here?" she said.

"I must," I said. "I should be a coward and a wretch to desert my post now."

"Then," she replied, very quietly, "I will stay with you."

"Why?" I asked, amazedly. "Are you jesting with me?"

"Can I jest with death, Wallace, or—love?"

Then, before I could comprehend her words, she came to my side, and I stood with my wrist in the wall, and putting her arm around my neck drew my cheek down upon hers."

"It is hard to die so young, Wallace," she said, sweetly, "but it would be harder to live without you. In the hour of death, my dear, we can dispense with false delicacy. I know that you have loved me many years, and I have returned your love. If we have met again only to die, death at least cannot separate us."

With death staring me in the face—not five minutes off—I have never known a happier moment in my life.

As I stood there, with my arm in the fissure, with the blood surging into my head, and all my muscles straining with the effort to keep my position, I knew nothing more than that I felt the heart of the woman I loved beating against my own, her warm young cheek touching my cold one in the embrace of love and death.

Then consciousness of her position rushed upon me again.

"No, no!" I cried. "You must not die. Go live, my darling—live until it comes your time to meet me in the other world, where I shall be before you. Go, and believe no man ever met death so gloriously as I shall."

"We go out together or we die together," she said, firmly. "Speak of it no more."

Then a solemn silence fell upon us. The men must have nearly all escaped, as I could tell by their distant shouts.

The earth was breaking away around my arm, and the water was already nearly two feet deep upon the floor of the chamber. I could hear the subterranean stream roaring more threateningly in the bowels of the mine. Another pound of pressure, and I should be flung down and the chamber would fill.

Then came a great desire for life. How could I bear to have my new found joy so suddenly smothered in the ground? Was there not yet one hope?

The sounds of the escaping men had ceased. If we could get the cage down once more in time, we might perhaps escape after all. I explained my hope to Eve.

"Run," said I, "ring for the cage. I will hold on here a moment more. If we can reach it we are safe."

Eve looked at me sharply an instant—she feared I meant to deceive her into escaping while I remained behind; but she divined my intention.

With a quick movement she seized the light, lifted her skirts and ran through the water out of the chamber. The next thirty seconds seemed like hours.

I desperately held my own against the water, while every vein seemed bursting with the strain. I heard the bell ring for the cage, heard it slowly descend; then the water overcame me.

I was flung down as by a giant's hand. There was a roar and rush as of a Niagara, and, with a whirl of lights and faces, a chaos of confusion and terror, I knew no more.

When I slowly struggled back to life, after many days, I was far from the Maberly mine. I was no longer John Wallace, gang master, but Wallace Grover, gentleman. I was in my father's house.
